LIBRARY NOTES

The circulation of books for the month of October was more than double that for the month of September. More than nine hundred books were used by the students. Of this number books of literature led all the other classes with a total circulation of nearly three hundred, while books of travel stood at the bottom of the list. The average circulation for each day the library was open was almost thirty-six.

Within the past two weeks many interesting titles have been catalogued and added to the library shelves. Perhaps the most interesting is Erich Maria Remarque's book "All Quiet On the Western Front."

Remarque himself was a soldier in the Germany army and this book written in an autobiographical style may well have embodied some of his own experiences. First published in Germany in January, 1929, it was quickly translated into French and English and has consistently been a best seller in Germany, France, England and the United Stated.

It is raw story of friendship, suffering and life in the Germany army. Paul Baumer, entering the army as a volunteer at the age of eighteen, straight from school at the urging of the schoolmaster. With him are his schoolmates, little Albert Kropp; Muller, still dreamingg of his text-books in the front lines; and Leer, the lustful. They have their friends: Tjaden, a locksmith—skinny but varocious; Hale Westhus, a peat-digger, with enormous hands; Detering, a peasant, dreaming of his farm-yard, his wife, and his orchard in bloom, feeling so great a compassion for wounded horses, though unmoved by wounded men, cursed war that should employ horses to be used where they would be so defenseless; and Katczinsky, with an uncanny ability to uncover extra provisions where there seems to be nothing but barren ground with "a remarkable nose for dirty weather, good food, and soft jobs." One by one these comrades suffer the fortuntes of war and life becomes intolerable. This gripping book has only to be read to make anyone a convert to the abolition of war.

Other titles added include the following:

Brevier—Brief Greek Syntax.

Lysias. These two being gifts from Dr. Seeger.

Edmunds — The Music-Makers, a novel. A gift from Lieut. Taylor.

Phillips—Types of Dramatic Composition.

Lewis—Francois Villon. A Literary Guild selection.

Pankhurst — Seeing the Future, a book concerning the second advent. A gift from Dr. Brimm.

Clapp—Introduction To Education.

Stieglitz—Chemistry in Medicine.

Hutchins—Guide To the Use of Libraries.

Cordell — Representative Modern Plays.

New International Year Book, 1928.

Gerould—The Pact of Paris.

Report of the President of the New York Stock Exchange.

Brailsford — Shelly, Godwin and Their Circle.

The following books were placed in the library by the International Relations club. They are gifts of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace:

Geneva Institute of International Relations—Problems of Peace.

Fosdick—The Old Savage in the New Civilization.

Lorwin — Labor and Internationalism.

Hill—The Public International Conference.

"Mom," said little Willie, bursting into the house all out of breath, "there's going to be trouble down at the druggist's. His wife has got a baby girl and he's had a 'Boy Wanted' sign in his window for a week."—Grinnell Malteaser.

"Is that girl a gold-digger?"

"No, I think she's crying about something else."

Poor ole Phil, he's getting Phoebe-minded again.

EXCHANGE

The Johnsonian states that hilarious joy ruled supreme on the Winthrop campus recently when a Citadel bus broke down in front of the campus. The "precious" cargo of gray-clad cadets received a hearty welcome into the Winthrop parlors and—well you can guess what a big time! Now, we don't know the nature of the trouble that caused the bus to stop, but if it was a puncture we are willing to hazard the guess that some of the Winthrop girls knew of its coming and scattered tacks in the road. And in that case it was no crime. In fact, if a Winthrop bus ever comes by here we may try the same trick!

Sportsmanship At Yale-Georgia Game

"Not only was the Yale-Georgia game probably the most colorful ever played under Southern skies but it also was notable for the sportsmanship exhibited by both teams and by the supporters of the rival elevens. Of course, the Georgia student body simply was "crazy" with joy and delight at the unexpected victory but the boys indulged in no kidding nor taunting remarks. Georgia good manners and hospitality sanctions no such action. The finest traditions of the South and East were lived up to.—Clemson Tiger.

Please Remit

Dear Pa,

It seems like every time it comes your turn for a letter it's time for me to ask you to send some money. It takes money to live in college same as anywhere else. We learned about Benjamin Franklin and thrift, but you can't be thrifty if you ain't got anything to save.—Johnsonian.

What's Her Phone Number?

An Argument between three girls was found quite amusing. Two of the group were having quite a bit of fun out of one girl, who declared she had never kissed but two boys in her life; and furthermore, she had kissed only one boy in four years—"but I kiss him every time I see him," she said. "I guess that makes up for all those I do not kiss." She was pronounced by the other girls as being the original innocent girl.

One girl declared that a girl should have five dates with a boy before she kissed him, while another girl saw no reason why she couldn't kiss her boy friends on their second date.—"Clipped."

let someone come out with something that is not quite ethical and I tell him just what kind of a guy he is.

As soon as I get out of class, I go up the street, sit down on the edge, and let everybody walk around my feet so they will be sure not to miss such a trent. I know that a lot of people do not like to see me and my display, but I do it any way. Nobody can tell me what to do.—Auburn Plainsman.

Sophs Put Over Good 'Y' Session

The Y. M. C. A. had an excellent program at their meeting last Wednesday evening. The sophomores were in charge of the proceedings, with H. H. Welch acting as chairman.

The speaker on the program was L. C. Jackson. He gave a fine resume of the history and development of the Y. M. C. A. movement from its birth until the present day. The talk showed thorough preparation and was interesting and informational throughout. Jackson was followed by Bill Senter, who outlined the methods used by the organization, and the way in which it divides its work. He gave a comprehensive word-picture of the departments into which the "Y" is divided. Bob Gillespie gave the final speech of the evening. He spoke of the "Y" at Presbyterian college. In a few brief minutes he presented the whole subject in a clear, and inspirational way. He told especially of the purpose of the Y. M. C. A. and the value it has to the student body. Bob called the attention of the group to the actual words represented by the letters "Y. M. C. A." in a thought-provoking manner.

I. R. C. Hears About Mexico

The International Relations club held an interesting and instructive meeting on Thursday evening. E. E. Wade was the chief speaker. His topic was Mexico. Wade spoke of the present-day conditions of life for the various classes in Mexico. He then outlined the educational system, pointing out [illegible] and Jefferson. He [illegible] I. Copeland, G. K. Smith, and J. S. Dendy. These men have all shown ability to write as well as interest in literature and things literary. The club feels confident that they will work well with the group for the best interests of Sigma Upsilon at Presbyterian college.

Sigma Upsilon Calls New Men

The chapter of Sigma Upsilon, national honorary literary fraternity, held a short business meeting on Thursday evening. Six new men were passed by the club. Initiation will take place as soon as returns have been received from the bids, or as soon thereafter as is practicable.

The men elected were: T. G. Ellis, L. R. Williamson, O. W. Chapin, J. I. Copeland, G. K. Smith, and J. S. Dendy. These men have all shown ability to write as well as interest in literature and things literary. The club feels confident that they will work well with the group for the best interests of Sigma Upsilon at Presbyterian college.

at one time was Julia Marlowe's leading man.

In 1917 Mr. Lewis appeared as Jether in Morris Gest's production of "The Wanderer," at the Manhatthan theatre in New York, a part which he played for four consecutive seasons. In 1922 he played Horatio in "Hamlet" with John Barrymore, and in 1923 toured with Sothern and Julia Marlowe in repertoire. Later he played Joseph Surface in Mrs. Samuel Insull's production of "The School of Scandal"; Louis XV in "Madame Pompadour"; nad Sir William Hamilton in "Fire Emma," the story of Admiral Nelson and Lady Hamilton. And that is enumerating but a few of his successes. The cast that supports Mr. Lewis are actors who for many years have been identified with the very best in the American theatre.

The stage settings are executed by Don Carlos DuBois furnishing a background unsurpassed by any preceding Shakespearean production. The costumes are furnished by two well-known theatrical supply houses. These and the stage settings, lighting fixtures and every prop necessary for a complete performance are being transported by a specially designed truck. The players, 16 in number, travel in automobiles.

Government Man Talks On Alaska

William Scaife, a native of Laurens county, and a member of the Government Coast and Geodetic Survey, recently on service in Alaska, spoke before the student body last Tuesday. This was the second of the series that has been planned by the faculty for the college year, the first being the talk on Mesopotamia made last week by Dr. Lingle of Davidson college.

Mr. Scaife, with a decade of service in Alaska and Alaskan waters, presented a most interesting summary of affairs in the most northern of American possessions. History, geography, and topography combined to make the hour instructive as well as fascinating. Mr. Scaife added a number of anecdotes from personal experience. These, humorous and gripping as they were, added to the delightfulness of the talk.

SPRINGS POOL NOW FINISHED

ets for non-student swimming enthusiasts are now on sale at the business manager's office. The price is six dollars. All outsiders, as well as P. C. men who use the pool on these days, will be required to wear wool bathing suits. These must be inspected by the life guards before entering the pool.

Except on Sundays, the pool will be open to students daily from 3 p. m. until 8:30 p. m. Whitsett and J. B. Copeland, the life guards, will be on duty at these hours. All men are required to bathe in the gymnasium showers, communicating with the pool, before entering. Wool bathing suits are required on days when the natatorium is open to the public. There will be no diving from the balcony. That is the place designated for spectators, and all spectors are expected remain there while in the building.

Attention is called to the allotment of shower facilities. The showers for ladies are located in the room immediately on the right as one enters the building by the front entrance. Students and outside men, will take their showers in the large shower room in the gym, immediately to the rear of the varsity football dressing room.

All users of the pool are urged to cooperate with the authorities in enforcing the regulations and preserving the pool in its present excellent condition.

DEBT CAMPAIGN OPENS SUNDAY

cobs, this will be an organized, personal effort campaign. All prospects will be seen personally, and there will be no special collections or offerings at church services except where the church quota has been closely approached or exceeded, and a small sum is needed for "clean up" purposes.

Every church is striving to reach its goal in time for the first report on Tuesday at noon. President John McSween has urged that a minimum of half the goal be reported by that time.

The second report of progress is scheduled for Friday, November 15, and the third report for Tuesday, the 19th.

Leaders point out that liquidation of the debt will deliver the college from life-sapping interest payments, will deliver the Synod from burdensome emergency contributions for operating expenses, will assure the college receipt of $148,000 in conditional endowment gifts, and will insure the college retaining its membership in the Southern Association of Colleges.

ARRANGE JOINT SYNOD SESSION

Presbyterian college, as moderator of the South Carolina synod, will preside over the sessions of his body, and Rev. B. P. McGeachy, D. D., of Decatur, Ga., moderator of the Georgia synod, will preside over the sessions of that organization. Rev. H. Waddell Pratt of Columbia, is stated clerk of the South Carolina synod and Rev. A. L. P. C. SWAMPS ERSKINE jority came the expectation of seeing the Blue Stockings licked, but from the first kickoff, when Reid, star Erskine back, let the oval slip from his hands and a P. C. man recovered it on the 22-yard line, the Blue Stockings had the better of the fray. An exchange of punts, another fumble and O. Dunlap passed to Bennett on Erskine's one-yard line from where P. C. carried it over.

The Seceders' only touchdown came in the first quarter. Parkinson punted and Erskine recovered on its own 50-yard line. From this point the A. R. P.'s opened up with their passing, carrying the ball over on successive passes from Reid to Parkinson.

Erskine never threatened again and the P. C. line and backs seemed to grow stronger. Dunlap caught a short Erskine punt and ran through the entire Erskine team for a touchdown. On another exchange of punts, Green, P. C. quarterback, grabbed the ball on his own 20-yard line and ran the length of the field for the third P. C. score, the Blue Stockings again failing to kick the point after touchdown.

Reid, Erskine quarterback, was carried from the game in the second period with a leg injury. Physicians stated that he will likely be out for the rest of the season. Green and Galloway lived up to expectations.

Green passed, ran, and punted in stellar fashion. Erskine's passing trio, Reid, Parkinson and Hambright, were covered during the whole game and they got little yardage.

The Presbyterians scored early in the first quarter when an Erskine punt from the 18-yard line rolled back to the Seceders' 25. A pass, Dunlap to Bennett, placed the ball on the 1-yard line. Galloway went through the line for touchdown. Attempted pass for extra point failed. Score, P. C. 6, Erskine 0. Erskine scored their lone touchdown soon after P. C. kicked off. A long pass, Reid to Parkinson, was good for 32 yards and placed the ball on P. C.'s 15-yard line. Reid passed to Parkinson over the goal line for a touchdown. Reid kicked point. Score, P. C. 6, Erskine 7.

Dunlap caught an Erskine punt and ran 30 yards for touchdown, after the Seceders had failed to gain through the P. C. line following the kick-off. Try for point failed. Score, P. C. 12, Erskine 7. Reid, Erskine quarter, was hurt on the play.

P. C. kicked off. The Seceders were unable to gain and punted. Green received on his own 25 yard line and ran through the entire Erskine team for the third Blue Sock touchdown. Dunlap carried the ball over for extra point. Score, P. C. 19, Erskine 7.

Lynn recovered the fumbled kick-off on the Seceders' 48-yard line. A series of line plunges by Dunlap and Young and two penalties for off-sides placed the ball on the Erskine 21-yard line. Dunlap passed to Green for five yards. Galloway carried the pigskin across for touchdown. Try for point failed. Score, P. C. 25, Erskine 7.

Erskine resorted to passes but few were completed. The half ended with the ball on the Erskine 25-yard line in P. C.'s' possession.

Erskine kicked off to Ritchie on P. C.'s 20-yard line. Green punted to Erskine's 25-yard line. A series of line plunges by Parkinson failed to gain and Parkinson punted to the P. C. 44-yard line. Galloway carried the ball 38 yards by a series of line plunges. Ball on Erskine's 18-yard line. After Green gained through the line Dunlap passed to Bennett for 16 yards and a touchdown. Dunlap went through the line for extra point. Score, P. C. 32, Erskine 7.

The third quarter ended without any further scoring. The ball was on the Erskine 25-yard line in Erskine's possession.

Both teams used their aerial attack and seldom resorted to line plunges. Early in the fourth quarter Dunlap intercepted an Erskine pass and ran 20 yards for a touchdown. He failed to go through the line for the extra point. Score, P. C. 38, Erskine 7.

Coach Johnson sent in a large number of subs during the latter part of the fourth quarter and after two successive first downs Bernie Dunlap carried the ball over for the final P. C. touchdown. Try for point failed.

The game ended with the ball on Erskine's 45-yard line in possession of the Blue Socks.

COLLEGE ANNUAL EDITORS HOLD FIRST MEETING HERE

Year Bcok Heads of South Carolina Invited By PaC-SaC To Form State Organization. Sessions Began Thursday. Enjoyable Entertainment Features.

College annual editors of South Carolina will hold yearly meetings, according to an announcement made after the first conclave of the delegates to the editors' convention yesterday morning. The gathering, called by Editor Fant H. Thomey of the PaC-SaC (Presbyterian college), convened in Clinton on Thursday afternoon, November 14th, to answer a crying need for cooperation on the part of year-book editors of the state.

The movement for such a gathering was instigated several weeks ago. It was a timely gesture for eighteen annual skippers were just beginning to face and realize the magnitude of the task before them. As a result, the response was unanimous. Delegates representing every college in the state came together at Presbyterian college to perfect an organization that is to serve the best interests of their publications and institutions.

Thursday's part of the program was devoted entirely to the social element. Business, important as it was, was shelved in order to give the young ladies and young men an opportunity to become friends. At three o'clock the

Students Cavort In Springs Pool

Swimmers may now swim to their heart's content. The new pool was opened for students' use last Monday at three o'clock. Since that time large numbers of men have been swimming, diving, and playing about with great enjoyment. The water is fine; the diving board is excellent; the pool is all that a pool should be.

Formal dedication will take place on Home-coming day, which is Thanksgiving day this year. The outline of proceedure has not yet been drawn up, but it is certain that the ceremony will be impressive and suitable to the occasion. A crowd of alumni will be on the campus to witness the dedication.

The pool is open to students every week day from three till eight-thirty in the evening, and until nine o'clock on Tuesdays and Fridays. On these two days, the pool is also open to the use of outsiders and faculty members and their families. All who use the natatorium on Tuesdays and Fridays are required to wear wool bathing suits unless otherwise directed.

As yet no season tickets have been sold to outside patrons, it is laerned from the business manager. They are now on sale at the business office at the price of six dollars. Town folks who desire to use the pool are urged to get their tickets as soon as possible in order to get their full money's worth.

16 CHURCHES GO "OVER TOP"

One-Third of Goal Is Reached As Second Reports Come In. 158 Out of 272 Give Returns.

Scattering reports in the program of deliverance last night brought the total up to near the one-third mark.

The first report last Tuesday had shown $90,000 raised in the $350,000 campaign.

To date reports have been received from 158 of the 272 churches in the synod. Thus 114 of the churches have reported as to what progress has been made in their part of the campaign.

Sixteen churches now have reached or exceeded thier goals. The four additional "over the top" churches are Simpsonville, in Enoree presbytery; Whitmire, in South Carolina presbytery; Latta and Myrtle Beach in Pee Dee presbytery.

The first reports in the Presbyterian college program of deliverance were received last Tuesday, November 12, and totaled $90,000.

The third report is scheduled for Tuesday, November 19.

Only 119 of the 272 churches in the synod, or 44 per cent, were represented in the first report.

Twelve of the churches, however, exceeded their goals on the first report. These "over the top" churches include: Pendleton and Central (S. C.), in Piedmont presbytery; Batesburg-Leesville and Trenton, in Congaree presbytery; Welford and Cane Creek, in Enoree presbytery; Great Falls (first over the top), in Bethel presbytery; Kentyre, Pee Dee, Marion, Reedy River and Ruby, in Pee Dee presbytery.

HOME-COMING

The prodigal son kept pigs for quite a spell. He ate dried "shucks" when they came too close to the husks, just in the same way in which a dog growls when someone comes too close to his cherished bone. Husks for breakfast, dinner and supper—well, it was a hard life. Then he came to himself and went home. That was the first Home-coming day.

The Fatted Calf

Prodigal, Jr., had a pretty soft time of it after that. Old man Prodigal called out all the hired help, lassoed "Fatty" the pet calf, and put on the big pot and the little pot. It was a hot experience for "Fatsy." And it was a big moment for young Prodigal, too. He went up the front steps for the first time in months, slicked down his hair, climbed into his "soup and fish," turned up the Listerine bottle, and tripped merrily down again. After dinner (and what a dinner!) the Old Man presented him with a ticket (on the fifty-yard line) to the annual spear-throwing contest. Young Prodigal thought it was a pretty good idea, this home-coming stuff.

Prodigal Up-to-date

It is still a great idea. Today the boys don't go out and tends the pigs so much; but they try to sell insurance or teach school, either of which, from all reports, is nearly as bad. And there isn't any fatted calf running around loose. Those days are over. Nowadays the Old Man, or rather old Lady, Alma Mater, calls up the butcher and the baker and the confectioner and tells them to send out a lot of good stuff, pronto. She then stews up a fine menu, and everyone puts on the "dog" in honor of the long-lost son.

It's the Same Thing

The details have changed a little with the passing years, but the story is essentially the same. President on college, acting the part of Mrs. Prodigal, [illegible] for four years. She then gives them their share of worldly goods, maybe as she is able, puts them on the train, and dispatches them into the big old hungry world. They go off light-heartedly, but the hard realities are not long in coming. Their pockets are graven on her heart. She glows with pride when she hears fine things about her sons.

Loving Hope

Every year she sets aside a day for the returning boys. They can't all come back, of course, but she is always waiting with a big dinner and open arms. She shows them the new stadium, and the new white-wash on the old barn. The home-stead has had a lot of improvements, and the mortgage has been raised. She is proud to have them home again, and all the remaining sons are eager to shake their hands again and ask what has happened since the time when—.

Turkey Day This Year

Thanksgiving is the big day this year. P. C. is preparing to welcome some all the alumni. It will be a gala affair. The new swimming pool will be dedicated, the eats will be spread, and then everyone will adjourn to the fifty-yard line at Johnson field to see what the Blue Hose can do with Newberry's Indians.

Just To the Alumni

You are the honor guests. If someone were giving a banquet in your honor you wouldn't think of being absent. Socially, it just isn't done; even in the best of families. When folks ask you to come and be the whole show at a dinner party, you cancel all out-of-town engagements and toddle over to give 'em a treat.

Well, that's just what P. C. is doing on November twenty-eighth, only it's more than just a banquet. For one day the campus will be yours. Once more you can stroll among its stately trees and bring back the tender memories of days that are past—treasured days of companionship. And you will see all the fellows, too—the boys you used to gripe at, and fight with, and love. More than that, you will see the boys who are now carrying on the work of making P. C. a finer college. You will get to meet the football boys you have been reading about, and then you will see them in action. You will see all your professors—the men who taught you and have faith in you.

Look At It This Way

You in a way, you alumni are obligated to come to Clinton on Thanksgiving day. But don't think of it in that light. Obligation is a small thing compared to love. The big reason why we know you will be here, is that, like all P. C. men, you love the college. We feel sure that you will be here on Home-coming day because we believe your love for Presbyterian college is such that a year, or two years, or ten years, or half a century cannot destroy it.

Presbyterian college is looking at you. You are not forgotten. You are still one of the "gang." Come home Turkey day and we'll beat those Indians for you. Just see if we don't.

And Now the Campaign

That crack about the mortgage being raised wasn't just a figure of speech. To be sure, it isn't all raised yet; but the work will be finished next week and by that time it will be raised. The campaign has been progressing for a number of weeks. Thirteen hundred friends of P. C. have been organizing and preparing for the intensive canvassing that is now going on. They will not fail. The money will be contributed. P. C. will be out of debt by this time next week.

Get On the Band Wagon

A new day is dawning for Presbyterian. With the debt wiped out, the new swimming pool opened; with spirit running high both outside and inside the college; with prospects for increasingly large freshman classes—well, you can see for ourself that things are picking up. Get on the band wagon. Go up with us. Join the parade. You stuck by the college in darker ages—now come along with us and see the dawn.

Home-coming day is your chance. Don't be content with hearing about these things; come and see for yourself. Let us share with you this new spirit. It is even greater than the "P. C. spirit" of yesterday; and that was enough to bring attention to the college. Boys, you don't want to bring yet!

On the Gridiron

The football team is in the best shape it's been in this season. Those bone-crushing games with Furman, Carolina, and Citadel are behind. Cuts and bruises have largely healed. The boys are working out with plenty of pep and snap. Next week they're going up into North Carolina to give the Deacons of Wake Forest a dose of bad medicine, and then they'll lie in wait for the Indians.

The Indians, too, are burnishing their tomahawks for the great battle. They want to beat P. C. just as badly as P. C. wants to beat them. A great game is all that can result from the meeting of two teams that are out for blood.

You know the reputation of the annual P. C.-Newberry games. You know that both teams are always on edge. You know they always put up a great fight, no matter what the sports writers say before the game. It's going to be nip and tuck—one of those thrilling things you can't afford to miss.

Get Your Tickets Now

If you want a good seat you'd better get it now. Send in your money to Lonnie McMillian and he'll mail you a ticket, or tickets, the same day. Many men have already secured their's, so there's no time to lose. Get out the old fountain pen and whittle out a check for one dollar and sixty-five cents—that's all it costs to see the big Thanksgiving game. You can get a good seat now. Later you may not be as lucky.

Don'ts

Don't waste your time on "forbidden," stay at home and yo-yo. It is more interesting.

Don't waste money buying funny papers—just look in the mirror.

Don't scold a policeman—it might hurt his feelings.

Poor Girls!

A recent ruling at Clemson college has ordered that none of Clemson's student body can get on the road and hitch-hike in any manner. Such a ruling at Mercer surely would be hard on the Wesleyan, Bessie Tift and G. S. C. W. girls.—Mercer Cluster.

Scholastic Grades Modern Dunce Cap, Rogers States

Scholastic grades, as applied in the educational system of America, were declared to be merely a substitute for the dunce cap and the whip, by Dr. Frederick Rand Rogers, of New York city, in addressing 5,000 Utah educators recently.

Colleges, he said, "worshipped marks" but he added that an A. B. degree merely indicated that the student had agreed with his professors during his four years at school. Grades make a battlefield of the classroom, he said, and are a "disgrace to scientific education and must be done away with."—Parley Voo.

Coaches Paid Large Salaries

New York.—That the average football coach in American colleges and universities receives a salary of $6,107 a year, or more than a thousand dollars more than th caverage highest paid professor, was one of the discoveries made by the Carnegie Foundation in its recent investigation of college athletics.

When paid by the Athletic associations, the full-time head football coach averages $6,468 a year, and when paid by colleges themselves, $5,058, or $100 less than the average salary of the highest paid professor — Auburn Plainsman.

Drinking No Longer Chic?

Just as the nation is discussing the Volstead act and as our modern campuses are at a loss over what to do with the liquor situation, there comes a ray of hope from Virginia students.

"From the ultra modern campus comes whisperings of a new vogue. The very young generation has placed a taboo on promiscuous drinking. The undergraduates of Princeton, Harvard and Brown no longer consider it a social obligation to serve the old time brace of liqueurs; in fact, to do so is no lonnger chic. The cocktail book has been placed on the shelf along with the so-called necking complex of bygone days.—Citadel Bull Dog.

GALLOWAY - HALFBACK

OREL DUNLAP

Galloway, left, found himself last Friday in the Erskine game and scored twice on beautiful runs before he was injured and removed from the game. He will not be able to play against Wake Forest, but should be back in the line-up for the Newberry contest on Turkey day. Dunlap, right, made two touchdowns in the Erskine affair and bucked the line for two extra points. He is remembered for the beautiful run which beat Mercer, and for the fine passing he has been doing all season. Fans will se him in action in Clinton on Thanksgiving day.

FIRST YEAR MEN EASILY BEAT N. C. PRESBYTERIAN JUNIORS

The Baby Blue Hose crushed the heavy and powerful Presbyterian Junior college eleven of Maxton, N. C., here yesterday afternoon by a score of 52 to 0. The Juniors were favorites with all who saw them before the game because of their weight and number, but on the field the idea was quickly changed, as they showed inexperience and lack of unity throughout the entire contest.

The North Carolina outfit fought desperately all the way and never let up even for injuries which were numerous, but they just didn't have the punch and steady drive that the homelings had. Although the Hosemen never had their entire first string in the game as a body, the offense was functioning to perfection. The Hose rolled up twenty-one first downs to the visitors five, and had a total gain of 665 yards to the Juniors 149. However, they lost thirty-one yards from scrimmage and were set back a total of sixty-five yards on penalties, while the visitors did not receive a penalty, and only lost 29 yards on offense. Most of the Frosh's eight touchdowns came on long drives down the field aided by spectacular passes. They made 212 yards through the line and completed nine out of fifteen passes for a net gain of 126 yards. The Calvinist Juniors only had the ball in P. C. territory once. That was on the final play of the game, when a pass from Ferguson to Hawkins was good for twenty-four yards, to place the ball on the Hose's thirty-five yard line.

The first touchdown of the game came in the early moments. After an exchange of punts, which put the ball in the Rats' possession on their own 33 yard line. Then followed a march straight down the field for a counter This was featured by long runs by Stamps, Perrin and Odiorne, finally placing the ball on the 10-yard stripe. Stamps then went over tackle for three yards. Perrin added six six more arounnd the left flank. Watson then plunged the remaining thirty-six inches over right tackle. A pass from Stamps to Odiorne was good for the extra point.

The visitors chose to kick off and did not get their hands on the ball again until the Frosh had pushed over another marker. Stamps returned the kick-off 28 yards to the 40-yard mark. After gaining some ground and losing some, Odiorne punted to Sanlin on his own 15 yard line. Sanlin touched the ball, but did not catch it, and Nettles recovered on the Juniors' 17-yard line. Perrin went around end for four yards. Then Stamps failed at the line. On the next play, a pass from Stamps to E. Graham was good for 13 yards and a touchdown. Then, to make things more certain, Stamps passed to Graham again for the extra point. In the second quarter, the Hose only scored once, but after that it seemed that every time they got their hands on the ball, they would start a long drive down the field for another marker. As a total, Stamps, Perrin and Watson accounted for two touchdowns apiece, while E. Graham and Odiorne were responsible for one each. Adams kicked for the extra point twice and Stamps passed over twice.

For the visitors, Black and Brown featured in the line, with Hawkins, Ferguson and Sanlin bearing the brunt of the burden in the backfield. For the Blue Hose, the stars were too numerous to mention, but of the outstanding men we might mention E. Graham, Ewing and Elliott in the line, and Stamps, Adams and Watson in the backfield.

JIMMY GREEN

BOB RITCHIE - HALFBACK

Green, left, and Ritchie, right, are two sprinters who have been taking their workouts on the football field again. Both are phenomenal pass receivers and furnish many real thrills for the stands. Jimmy Green is one of the best-known backs in the state. He scored twice on Lenoir-Rhyne this year, returned a kick-off for a touchdown in the Wofford game, and a punt for the same end in the Erskine contest. He ran fifty-yards through the entire Citadel team only to be robbed of his score over a disputed out-of-bounds footprint.

Shakespeare Play Comes Tonight

"The Merchant of Venice" will be presented tonight at the Thornwell orphanage chapel by the Avon Players, a troupe of actors who have been touring this section of the country, giving performances at all the leading colleges and in many of the larger towns. Mr. Frederick C. Lewis, well-known player, will interpret the part of Shylock. The group of 16, which comprise the cast, are making their trips by automobile.

The Avon players have recently given performances of "The Merchant of Venice" in several nearby colleges and towns. They have been popularly received everywhere, and have achieved an enviable reputation. They are scheduled to appear soon in Spartanburg and at Winthrop college, Rock Hill, S. C.

This feature is one which no student can afford to miss. It is seldom that South Carolina students have an opportunity to see Shakespeare's plays, and it is just as rare that such a distinguished trope appears in the smaller towns of the state. It will be an entertaining evening.

The performance is sponsored by the PaC-SaC. Profits accruing from the play will be turned over to the year-book to help defray expenses this year. The admission price is seventy-five cents for students and $1.50 for town people.

COLLEGE ANNUAL EDITORS MEET HERE

group attended the football game in Bailey Memorial stadium, between the Blue Sox and Presbyterian Junior college, of Maxton, N. C. Dinner was served in Judd hall at six-thirty, with the jazzy Blue Stocking orchestra furnishing musical entertainment for the honored guests.

In the evening the scene was removed to President McSween's home for the opening reception. In the receiving line were Mr. ad Mrs. John McSween, Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Spencer, Dr. D. J. Brimm and Professor H. T. Swedenburg, faculty advisors of the PaC-SaC, and Editor Fant Thornley. Refreshments were served and the hour was devoted to conversational ice-breaking. The crowd was well entertained and everyone felt at ease and at home before the reception broke up at ten o'clock.

The proceedings for the evening were continued in the Kappa Alpha and Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity rooms, where a delightful party was held. The two host fraternities, together with the officers of the PaC-SaC, outdid themselves to provide excellent entertainment for everyone. The feature of the evning was a short series of humorous and serious readings, given by Mr. O'Brien, editor of the 1928-1929 Sphinx, annual of The Citadel, Charleston.

Business first received attention on Friday morning. At nine o'clock the convention was called in the reading room of the library. Mr. Thornley made a short speech in which he welcomed the delegates to P. C. and outlined his purpose in calling the meeting. As previously stated in the letters sent out to the various publications, the purpose of the convention is four-fold:

1. To perfect an organization, elect officers, and appoint necessary committees.

2. To adopt principle and regulations for dates of meetings, etc.

3. To discuss individually the various problems which face annual editors.

4. To draw it together social'y.

At ten o'clock the meeting was addressed by Dr. F. D. Jones, of the Presbyterian college faculty, who spoke on "Taste and Its Relation To College Annuals." Dr. Jones spoke of the year-book editor's opportunity to get away from the conventional in publishing his volume. He reminded the delegates that their's was the most lasting of all college publications, urging them to do their utmost to put out a book that will be an object of pride to the institution and to the families of students.

After considerable discussion of the problem of an organization, it was decided that the annual editors should perfect one of their own, separate and distinct from the existing College Press association. A committee of Miss Seay (College of Charleston), Mr. Barber (Furman), Miss Quinn (Limestone, Mr. Stokes (Wofford), and Mr. Thornley (P. C.), was appointed to draw up preliminary resolutions. This committee met early in the afternoon and submitted their suggestions to the main body.

At 2:00 p. m. the delegates again gathered in the reading room of the library where they were addressed by J. F. Jacobs, Sr. Following this talk the entire convention adjourned to the plant of Jacobs and Company, college annual specialists, where they were shown the "inside workings" of year-book publication.

The second business meeting was called at 4:30. At this time it was decided that the organization should elect five officers, namely, a president, two vice-presidents, one secretary, and one treasurer. Saturday morning was designated as the time for election of officers. It was further decided that another meeting of the convention would be called next spring after the election of next year's editors. At this time the old and the new will have opportunity to exchange ideas for the benefit of all concerned. The time and place of this spring meeting has not yet been set.

The final social event of the program was the editors' ball, which was held in Copeland hall, beginning at ten o'clock. Music was furnished by Luke Cheney's orchestra. It was a wonderful affair, full of life and enjoyment for everyone.

At the time of going to press it is learned that the remainder of the program is as follows:

Saturday morning, at ten o'clock—Address by Prof. Marshall Brown.

At ten-thirty—Final meeting and election of officers.

At 12:45—Lunch in Judd hall.

The list of college annuals and their editors follows:

THE BACKBONE OF P. C. DEFENSE

These are a few of the lads who are making the P. C. line respected throughout the state. Lynn, a fast, heavy, aggressive, pass-snagging end, is one of the best in the state. Cheatham and Blakely have been stopping them over tackle in no uncertain fashion. McNuall is a fine, heady center who plays aggressive, "heads-up" ball every minute he's in the game. Henry Cauthen, sports writer for the Charleston "News and Courier," had this to say after the Citadel game:

"Two stalwart Presbyterian tackles, Cheatham and Balkely; a small but very mobile center, McNaull; a big guard, Beckman, and a crack end, Lynn, interrupted the Cadets' smooth runninng game as much as any line they have run into this season except that of V. M. I."

renewing of old contacts and friendships, as well as for the refreshing of the inner man. Mrs. Hunter is famous for her big spreads—and this is to be the greatest of them all.

The program will be rounded out by several necessary business meetings of the alumni association. The time of these has not yet been announced.

Requests and checks are already coming in, and Lonnie McMillain is sending out a steady stream of tickets for the game. Alumni will be given the cream of the crop—a section on the fifty-yard line. The crowd of old grads is going to be large.

AVON PLAYERS GIVE FINE SHOW

'Merchant of Venice" Is Greeted By Small But Enthusiastic Audience.

(Contributed)

On last Saturday night the Avon Players moved into the orphanage chapel and gave a performance of Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," marked by a splendid Launcelot, an excellent Shylock, and a miserable Bassanio, all of which took place before a pitifully meager audience.

The group of "New York Players" (Is that a virtue?) moved about the streets of Venice in varying moods of effectiveness. At times the performance reached a very realistic height, caused, of course, by the sympathetic acting of several members of the cast. At still other times the presentation was far from the heights, caused again, of course, by the weak acting of other members of the group. On the whole, the interpretation was well above the average of such companies and was well received by the few persons who were present.

In awarding palms, the first prize, according to this reviewer, must go to the young man who played the part of Launcelot Gabbo. (We were not given programs, so were cannot give his name.) His soliloquy between conscience and the fiend was very cleverly done, so cleverly that the house was put into a roar of laughter. It was presented, no doubt, in just the manner the author himself would have liked it done, and in just the manner to make an eighteenth century follower of the "unities" quake with indignation. His farewell to the fair Jessi-

Fant H. Thornley

Above is pictured Fant H. Thornley, editor of the PaC-SaC, Presbyterian's' year-book, who was selected at the final business meeting as the head of the South Carolina Association of College Annual Editors for the coming year. This most successful meeting which came to a close last Saturday, was a distinct forward step in the journalistic achievements of Presbyterian college, and for that matter, in the state as well. To Mr. Thornley goes the credit for the success of the convention, as it was his original plan and hard work that made the meet possible. He is to be congratulated for the wonderful work that he has done in starting this organization.

Superlative Contest Comes On Monday

Who's Who at P. C. will be decided next week when the annual superlative contest is held by the junior edition of The Blue Stocking. On Monday mimeographed sheets will be passed out to the students to vote and the results will appear in the junior issue Saturday.

This contest, open to juniors and seniors (except for the popular professor), is decided by the popular vote of the students and all are urged to fill out the ballot for whoever he sees fit to run for the position. One

PRESBYTERIANS AND DEACS BATTLE TO SCORELESS TIE

Blue Stockings Knot Wake Forest In Brilliant Contest. Jimmie Green and Bernie Dunlap Save Game Four or Five Times With Splendid Safety Work. Smashing Tackling of Johnson's Eleven Stands Out.

Wake Forest, N. C., Nov. 19.—Presbyterian college's Blue Stocking eleven came up from South Carolina Tuesday to battle the Deacon football team of Wake Forest college to a scoreless tie.

The Blue Hose, battling brilliantly throughout the contest, had to be content with seeing Deacon backs get the honors for yardage reeled off in midfield, but the North Carolina team was not able to pull a bit bigger scoring threat than the plucky little Palmetto eleven, which was outweighed more than ten pounds to the man.

The brilliant safety work of Jimmie Green and B. Dunlap was all that saved the Presbyterian goal four or more times. In the first half Green made several deadly tackles when Wake Forest backs had squirmed through the P. C. eleven and then in the second half Dunlap nabbed Wake Forest pass receivers when only he stood between them and his goal on more than one occasion.

Eustace Mills was the outstanding man for the fighting Deacons. He, like the other Wake Forest "first string" backs, was sent into the contest after the first quarter, but the South Carolina Blue Hose had found themselves against the Deacon starters and held their own against all that Coach Pat Miller could muster.

Mills got the longest run of the day, 35 yards, and also received a pass from Fullen for a gain of 2 yards. Other long gains registered by the Deacons were runs by Hipps for 11 and 26 yards, by Cox for 25 yards and by Quillen for 14 and 18 yards.

Long passes completed by the Deacons included: Quillen to Hipps, 38 yards; Quillen to Benton, 26 yards; Quillen to Benton, 32 yards, and Quillen to Mills, 20.

Jimmie Green ripped off a gain of 11 yards to lead the Presbyterian ground gaining. A pass from O Dunlap to Lynn for 16 yards was the Blue Stockings' longest single gain.

The punting of Jimmie Green was also one of the contributions of interest in the game, which was witnessed by a bare handful of spectators. The Blue Stocking star time and again placed his kicks within the Wake For-

FROSH PLAY CITADEL PUPS

State Championship Depends On Today's Game Inn Charleston. Team In Good Shape.

Coach Lonnie McMillian, with practically his entire freshman football squad, left early Friday morning for Charleston, where the Baby Hose will meet the strong Bull Pups for the Citadel Saturday afternoon. The entire squad is back in uniform, and if the Pups expect to do any scoring they are certainly going to have to present a most powerful eleven.

Although The Greenville News does not agree with us, we still contend that the Baby Hose have about the best chance of any one to cop the state title. To review the record of the Sox we find that they deadlocked with the Terrier Pups at 19-19. The following week, with a crippled squad they stopped the powerful Carolina first-year eleven with another deadlock at 0-0. Then they increased in power and romped on the Baby Secceders, 34-0. The game with the New-

Staff Officer Visits Campus

A notable visitor on the campus Wednesday morning was Lieut. Col. John A. Brockman of the general staff at Washington, D. C. Col Brockman's visit was entirely informal, but was made because of his own interest in the Organized Reserve Corps, which of course can only be built up and carried on by the colleges carrying R. O. T. C. units.

Col .Brockman complimented the tactical staff on the showing of the local unit, the uniforms, etc. He was especially pleased with the showing of military courtesy towards him dur-

ORGANIZATION IS COMPLETED

Fant H. Thornley Selected First President of Body. To Meet Again In the Spring.

The convention of the South Carolina Association of College Annual Editors, held here last Thursday, Friday and Saturday, came to a successful close after the last business meeting on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. The purpose of the convention was to perfect an organization entirely separate from the State College Press association, elect officers, set a definite time of meeting, draw together socially, and have an organization in which the editors could come together and discuss their various and personal problems. To Fant H. Thornley, editor of the PaC-SaC (Presbyterian college), goes the credit for the plan and perfection of the association. He must be thanked for the great forward step which he initiated, and the great honor that he added to Presbyterian college's already long list, that of being the first host to such an august body.

The business of the first two days of the convention was reported in last week's issue of The Blue Stocking, but a report of the last day's business and findings should be made. The report of the committee selected for the purpose of drawing up resolutions, selecting a name, etc., was made at the business meeting Saturday morning. They suggested as the official name: "The South Carolina Association of College Annual Editors." This name was immediately approved by the body. It was also decided that two meetings a year would be held, one at the beginning of the first semester and one at the end of the year when th new editors had been selected and the business could be turned over to them. It is hoped that the PaC-SaC staff will see fit to bring the meeting next spring back to P. C.

At the election of the officers, Fant H. Thornley, editor of the PaC-SaC (Presbyterian college), was elected president; Miss Betty Smyth, editor of The Tatler (Winthrop college), first vice-president; Miss Dorothy L. Seay, editor of The Comet (The College of Charleston), second vice-presi-

Press Association Meets In Greenville

The annual meeting the College Press association which convenes in Greenville this week-end, with Furman university and Greenville Womans college as joint hosts, will have able representatives as far as P. C. is concerned, as C. W. Grafton, editor of The Blue Stocking and O. W. Chapin, managing editor, will be on deck. The Collegian will not send delegates, but will be represented by Messrs. Grafton and Chapin, who are also on The Collegian staff.

The association is probably one of the greatest aids the writers and would-be writers of the state have, for each year they have an opportunity to come together and discuss and thrash out their various problems. Just what program has been laid out for the visiting journalists is unknown at present, but it will be safe to say that their minds will not be on journalism all the time, for the joint hosts have long been known for their ability to show their guests a good time.

FAITH, HOPE, AND LOVE

The Apostle Paul, in his letter to the churches of Corinth, said, "And now abideth Faith, Hope, and Love." It is now time for students and friends of Presbyterian college to hold, as never before, to these three noble emotions. The rather slow progress of the program of deliverance should not occasion despondency or pessimism. It is not the time for despair. Far from it. Today the prospects for raising the debt are still excellent. The work is slow, but it has not stopped; and indeed it will not stop until $350,000 has been raised and the college is once more on a firm footing.

Faith—that is the first thing. Faith in the belief that it is God's purpose to insure the continued usefulness of Presbyterian college as an instrument for the advancement of His Kingdom; faith in the loyalty of the members of the church in South Carolina; faith in the leaders who are directing this campaign which is to deliver us from debt. Without Faith we can do little. Faithful students, fathful faculty members, faithful friends, faithful leaders, faithful followers—these are the factors that are insuring the ultimate success of the program of deliverance.

Hope is second. There is, and must continue to be, a spirit of sincere optimism on the part of every one. Pessimism has meant the downfall of more than one great movement. There is no place for it among those who are working for Presbyterian college. Hope—the ability to see present difficulties as small obstacles that will be overcome in the contest for ultimate victory—that is what we need. Hope will bring added courage, and courage can mean nothing but success.

To quote again from Paul's letter, "And now abideth Fiath, Hope, and Love; and the greatest of these is Love." Faith and Hope are indispensable, but they are in the nature of superstructure. The foundation is Love. We may feel sure the campaign will succeed because we know that it is founded on Love. Thirteen hundred men in South Carolina have organized and pledged themselves to raise the debt. The entire membership of the church in this state is behind them. They believe that P. C. is a worthy agent for the advancement of God's Kingdom, and they have a warm personal affection for the college.

Faith, Hope, and Love—without them we have no prospect of success; with them there is no prospect of failure.

THE WAKE FOREST GAME

The magnificent brand of football displayed by the team against Wake Forest last Tuesday should be an inspiration to the student body. The Blue Stockings were playing with the odds heavily against them. The North Carolina Deacons had beaten Wofford, a team to which Presbyterian lost several weeks ago. They had defeated Davidson, who, in turn, had beaten the Citadel, one of P. C.'s" conquerors. In addition, and of greatest significance, the Wake Forest team outweighed the Hosemen, man for man, something in the neighborhood of twenty pounds.

Without Galloway and Young, and with Jmimy Green feeling ill throughout the entire game, the Blue Stockings nevertheless proved able to meet every thrust of their strong opponents with a staunch and sturdy defense. The team played "heads-up" ball every minute of the game. They were on their toes. They were alert and aggressive. In short, they played football.

There is one game left. Newberry comes to Clinton on Thanksgiving day, which is also Home-coming day, to close the season with the annual P. C.-Newberry game. The past two contests, Erskine and Wake Forest, indicate that the Blue Hose are in excellent condition. They are tackling and blocking ferociously. They are running better than ever before this fall.

However, they are not over-confident. Every man on the squad knows, many of them from past experience, that Newberry will be here to play real ball. They are prepared to give their best from the first whistle to the last. It remains for the student body to get behind the team with a similar spirit and inspire them to greater football than they have yet played.

AN OLD CUSTOM

It is an old custom for the juniors, sophomores, and freshmen, to publish one issue of The Blue Stocking before the Christmas holidays. Next week, accordingly, the juniors will have charge of the college paper. An editor has been chosen from among the juniors on the staff. He will pick his assistants and will be in full authority. The following issue, that of Dec. 7, will likewise be under the direction of the sophomores under their editor; and the final 1929 number will be published by the frosh.

By this means the student body is enabled to "get a line" on those men who are working on the staff. From their first year on, certain men are under observation. Their interest in the paper and their ability to write and to organize is thus demonstrated, often on more than one occasion, to the students. These class issues should be observed and studied closely. They are the best indices to the men who are qualifying themselves as future workers and editors.

AND NOW ANOTHER PRECEDENT

There is another precedented event which will take place next week. This is the annual superlative contest. Each year The Blue Stocking takes a ballot from among the members of the student body to determine those who are held in highest esteem. It is not, of course, a life-and-death matter. There is no deep significance to the result. It is merely a way of signifying to certain individuals the honor and achievement which they have attained in the hearts of their fellow students.

In all, twenty-four qualities are judged. From the ballots it is determined which is: The most popular professor, most popular student, most cheerful, most loyal, most talented, most friendly, neatest, best informed, most courteous, most handnsome, "Ye ladies man," most literary, most militaristic, most dignified senior, best journalist, wittiest, best sport, best orator, best debater, best endowed in a physical way, man with most promise, best all-round athlete, best business man, and best all-round man.

Since this is an evidence of esteem and good will, it is only right that every man should thoughtfully and sincerely give his own opinion. The ballots will be passed out some time next week, and the results tabulated in next week's issue of The Blue Stocking.

The Middle Aged Shiek

Shakespeare has very brilliantly divided the ages of the individual into these six: the infant, the school-boy, the lover, the soldier, the judge, and the old man. There is, however, one remarkably interesting period which William overlooked—the Sugar Daddy age.

Along about forty or five-five a surprising number of otherwise sound-minded men become possessed of the idea that they are the very impersonation of masculine attractiveness. The dementia is most prevalent among men who are just spanning the gap between youth, when they might be pardoned on the ground of "not knowing any better," and the period of older age when the individual has been disillusioned as to his charm. From somewhere out of the unexplored realm of nebulous ideas there comes to the victim the over-mastering conviction that he has been endowed with more than his share of "It."

Irving wrote of just such a man: "He could not be an old gentleman; for old gentlamen are not apt to be obstreperous to chambermaids. He could not be a young gentleman; for young gentlemen are not apt to inspire such indignation." It never seems to occur to these worn-out crushers that, if a hundred or so of them were brought together in one bunch, there wouldn't be fifty cents' worth of sex appeal among them. In the meanwhile, lacking the power to see themselves as others see them, they go on through that period of life. Sometimes mildly repulsive, more often remarkably amusing—these middle aged shieks with their conceit and abdominal tonnage increasing in the same ratio afford us a fascinating character study.

—B. H. Dickson.

Military Notes

It might be well to call to the attention of the student body, an incident that occured on the campus this week. This was a beautiful example of military courtesy shown our visitor, Lt. Col. Brockman, of the general staff, during his short visit here Wednesday morning. Col Brockman stated that he knew of no other college that showed the respect to a visiting officer that the students of P. C. did. It is advertisement of this type, carried all over the state and then back to these officers' posts that will bring P. C. and her R. O. T. C. unit to the forefront in the sight of the United States army. It is hoped and believed that this good work will continue throughout the year and it will certainly be a great help and an asset to the local unit.

The rifle team, under the supervision of Capt. Wysor, is progressing rapidly and it will not be long before the first meet which will be the "big test" for our target hunters. Three more teams have been added to the schedule. They are University of Kentucky, Alabama Polytechnic institute and University of Wyoming. The military department also informed us that challenges had been made to several of the large Eastern and Northern universities, which include Yale and others.

Another addition to the department is the arrival and actual use of the officers' "bread slicers." Correctly speaking, the new R. O. T. C. sabers. The commissioned officers have been under the instruction of Capt. Wysor in saber drill since their arrival and are now quite adept in brandishing this weapon. The purchase of sabers by the college is most certainly a forward step and in all probability will be smiled upon by the inspectors and visiting officers throughout the year.

School Girl "Canned" for Writing

Because she depicted too well if not wisely, boarding school life, Carmen Dee Barnes, 16-year-old author of "Schoolgirl," has been removed from the Gardner school in New York City, where she was in her freshman year. According to Mrs. Geo. P. Jackson, of Nashville, Tenn., mother of the girl, Miss Louise Eltinge, principal lof the school, asked that the young authoress be withdrawn "for the peace of the school and for Carman's happiness." The novel deals frankly with the problems of the girl leaving home for the first time and adapting herself to life in a boarding school. Carman, who wrote "Schoolgirl" when she was 15, was beseiged with autograph requests from students at the Gardner school.—Atlanta Journal.

N. C. State Head Against Rat Caps

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 19.—Dr. E. C. Brooks, president of North Carolina State college, tonight added his voice to those who profess to see no need for "rat" caps at the school. "I do not see any great value to the institution in our requiring freshmen to wear the cap," Dr. Brooks told the freshman class committee that conferred with him.

The committee, appointed after the rat class threatened to burn the caps last week, also today obtained statements advocating abolishment of the caps from Dr. R. R. Sermon, director of athletics; Henry Love, upper class student council member, and the Blue Key honorary fraternity.

President Attacks Week-End Trips

New Haven, Conn.—Yale's most sacred tradition—the custom of making week-end journeys to various New England and New York women's colleges, is threatened with extinction. President James Rowland, of the university, heartily condemned the practice and stated that it might become necessary to require the undergraduates to register twice each Sunday so as to prevent their leaving the campus.

It has not been learned whether this step is a result of complaints from the girls being visited or from those who are in charge of them—Emory Wheel.

The Johnsonian Sez—

From the University of South Carolina comes news that would gladden the hearts of our teachers, especially our gym teachers. Perhaps the following example of a Carolina soph will "stun our stoic sophs":

Leroy Want, a sophomore and a seemingly perfectly normal boy, has never chewed gum. Believe it or not! Perhaps he believes he works his jaw enough answering and asking questions in class. However, he says this, too, "Yes, I smoke sometimes, and if I told you that I didn't drink you wouldn't believe me."

Mr. Want wishes to thank the feature editor of The Gamecock for this national publicity.—The Gamacock.

Quaker Campus Says—

"We poor co-eds! (?) Do you have the latest dope on the college graduate? It's this, over 75 per cent of the men marry, as compared with about 50 per cent of the women. The reason? I don't know, guess women want to marry brains and men don't."

But just let the women talk and they will cut their own throats when it comes to proving who has the brains.—The Gamecock.

The automobile has brought distances closer together—including our house and the poor-house.

Love—it brings heaven down to earth and raises hell.

He: "And what would we do without women? Answer me that!"

Him: "As we pleased."

"Reading a love story?"

"No. It's about married people."

"Was Maude in a bright red frock at the dance?"

"Some of her, darling; some of her."

The ladder of life is full of splinters, but they hurt most when you're sliding down.

J. T. Richardson Doesn't Forget

P. C. alumni do not forget their alma mater. J. T. Richardson, of Winnsboro, a P. C. fullback in 1919, was an enthusiastic spectator at the Wake Forest game this week. After the game he took dinner with the squad at the Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh. In a short talk, made at the same time, he spoke of his warm affection for Coach Johnson, and of his interest in Presbyterian college. He closed his talk with an invitation to the theatre. The entire squad became his guests and had the privilege of seeing "Rio Rita."

Mr. Richardson is now situated in Raleigh. He has been following the games this season as well as he could through the papers. He expressed satisfaction with the Wake Forest game, and confidence that P. C. will defeat Newberry next week. However, he warned against over-confidence.

The football team was pleased to have the privilege of knowing this old P. C. star. He is one alumnus the squad will not soon forget.

Scientific Group Takes In New Men

Again, would-be scientists have undergone the pleasures and miseries of learning the deep, dark secrets of Chi Beta Phi, the honorary scientific group. The initiation was held in the science building Wednesday evening, November 12, at 7:0. Those persons in the library Wednesday evening probably heard weird sounds emerging from the general direction of the physics lab., as the new men were initiated into the secrets of the scientific fraternity.

Those who went down the dark and bumpy trail were: R. P. Moore, G. K. Smith, E. H. Wyatt and W. B. McCall. With these men and others who will come later, the meetings and discussions of things scientific will undoubtedly have added pep.

Other initiations will be announced in the near future.

Sigma Upsilon Holds Session

Isis chapter of Sigma Upsilon held a regular semi-monthly meeting on Thursday evening. B. H. Dickson delivered an interesting piece on Negro poets and their work. He showed careful preparation and a discussion which followed his reading, threw much light on this rather unusual subject.

R. T. Gillespie read a paper on the prophets and prophetical literature. His paper brought forth much comment both pro and con.

There were several members absent from this meeting due to their attendannce at the South Carolina College Press Association which is in session at Greenville this week-end. This was also the first meeting at which the new members were presnt.

Son: "Is a man's wife his better half?"

Papa: "So we are told, my son."

Son: "Then if a man is married twice, there won't be anything left of him, will there?"

Frank: "What is that terrible odor?"

John: "Business."

Frank: "How does business make that odor?"

John: "It's rotten."

Wife (at piano recital): "She has quite a large repertoire, hasn't she?"

Husband: "Yes, and that dress she has on makes it look worse."

Teacher: "What is a cannibal, Tommy?"

Tommy: "Please, teacher, I don't know."

"Well, if you ate your father and mother, what would you be?"

"An orphan, miss!"

Jack: "I never knew love was like this!"

Jill: "Neither did I; I thought there were more flowers and candy to it."

Collegian Makes First Appearance

With a flashing red cover the fall number of The Collegian appeared with its bid for attention. It is unusually well arranged and balanced nicely. One especially pleasing feature is the absence of advertisements. It is a relief to find one student publication so independent. And this will doubtless aid other publications in their advertising programs.

From a literarry standpoint the poetry is outstanding. Dickson's "To a Woman of the Fields" is a fine expression of deep and understanding thought. "The Man Who Knew" is a pleasing, witty play by the editor. It smacks of personal experience. Whose? It is better to pass over the essays and mention Grafton's masterpiece of this number—"Those Maloney Boys." Humorous, with a keen but not pedantic insight into human nature (or shall we say brotherly love?), the characters are not too exaggerated, and above all, the story is well written. It is the best part of Williamson's' collection of literary effort.

The editor is to be congratulated on the result he has obtained with so little help. It is deplorable that so few students take enough interest in The Collegian to contribute, leaving the task to a mere handful. The tone of the magazine would be lifted if they would throw off so much self-con[illegible] submit their brain-

[illegible] against the Deacon backs napping and gained between twenty and thirty yards on each of the kicks.

The smashing tackling of the Presbyterians who broke through their heavier opponents numerous times, was outstanding. Blakely and Cheatham showed some as pretty tackle play as has been seen in this state this year.

Every man on the Presbyterian eleven tackled low and viciously unless there already was a man under him when he hit a runner. To recite the roll of Presbyterian college outstanding men would nearly call for the eleven men as only two substitutions, at the end of the first half, were made.

Mills was supported by Hipps and Quillen in the Wake Forest offensive work. Williams, Wake Forest tackle, bore the brunt of the Deacons' defense. Denton's punting was off, but he did some neat passing and pass receiving to keep the Blue Stockings watching him every minute.

Wake Forest got 13 first downs to five or the Blue Stockings. Presbyterian twice got within Wake Forest's 35-yard zone on offense and Wake Forest once recovered a fumble on Presbyterian's 20-yard line, but four plays later had lost 21 yards.

Among the contributors to the fund are a little helpless crippled boy from Lowrys, S. C., and a ninety-year-old war veteran from West Union.

The work of canvassing will be continued by all members of organization, under the leadership of President McSween.

If the people of the state were as optimistic over the outcome of the campaign and could see as fully as the students themselves what the deliverance would mean to the college, it would not be long before the entire $350,000 would be raised.

Class Editors Are Selected

According to the general custom, The Blue Stocking staff met early this week and selected editors for the class issues which come out the last three weeks before the Christmas holidays. As heretofore, the junior and sophomore editors were selected from the staff and the two most likely-looking journalists from the first year men were selected to put out that most interesting and "horsey" freshman issue.

The junior issue, which makes its appearance next week will be edited by O. W. Chapin, present managing editor of The Blue Stocking. L. C. Jackson, present frosh sports editor was selected for the "dirty work" in the sophomore class. This issue will appear December 7. Last, but in no wise least, D. Upshur of Sumter, S. C., and T. Evans of Ennettsville, were selected to co-edit that most important freshman publication. So far as is known, none of the staffs for these issues have been selected.

ca was, perhaps, a trifle overdone, but it was good for a hearty laugh, and so it achieved its purpose. If our ears did not deceive us, this same young man took the part of Gratiano. (It's a pity we didn't have a program.) There again, his histrionics were all [illegible] which needless to say were correctly suited to his parts.

We had heard so much about Mr. Lewis' Shylock (we saw his name on the posters) that we were prepared for something above the ordinary. The advance notices were by no means false. His Shylock was very well done, so well, in fact, that the character was presented in its most subtle meaning, a meaning Shakespeare no doubt intended, but one the casual reader often misses. In Mr. Lewis' interpretation the pathetic and tragic Shylock far outweighed the avaricious, cruel Jew of Venice. After all was over, we were, perhaps, a bit more sorry for the broken old man than happy over the release of Antonio and the triumph of Portia. This is, without a doubt, a distinct compliment to the ability of the actor.

What a pity it is impossible to say the same thing about the performance of Bassanio. (If we had only had a program). This young man is unfortunately in the wrong profession. Surely he is not an actor. His performance was lacking entirely in grace and power. It is not fair to say, as Churchill once remarked, that "he mouthed his lines." He did not. His speeches were far too mechanical for that. They were unmistakably memorized words which taken together made certain lines that in turn formed particular passages to be uttered at the sounds of a special cue.

The lady who took the part of Portia was an actress of no little merit and very fair to look upon. Her performance was natural and effective, and we, for one, thoroughly enjoyed it.

It would not be fair to close without mentioning the acting of the Antonio. He had a pleasing voice, and acted his part with the dignity and reserve it required.

If this review should come into the hands of any school booking this company, our advice would be—by all means see the play. The Gabbo, Shylock and Portia are worth your money. True, the acting of some of the cast is rather ragged, but this can be overlooked.

Hardwood Artists Begin Practice

Coach Johnson has no intention of letting time slip up on him in preparing for the first game of the hoop schedule, slated for December 18 with the Clemson Tigers. For the last week, he has had all the cagers who are not football men, working out daily under the staff and the two most likely-looking journalists from the first Capt. R. B. Caldwell. This seems to be a wise move, as one will remember that last year the squad started late and it was some time after the season started that the boys really found themselves and began to show themselves very adept at the hardwood game.

Such a start is not the intention of the boys this year, so they may be found every afternoon in the gym, hard at work on signal drills and scrimmaging. The men who have reported so far are as follows: Capt. R. B. Caldwell, Roberts, Mason, M. Adair, Gosnell, Snipes, Dougherty, Bowen, Caskey and K. Wyatt.

Seniors In Charge Of 'Y' Program

Continuing the policy of letting the different classes have complete control of the Y. M. C. A. programs, the "Y" cabinet put on one of the most interesting meetings of the year last Wednesday night with the seniors in charge. The subject chosen was, "The Work and Future of Presbyterian College." W. J. Hazelwood was the senior leader and he is to be congratulated [illegible] which reached [illegible] were correctly suited to his parts.

The meeting was opened with a devotional and prayer by E. E. Wade. P. A. Roberts was the first speaker, choosing as his subject, "The History of Presbyterian college." Mr. Roberts was thorough and exact in his treatment of this phase of Presbyterian's work. E. R. Rhodes gave an interesting talk on "The Future of Presbyterian college." The theme of Mr. Rhodes' talk was the fact that P. C. could be made the greatest college in the state with the burden of debt lifted from it. C. J. Martin followed with a talk on "The Purpose and Need of a Presbyterian College." The final talk of the program was given by President McSween, who gave a short but splendid address touching on various topics about the work of the college at the present time. He gave a most encouraging outlook on the debt situation and emphasized the part that the student prayer bands are playing in the deliverance.

Good Meeting Of Ministerial Club

An interesting program was put on by the Ministerial club Thursday night in their regular weekly meeting. This club is functioning with real determination for the first time this year, and it should be a great help to the future ministers.

The meeting was opened by President P. A. Roberts, after which W. H. Jackson led the devotional and the opening prayer. The main address was made by M. T. Murphy, who chose as his subject, "Preparation." He divided this into three sections: example, stick-to-it-iveness, and faith. Mr. Murphy handled his subject in a remarkable manner and made a most inspiring talk. The meeting was closed with prayer, led by W. J. Hazelwood.

berry Papooses was cancelled by the Newberry officials and the Junior Presbyterian college of Maxton, N. C., was taken on in their place. This heavy and powerful team went down to defeat before the onslaught of the Blue by a score of 52 to 0. So the standing of the team depends entirely on their showing against the "Keydets." Then, to take a look at the other state teams: Furman stopped Clemson. Clemson deeated Carolina, and Carolina smashed Furman. So that leaves only Wofford, P. C. and the Citadel undefeated. Wofford meets the very formidable Furman outfit and the Sox meet the Pups this weekend, so as we see it, the state championship depends on the outcome of these two contests.

The squad was brought up to full strength by the return of Stamps, Barrett and Carr, who have been on the sick list for some time. The whole bunch is in excellent physical shape and in case of a defeat at the hands of the "Little Soldiers" there will be no alibi.

Probably the best part of the trip will be a banquet given the team in Charleston tonight by President McSween, and Mr. Mac is certainly no slouch when it comes to giving banquets.

The ones to make the trip are: Hamer, Copeland, Ewing, Perrin, Capt. Carr, Rampey, Watson, Barrett, Adams, Holmes, Osman, Winter, Elliott, Stamps, Pollitzer, E. Graham, Lockman, Woodside, Wilson, Pinson, Nettles, Odiorne, Brown and Clark. They were accompanied by Coaches McMillian and Eichelberger. Prof. Sturgeon, Dr. Whitten and Sgt. Parham.

Editor's Note:—We learn through this morning's papers that Coach "Dizzy" McLeod's strong Furman frosh team downed the Wofford Pups, 25 to 19, so as we see it (not The Greenville News), it's up to the Little Hose to decide the state championship.

LITTLE HOSE TIE CITADEL

Presbyterian Rats and Pups Tie, 6-6, In Charleston Tilt. Barrett Makes P. C. Touchdown.

The P. C. frosh and the Citadel first year men closed their football season in Charleston last Saturday by playing a 6-6 tie in a sea of mud. This game proved disastrous for the Hose, knocking them out of the state championship. The P. C. boys made more first downs and gained more yardage than the Cadets, but Citadel took advantage of their only opportunity and scored a touchdown. This looked like enough to win, but the Clinton team came back in the last quarter to tie the score.

P. C. was lead by Barrett and Adams, who were largely responsible for the P. C. tally. Both teams completed a number of pretty forward passes, a wet ball preventing more from being completed. The passers had difficulty in handling the ball, and numerous heaves went far from their mark.

Adams, star of last year's Charleston team showed the fans that he still knows how to pass and kick. This slender lad probably handled the ball better than anyone on the field. He threw seven passes and five of them were good. His kicking helped the Presbyterians in a number of cases.

Stamps, at half for P. C., brother of the famous Jimmie Stamps, was a battering ram when it came to line plays. This stockily built lad could be depended on to hit the line for good gains at any time and, with Boneta

Home-Coming Day Draws Big Crowd

Home-coming drew a great many [illegible]rmer P. C. students from all parts [illegible] the state and adjoining states to [illegible]e dedication of the swimming pool [illegible]d P. Freshmen Win Relay Event

Thursday was a day for the frosh as well as the varsity, for their victory in the relay race between halves of the P. C.-Newberry football game puts the rats on the map in track and gives evidence of this year's rats redeeming the record that freshmen have held at P. C. in track for years.

The juniors alone accepted the challenge made by the rats a week ago to a relay race. A medley relay was decided upon, the first man running one hundred yards, the next two, two hundred twenty each, and the last man running a quarter mile. For the frosh, Pollitzer, Dillard, Copeland and Osman were the entries, and for the third year men, Bowen, Wyatt, Chapin, and Ketchum.

Pollitzer took a four-yard lead over the junior entry in the first 100 yards, but Wyatt soon made it up and finished his stretch fully five yards ahead of his opponent. Chapin added ten more to the junior lead, but Osman ate up the distance in the lap he ran against Ketchin and won by inches in a close and thrilling finish.

COLLEGE PRESS HOLDS SESSION

Annual Meeting In Greenville With Furman and G. W. C. As Hosts. Winners Announced.

Approximately 65 delegates, representing over twenty-five publication staffs in South Carolina colleges, gathered in Greenville Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week for the annual State College Press association meeting which was held at Furman university and Greenville Womans college.

The first session was held Wednesday night at G. W. C. when the executive committee, composed of one member from each school, gathered and considered important matters of the convention. Following this was a movie party at the Carolina theatre. Thursday the convention got well under way with the registration of delegates, followed by addresses of welcome by the president of the conference and Dr. D. M. Ramsay, president of G. W. C.

This year's program proved to be a great success, due to the efforts of

Present Organization To Push Debt Raising Until Goal of $350,000 Is Reached.

At a meeting held in the campaign headquarters of the program of deliverance in the Leroy Springs gymnasium on Tuesday, November 26, of the chairmen of th evarious units of the Synod of South Carolina, it was decided to continue the movement with the present organization and endeavor to secure from the various churches of the synod such cooperation as will enable them to bring up their subscriptions to the quotas assigned them. This meeting was enthusiastic and optimistic. The first phase of the program has been completed, and another phase is now entered upon.

President McSween announced today that he had several conditional offers from large givers on the final push. New reports come in every day, and thirty-five churches of the synod have now completed the quotas assigned them. The sum of $170,000 has been subscribed, and $25,000 has been paid in cash. Reduction of the debt has already begun with the payment of some of the outstanding notes, and it is hoped to be able to cancel the bonds outstanding as rapidly as funds come in hand.

One of the pleasing features of the program has been the fine cooperation and loyal support on the part of Presbyterian college alumni throughout the state, both ministers and laymen. The two prize groups were lead by William Wise, '19, of Trenton, and E. C. Doyle, M. D., '94, of Seneca.

One thing has been clearly demonstrated in the movement, and that is that the Synod of South Carolina is solidly behind the college and that the institution occupies a large place in the heart of the constituency of the synod.

STUDENTS PICK LEADING MEN

Annual Superlative Contest Is Held To Pick Men From Junior and Senior Classes.

"Who's who" at P. C.? With twenty-four superlative contest places and many able to fill one or more of them, it was with no little interest that the results of the annual contest were tabulated Monday night. Most of the places went to the winner by an 80 per cent majority, showing that the general opinion of the students was in accord. Some were closely contested when there were two equally good candidates eligible, but as a whole the result, one must agree, is fairly accurate.

C. W. Grafton seemed to be the most popular runner for several of the places, and emerged with four. To "Chip" goes the distinction of being the most talented, most millitaristic, student with most promise, and the best journalist. Grafton undoubtedly excells in these four and, as was shown by the votes, considered such by a good majority of the student body.

J. B. Green was second, taking honors in three of the positions. Jimmie was voted the best all-round athlete, most cheerful and handsomest (believe the last or not, as ye will!) With a letter in basketball, football and track, Jimmie undoubtedly leads in the athletic realm at P. C. Meet him at any time and he always has a grin and sometimes a joke. Judging looks from the point of feminine admirers—well, Green has 'em.

To Fant Thornley went the most votes for the neatest student and the ladies man. Fant is both without a question. The latter was well proved by his actions at a recent convention held on the campus.

Best sport and best all-round man

W. P. Jacobs Is Named On Board

W. P. Jacobs of Clinton, has been elected to the board of trustees of Presbyterian college, as one of the three that serve from the alumni association of the college. According to the new charter under which the college now operates, three men are selected from the graduates of the institution, and it was with no little pleasure that the college learned that Mr. Jacobs has been chosen as one of these representatives.

Mr. Jacobs is a member of the class of 1913. Since that time he has been a loyal Presbyterian college friend, aiding at all times in whatever capacity his services were desired. Recently he headed the drive for funds for the institution in Clinton, and also is serving as chairman of the program of deliverance that is now attempting to relieve the college of its debt. His aid was lent toward building the new stadium last year, and always when something pertaining to Presbyterian college needs to be done, Mr. Jacobs can be depended upon to assist.

The students and faculty are greatly pleased to have one so closely connected with and interested in the college to serve on the board of trustees.

BIG SCORE IN CLOSING GAME

Presbyterian Has No Trouble In Trouncing Indians At Home-Coming Game Thursday.

In their last game of the season, their home-coming battle, and against their oldest rivals, Newberry, the Blue Stockings rose to greater heights and humbled their opponents by a 54-0 score in a great, hard fought game full of thrills.

From the beginning till the final whistle the Calvinists played "heads-up" ball, moving with machine-like precision and as one rather than eleven players. An intercepted pass on the first play of the game, three drives and P. C. had a touchdown. A drive over the line made it 7-0. A few minutes later Dunlap went through the line for a 60-yard run for the second touchdown, and B. Dunlap added the extra point.

Newberry was completely outplayed in all departments of the game. Only once during the contest was the ball in P. C. territory and that was on the 49-yard line. Despite the work of the P. C. team, Newberry never gave in for an instant. They put up a dogged fight throughout, showing the best of spirit and gameness. Hutchison and Stokes played a great game for the Indians, but the Garnet and Blue was just too much to cope with.

No Beauty Section To Be In Annual

At a recent meeting of the PaC-SaC staff, it was decided that the beauty contest would not be completed this year and no section of the annual devoted to this, as was previously announced. This decision was partially due to the fact that so few students entered girls in the contest and also to the extra cost which would result from running and developing the pictures.

Those who have entered girls may obtain their pictures from the staff, as well as the price invested. This decision on the part of the staff does not concern the sponsor section, which will be run as usual, and there will be the same space allotted to it as in the past.

College Association Meets In Virginia

The annual meeting of the association of Secondary Schools and Colleges is to be held the first part of next week in Lexington, Va. President McSween and Dean Brown are to be representatives of Presbyterian college at this meeting. P. C. is a member of this association, which is a distinction in that the standards necessary for membership are such that the rating of the schools are greatly increased.

Each year reports are made by the schools and their records of finance, scholastic work and degrees the professors hold are gone over and if the association sees need of change in any way, the school is advised accordingly.

EDITORIALS

Another year has rolled around. Again the editor gets lazy and promotes 'the usual custom" of each class editing the paper. But he can't be blamed. It is a lot of work. So, the junior class humbly presents their efforts along the journalistic line and, following the policy of the regular Blue Stocking staff, give a record of past event and perhaps a few words of prophecy to the future.

This edition is published, for the most part, by students of the junior class who have heretofore not been identified with the staff, and while we cannot hope to get out an edition that will compare with the usual numbers, our effort has been to copy the usual form as much as possible.

As it has been the custom each year in the past to have the three under classes publish an edition of the college weekly, the first one falls to the class which is supposed to be best fitted in the ways of newspaper work. This serves not only as a vacation to the staff, but gives other men a chance to display their wares and, incidentally, gives the staff an opportunity to pick out any new material of unsung genius. While there is little chance of the former and no hope at all for the latter, it is hoped by the staff editing this issue that it will be received in the spirit meant and all errors overlooked.

COLLEGE ATHLETICS

This question amateurism: What's it all about anyway? Critics who say American colleges have commercialized and overstressed athetics will find ample support in a recent bulletin issued by the Carnegie Foundation for the advancement of teaching. Why bring the subject up? The colleges get the best possible players. The people pay the money for the games. The winning team is satisfied and the loser decides more money is needed for a better team and the budget is increased.

The poor frosh at college is annually confronted by a theme in his English course—usually headed "Sports versus Athletics," where he does his best to keep up with the bally-hoo and spread it on thick by saying colleges should not pay students to come. The coaches should not get so much money. He maintains that two teams in combat are merely two machines working mechanically by the master hand on the bench, and so on.

But to look into the matter, it is the small college that cannot afford to get the players that raise the howl. The student who is an athlete has easy sailing while the puny lad with a taste for books has the hard going. This does look one-sided in some respects. But what are you going to do about it?

To continue with the bulletin. It has been observed a growing tendency to restore college athletics to an amateur plane they once occupied. Blame for present conditions are placed on the alumni who offer various forms of subsidies to the prospective stars. To the press which "showers demoralizing publicity on the players." To the faculty who yields to the commercial instinct for winning games. To conferences who make laws solely for records.

But down underneath it all—there is another side of it. There is the sportsmanship of each individual in the game. There are arising factors which only the student can work out. The conference, the faculty, the alumni, and the press have their side of it, but way down somewhere—so has the student.

FOOTBALL SEASON CLOSES

It is with no little regret that we see the curtain fall on another football season. To the world baseball is the king of sports, but to the college man there is no doubt but that football reigns. An hour of thrills; a game that can be understood and enjoyed; a MAN'S game. Played in the fall when the world is at its best and nothing on the mind of the student but the game. When the student body is as one; able to give vent to emotions—yelling, cheering, having a whale of a time. Yes, we hate to see the old game go but we look forward already to next October.

Now comes the indoor sports. From the padded uniforms to the scant apparel of the basketball shark and the leather pushers. They have their season and receive their due. Two months of this and the air will hum with the twang of the bat and the sharp staccato of the starter's pistol. Then vacation. But all the while the heart of the sport lovers will be on the pigskin and the time when those familiar sounds that accompany football technicology begin.

Football is a great game. It is one that people can watch without putting themselves in the players' place or saying this or that should have been done. The men that plug and fight at the risk of injury get the credit and deserve it. It requires intensive training and hard work but it has the thrills and kick that is found in no other sport. It is a great game—and we hate to see it go.

A NEW CONFERENCE

Last week Furman, Oglethorpe and Mercer issued notices of withdrawal from the S. I. A. A. It looks a lot like a new confeernce will be the ultimate result. It is believed that these teams will not get into the Southern conference. It is equally true that the S. I. A. A. is too large an association and covers too wide a territory, which makes it unwieldy.

The general reasons for this decision on the part of these schools is that their present conference rating makes it hard to get games with teams in the Southern conference. But will the change and perhaps the formation of a new body have any effect on the scheduling of games? Looking at it from one viewpoint, it is a question of a little frog in a big puddle in preference to being a big frog with lesser limitations. Playing large schools undoubtedly helps. If the lesser school loses it is merely a matter of course, but there comes a time when the small school upsets it greater opponent. Then the school is on the map and it is good advertising.

These three schools have played an important part in the S. I. A. A. in the past. They are entering larger and perhaps unknown fields which may lead to success or failure. As they advance other institutions will join the ranks. We at least wish them success.

Waiter: "Water or milk?"

Customer: "Don't tell me; let me guess."

Impatient diner: "Hey, miss!"

Waitress: "Don't serve it, sir."

You can tell a freshman, but you can't tell him much.

"What is your son taking at college?"

"All I've got."

"After all," bitterly remarked the cynic, "love is only an abscess on a poor man's pocketbook."

EXCHANGE

Better Relationships

Why can't we as editors of college newspapers and magazines initiate a policy for the betterment of intercollegiate relationships through the medium of or publications? If we don't have anything good to say about another school in our columns, let's say nothing at all. Suppose we think over this.—The Collegiate Press.

Football Draws

Strange as it may seem, football draws as many fans each year as baseball. This amazing statement is revealed by a grid official up East. It is rather startling when first considered, the fact that baseball, our natoinal pastime, played six and seven days a week for four months, does not attract more customers than football, which is played only once a week for not more than 10 weeks.—The Hornet.

Mercer To Amend Charter

Charter amendments by which Mercer university may become one of the most richly endowed institutions in existence were approved by the Georgia Baptist convention in session at Gainesville recently.

Under the new plan the state convention will relinquish the close control under which it has heretofore held the university, and place the power in the hands of a rotating board of trustees and special committees.

Dr. John E. White, newly elected president of the convention, and chairman of the special committee of university trustees appointed to investigate the situation at Mercer, presented the plan, while Fred E. Smith, Augusta, vice-president, presided.—Mercer Cluster.

Furman In Select List

As the result of an inspection which took place during October, Furman university has been placed on the approved list of the Assocaition of American Universities, according to an announcement last week made by Dr. W. J. McGlothlin, Furman president, following word received from Dr. Adam Leroy Jones, chairman of the association. In the opinion of local officials, this is the greatest honor that has been bestowed upon Furman since its foundation over one hundred years ago.—The Hornet.

Grades a Disgrace?

"Scholastic grades as applied in the educational system of America are merely a substitute for the dunce cap and the whip," says Dr. F. R. Rodgers, in an address in Salt Lake City. He goes on to say that the best grades generally go to the best "ape," the one who can best imitate his teacher.

Week-Ending

The Literary Digest for October 16 carried an account of Dr. James Rowland Angell's opening address to the male student body. Dr. Angell said:

"The generation to which you, young men, belong, is notoriously restless, and does not feel that it is really enjoying itself unless it is going somewhere at high speed, the destination often a matter of relatively small consequence.

"One of the few chances which you really have to make intimate friendships with our classmates is during the relative leisure of the week-end, and the men who systematically withdraw from New Haven at that time are not only depriving themselves of this very genuine source of value in their college experience, but they are subjecting themselves to fatigue and excitement, which brings them back jaded and unfit to do their college work on Monday."

What are the measurements for the perfect female figure?

One compilation is as follows: Neck, 12 1-2 inches; bust, 35 inches; waist, 26 inches; hips, 34 inches; thigh, 20 inches; knee, 14 inches; calf, 13 1-4 inches; ankle, 8 inches; upper arm, 10 1-2 inches; forearm, 9 inches; wrist, 6 inches; height, 5 feet 6 inches; weight, 133 pounds.

"When I dance with you I feel as though I were treading on the clouds."

"Don't kid yourself; those are my feet."

RESUME OF FOOTBALL SEASON

At the close of the season, one can look back over the games, see where mistakes have been made and where things might have been different. Yet as we turn back over the past three months work, it can be termed nothing less than successful.

The Blue Stockings had a hard schedule this season, playing every state team except Clemson, besides two North Carolina teams and one from Georgia. Opening the season a week earlier than was expected due to a late game added to the schedule, the Hose journeyed to Shelby where they met Lenoir-Rhyne and returned with a 15-0 victory.

A week later the Mercer Bears came to Clinton. Never having won from the Georgians, and after revenge from the previous season's 7-6 score, the Calvinists played one of the best games of the season. Outweighed by many pounds the P. C. team came through with a 6-0 win.

Furman was the next meat for the Garnet and Blue, but gave the boys a surprising upset, winning by 12-0. This proved to be one of the worse back-sets for P. C.'s team, leaving them in poor shape, but not licked by a long way. When, a few days later the Carolina aggregation was due on the schedule, it was a tired team, fighting hard, but not in shape, that suffered one of the worst defeats in history, 41-0.

P. C.'s third hard game in a row hit the following week. The boys went to Charleston rated to be beat badly. They gave the Cadets a surprise, played up to form, and it was with no little difficulty that the Charlestonians were able to win, 14-0.

Wofford met the Calvinists at the Spartanburg fair. Picked to win by a two-touchdown margin, the Hose gave the poorest exhibition of the season, while the Terriers played inspired ball, winning by a 13-6 tally. In this game Jimmie Green opened up for a touchdown on the kickoff, making an 86-yard run.

The game with Erskine at Anderson was just too bad—for Erskine. Dopsters are still trying to figure it out. Much the underdogs, the P. C. aggregation played the Seceeders off their feet, winning by a 44-7 count. Again P. C. figured in long runs with a touchdown from a kick.

Wake Forest and P. C. battled to a scoreless tie at Wake Forest. The Garnet and Blue was much outweighed, but held the team that had defeated Davidson. When the Hose met the Newberry Indians in the home-coming game on Thanksgiving day, P. C. was working good and beat the Newberry men, 54-0.

Thus one gets an outline of the season. The team won four, lost four and tied one; an even break and a good record considering the opposition. P. C. scored 125 points aganist 86 for their opponents. For touchdowns, Jimmie Green and Dunlap led, making 5 each, Ritchie made two, Galloway 1, Bennett 3, Senter 1, B. Dunlap 1, and Walker 1.

The season was marked with few injuries and none of a serious nature. Some of the players were in practically all of every game, and every member of the team got to take part in at least one contest. McNaull was first string center and, while playing this position for the first time, certainly made a good showing. Cheatham and Blakely at tackles proved a big factor in the P. C. line. Capt. Beckman and McQueen played guard most of the time, but Fortson and Martin came in for their share of the playing. On the wings, Ross Lynn was bettered by no one in the state and in all probability will have an all-state berth. Bennett and Ferrene were the mainstays on the other end, and came through the season with their share of the glory. The Blue Stockings had a good line this year, much better than was thought possible before the football season opened. Many a time they held and as frequently pushed through when on offense. To them much credit is due, to say the least.

Jimmie Green was the mainstay in the backfield. Alternating at half and quarter, Jimmie turned out to be a triple-threat, causing no little trouble for all opponents. Three times this season he ran through entire opposing teams for a touchdown. He passed, played on the receiving side of the passes and booted the ball out of the danger zone into the enemies' territory on the fourth down.

Dunlap played fullback. Lighter than any first string fullback in the state, Orell backed up the line, watching the holes and stopping many an attack before it got past the line of scrimmage. Wherever the play went, Dunlap was there.

Galloway and Young were the other two backfield men that were in the line-up. Young called signals when in the game and generalled the team well. Injury in scrimmage kept Bevo out of the last two games of the season. Galloway passed with either hand and occasionally was on the receiving end. He showed his superiority in broken-field running, and in the lateral passes was right there for his share.

Ritchie and Senter played in all the games. At end runs Ritchie excelled, while Senter punted some and could wriggle through the line for good gains. Walker backed up the line and did it well.

For another year the Blue Stockings have lived up to their reputation of hard fighters. Never knowing when they were licked, always giving their best, never-say-die spirit, playing hard and clean, they emerge from the fray, and with little regret. This year sees the loss of Capt. Beckman, Martin, Walker and Means. It will be hard to fill the places of these men, although in number P. C. is losing less than usual. With the new material coming up from the rat squad, the boosters of the Garnet and Blue can look forward to an even more successful season.

Grades Show Improvement

Information from the registrar's office show that the dust is not being allowed to settle on the books now as was the case the first month, for the drop in the number of unsatisfactory remarks is quite obvious. Then, too, the gain in the number of extra good grades is surprising.

For the month ending October 12, a count showed that the entire student body as a whole took 178 Ds, 51 Es and very few extra good grades.

The seniors were the least affected, having 17 Ds and only one E. The juniors were credited with 21 Ds and 2 Es. The sophomores received 44 Ds and 14 Es, while the frosh got off to the worst start [illegible] 57 Ds and 9 Es.

The month ending November 16, showed a [illegible] in the number of Ds, registering only 128 of the condemned kind [illegible] slight increase in the number of total failures, with 61 Es. The seniors again led in keeping out of the [illegible] ing only 7 Ds and no a single E. The juniors dropped to 18 Ds and held the same number of Es, with 9 to their credit. The sophomores gained in both Ds and Es, however, getting 45 of the conditioned variety and 22 straight failures. The frosh dropped to 57 Ds and held their own ground in the E department with 30. The AAs counted up around 35 or 40 for the whole student body against comparatively few last month. It is hoped that the good work can be kept up and all the unsatisfactory marks be eliminated.

of the Cadets, proved to be the best driver in the game.

The contest opened with the Bull Pups kicking off. Barrett, Adams and Perrin failed to gain. Kicking marked the major portion of the game and the ball, with a few exceptions, rested near the middle of the field. Carr recovered a fumble on Citadel's 30-yard line a few minnutes before the half ended. Barret, Perrin and Stamps smashed the line to put the ball on the two-yard mark, but the half ended, and with it the probable chance of P. C. to win. P. C. made three first downs to two for the Cadets, during the first half.

Two minutes after the second half opened, Citadel intercepted a P. C. pass on the 50-yard line and took it to the 20-yard marker. Then the Pups drove down and over the goal for the first tally of the game. The try for extra point was blocked.

This score only served as a red flag to the P. C. eleven. They received the ball on the 50-yard mark. A pass from Adams to Pinson was good for 30-yards, and Barrett hit the line for 11, followed by 10 for Stamps. Barrett put it over. The try for point by Barrett was blocked.

Pollitzer, 120-pound back for P. C., was put in the game in the second half [illegible] as fine as lightning, nearly getting clear several times.

Pinson and Copeland at the ends for Presbyterian, played a fine game of ball. The work of Capt. Carr, Elliot and Watson was outstanding, while Ewing played up to his usual form.

greetings and best wishes for a happy Thanksgiving and splendid victory in game tomorrow.

Leroy Springs.

Dr. D. M. Douglas, president of the University of South Carolina, and former president of Presbyterian college, was then introduced by Mr. McSween as the one whom Col. Springs had designated to act in his place at the exercises.

Dr. Douglas spoke of his past association with Presbyterian college and told of the part Col. Springs had played in the upbuilding of the splendid plant at the college. He paid a glowing tribute to Col. Springs as a true friend of education in South Carolina. It was to Col. Springs that Dr. Douglas turned when the college was

Sophomore Issue Comes Next Week

Next week the sophomore class is to edit The Blue Stocking. At the election of class editors, L. C. Jackson was chosen to take the major portion of the responsibility for the issue. Mr. Jackson has chosen to assist him with next week's issue the following assistants:

R. H. Gillespie, B. B. Dunlap, G. K. Smith, J. K. Taylor, B. H. Boyd, H. H. Welch, W. Simpson, D. M. McNaull.

With these men on the staff the sophs should be able to get out a very good issue and the students look forward to the literary efforts of the second year men.

on the campus was voted to Ross Lynn. To see him on the football field, in the class room, or as president of the junior clalss, one will agree to this choice.

Dr. Spencer is still the best liked professor. Teaching Bible, Greek and French, the vice-president of the school hands it to the boys and they like it. This position has been won by Dr. Spencer many times in the past.

The honor of the most popular student was given the president of the student body, P. A. Roberts. "Phil" is always friendly, quiet, courteous, and deserves this honor.

R. T. Gillespie won first place as the best informed student. He reads lots, makes good grades, takes active part in many activities on the campus and usually knows his stuff when asked what it is all about.

T. M. Johnston led as the best orator, while G. G. Palmer was chosen as leading debater. Both men are fine speakers whether in debate or on the floor of oratory.

R. S. Crawford is considered as the best business man or the one most likely to succeed. "Bobby" is business manager of the two leading publications and is handling both on a paying basis, which is hard to do with the resources in the treasury.

E. E. Wade was voted the most friendly, and F. D. Rogers the most loyal, while W. H. Jackson was chosen as the most courteous. Three honors to whom they were due.

J. A. Babb, received place as the most dignified of the two upper classes. Joe doesn't hold himself above any one, but has a quiet dignity that all the students know.

To Tracey Flemming went the votes for the wittiest. Tracy has a droll sense of humor that makes him witty whether in the class room or out. Often his humor has been the despair of some faculty member.

Last, but not least, D. L. Wood is considered (in collegiate lingo) stacked up the best. Wood is well built and has a good physique a boy to stay out of the ring with, too.

team, the Hose pulled every play in their bunch of tricks. Passes were mixed with end runs, while Dunlap hit the line for big, consistent gains. Lateral passes and new formations

McHugh Dismissed From Hospital

F. G. McHugh of the class of '29, who was seriously burned in an apartment house fire in New Orleans recently, while in the act of saving a mother and her two children, was dismissed from the Marine hospital Tuesday, November 12. Mr. McHugh was able to return to his work on Saturday the 16th. He is to be stationed in the Canal Zone during the next few weeks, doing inventory work for the Standard Fruit company.

were used to the bewilderment of the Indians. P. C. scored first down after first down for a total of 15 against three for Newberry, and piled up eight touchdowns.

Mungo made make, the Calvinists blocked three punts, one for a touchdown. Twice they stopped the punt of their own team-mate on the Indians' goal line, and the tackles went through the line so fast that passing was the only mode of attack open for the visitors and little of that was successful.

The feature of the game was guessing how P. C. would make extra points. They made six in eight tries. With no kicker they mixed line bucks with passes and end runs to baffle the Newberry steam.

To pick a star in the P. C. line is practically impossible. Every man played his part and deserves credit. Green ran the team well and made some beautiful runs. Dunlap did the most ground gaining through the line and got off some long runs as well. Ritchie and B. Dunlap, the other two starters in the backfield, played a fine game.

P. C.'s line worked magnificently. Capt. Beckman played his last game for P. C. and played a good one. Both Cheatham and Blakely played havoc with the opposing team's rushes, while at end Ross Lynn was down on every punt, in every play, and going at top form. Bennett did some pretty work, making two touchdowns and blocking some end runs. McNaull and McQueen played up to form.

Coach Johnson used his entire team and every available substitute as well. Senter, Walker and Truesdell all made some pretty runs against opponents, the second string line making some good opening for them.

Besides Captain Beckman, Clinton, Means, Martin and Walker played their last game for P. C. For four years these men have given their best for P. C. and played a large part in the victories.

COLLEGE PRESS HOLDS SESSION

the staff made up of students of the two colleges acting as hosts. Mixed with business sessions were addresses by prominent literary and business men, and social affairs, which gave the representatives an interesting as well as profitable week-end.

The main address Thursday morning was delivered by Dr. B. D. Hahn, with music by members of the Music club of G. W. C. In the afternoon a special program was presented by the Prelude, English club of the college, followed by an address on contemporary poets by Dean R. N. Daniel of Furman. In the evening the association heard an address by the city editor of The Greenville Piedmont on journalism. A play by the Converse was presented, and the delegates were given a reception in the library at Furman.

On Friday the association assembled in the Furman chapel where Dr. Carlyle Campbell, president of Coker college, delivered an address on the importance of the literary magazine. Dr. Campbell is well known throughout the South and his speech proved most interesting. Following this the delegates broke up into group for various discussion of problems of the papers and magazines, which were led by members of the Furman faculty. Friday afternoon the delegates were guests of the Furman athletic association at the football game between the Furman rats and Wofford first year men. In the evening came the grand finale of the week-end—the banquet, served at the Poinsett hotel.

Two colleges offered to act as hosts to the 1930 convention and it was decided that the invitation of Wofford and Converse should be accepted. Accordingly, next year the week before Thanksgiving, Spartanburg will be the scene of the gathering.

UNIT SPONSORS GRID CONTESTS

P. C. T. C. Companies To Battle For Campus Championship. First Game On Monday.

Students are looking forward with pleasure to the coming of inter-company football. This step to interest students who have not been connected with any kind of P. C. varsity football is being watched with interest by the whole student body, and who knows but that in this grand array of veterans another Grange or Cagle might be found who will aid Coach Johnson next year in his varsity campaigns. This step, taken by Capt. Wysor and Manuel. Taylor, is a great thing for the students and, although it has been many years since the P. C. student body has witnessed one of the gigantic struggles, everyone is getting pepped up over the games. It is rumored that "Bad Eye" McCutcheon, who, by the way, is the band's smiling fullback, is willing already to spot the other six points that the band wins the championship game; not their first game against Company "A," but that they win the championship by a margin of six points. Well, we should

Boxing Team Hears Summons

Wednesday afternoon when Coach Johnson blew the call-to-arms for the boxing team and issued the uniforms, a small number of boxers and would-be mitten slingers applied for the [illegible] attire. True, enough to make up a team (as far as numbers are concerned) drew unifroms, but not nearly enough to produce a real team, for it is well known that it takes more than seven men to make a football team; and it is with the boxers. It is hoped that more men will take interest, get their uniforms, and report for duty in the leather pushing game. So far three meets have been secured and the coaching staff is angling for at least two more.

Those definitely set are: Carolina at Columbia, January 11; Clemson at Clemson, January 17; and Citadel at Charleston, February 7. Negotiations are being made with University of Georgia and University of Florida, at Athens and Gainesville, respectively. If these fail, others will be found to take their places. There is also a possibility that either the Clemson or the Carolina meet will be transferred to the local ring.

Career Named As Frosh Councilman

As is the custom every year on the first Friday in December, the student body gathered after supper last night and elected the freshman representative to the Student Council for the ensuing year.

J. E. Greer of Greer, S. C., was elected by a large majority. Mr. Greer is a conscientious and loyal student, and it is felt by all that he is well worthy of the honor bestowed upon him. The entire council as it stands is as follows:

Seniors: P. A. Roberts, president; J. A. Babb, vice-president, and I. M. Sels.

Juniors: J. B. Green, secretary, B. Young and T. M. Johnston.

Sophomores: J. A. Cheatham and H. Gillespie.

Freshman: J. E. Greer.

ALL-STATE END

LYNN — END

Above is pictured Ross M. Lynn, powerful Blue Hose end, who was picked on the official All-State team as chosen by the coaches and sports writers of South Carolina. Lynn is most deserving of this great honor, for he has certainly played top-notch football all season. The entire team as chosen appears on this page. Other Hosemen to receive honorable mention are: Capt. Beckman, Green and Blakely, all of whom are surely all-state material. "Bru" Boineau of Carolina, was the only gridder in the state to be chosen unanimously. "Goat" McMillan of Clemson, was next with fifteen out of sixteen votes.

Freshman Class Names Officers

At a meeting of the freshman class last Tuesday, the officers for the remainder of the year were elected. The men on whom the frosh bestowed the honors are well able to carry out their prescribed duties.

The officers elected are as follows: President, J. E. Graham of Rock Hill, S. C. Mr. Graham played an end on the freshman football team and is

STUDENTS HEAR DR. WM. WESTON

Leader of "Iodine" Movement Makes Interesting Address In Chapel Yesterday.

The student body, faculty and visitors to the college heard an interesting lecture by Dr. William Weston of Columbia, during the chapel hour Friday morning, on the "Possibilities of the Nutritional Foods and Natural Resources of South Carolina." Dr. Weston is chairman of the South Carolina Food Research commission and director of the South Carolina Natural Resources committee, and has done great work in the strides taken by these two groups.

In opening his talk, Dr. Weston stated that South Carolina held the lead in the development of government policies from the time of the Revolution to the Civil war period, making a place for the oncoming generations to carry on this work and regain the national prominence that South Carolina once held. He pointed out that South Carolina had probably been hurt more than any other state in the Revolution, as more of the battles took place on her soil, and then going on to show that the damage done to her and her young men in the Civil war, the Mexican war, the Spanish-American war and the world war, could not be counted in dollars and

MEN ANSWER CALL TO FLOOR

Varsity Basketball Gets Underway. Season Opens With Clemson December 18.

With the end of the gridiron season, the ones who love to run around on a hardwood floor, scantily dressed, have gotten down to real work. Under the direction of Coach Johnson and Capt. Bobby Caldwell, the squad is fast rounding into form. A schedule of sixteen games (none of which are at all easy) has been arranged, and it will not be long before the familiar cries of "S-H-U-U-U-T" will be heard resounding through the halls of the gym. The opening game is slated with Clemson at P. C. on December 18. The Tigers are reputed to have a strong aggregation, so it is well that the cagers have seen fit to start early.

Those who have answered the call so far are: Capt. Caldwell, Gosnell, Hamilton, Cheatham, McNaull, Senter, Bowen, M. Adair, Roberts, Snipes, K. Wyatt, Mason, and others whose

FOURTH CORPS AREA OFFICER INSPECTS R. O. T. C. BATTALION

Major Ward E. Duvall Pays Local Unit Visit On Annual Tour of Inspection .Speaks Highly of Work Done Here. Praises Students' Military Bearing.

Major Ward E. Duvall, the R. O. T. C. officer of the Fourth Corps area, with headquarters in Atlanta, Georgia, on his annual round of inspection of all senior and junior R. O. T. C. units, reviewed the local battalion Friday morning.

Major Duvall had many compliments to bestow upon the worthy (?) brows of the P. C. cadets, and did so in a manner that was encouraging to all who heard him. In his talk to the battalion, he pointed out the good and bad points in the way of a true officer and a gentleman. He talked straight from the shoulder and it is felt that this note of advice and warning will be a great help in the future.

He expressed himself as being impressed and pleased with the improvement over last year, especially in the uniforms and equipment. He remarked on the manner in which the uniforms were kept cleaned and pressed. He also commented on the greatly improved bearing of the individuals who go to make up the unit, stating that they had a much neater appearance and a more military carriage. Another improvement that he emphasized in his interview was the vast improvement in military courtesy, saying that if all R. O. T. C. units saluted like this one, he would soon have to start carrying inter-changeable arms. Probably the greatest compliment he paid the battalion was the one to the guides. He said that he was delighted with the manner in which the guides showed up, in that their step was correct in every detail, precise and exactly in time, aiding them in keeping the proper alignment, distance and interval.

Major Duval complimented Sgt. Parham on the excellent condition of the armory and all equipment, and also expressed enthusiasm over the remarkable work done by the staff in equipping the indoor rifle range and arranging the large number of inter-

RIFLE TEAM TO COMPETE

Junior Military Institute Comes First. Competition Continues Until Next Spring.

The varsity rifle team will fire its first meet during the coming week when they will compare scores with the Junior Military institute, located at Lexington, Virginia. The Junior soldiers are reputed to have a very fine team, so the future officers of the local unit will have to do some fine aiming and squeezing to beat them. The actual firing will take place Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings at 7 P. M. All students who are interested are cordially invited to watch the firing.

Capt. Wysor has been untiring in his efforts to produce a winning team of cadets and it is felt over the campus that the target hunters will emerge from the season with a most satisfactory score.

No more competitive firing will be done after next week until after the Christmas holidays. As soon as this period of rest is up and the boys have returned from the byways and hedges, it is understood that a meet is in order for every week (except semester examination week), until March 22, when the National match will be fired.

The team of last year made a fairly good showing in this important meet, but it is hoped that the 1929-30 edition will rank at the top in the winner's column. Some thirty college teams are billed for competition, located all over the United States.

BUCHANAN

And still another flashing, new uniform appears on the campus and the streets of Clinton. When we first saw it, we thought maybe we were looking upon a visiting Rear Admiral of the Mexican Rebel Navy, but to our great disappointment, we found that it was only the agent of B-U-R-R-R-C-A-N-N-O-N, for these disturbers of sleep are certainly all dressed up, but we're not sure they have any place to go, besides the college, where they can enjoy the art of waking tired students from their peaceful slumbers so they will not be late for breakfast. True, the uniforms and other equipment "Buch" has added is a vast improvement, but why, may we ask, in the Sunday - go - to - meeting clothes, the great conrtast of colors?

As some serious mortal who lived back in the dark ages, would have said: Oh! Rare Buchanan!!! (With apologies to whoever said a similar thing about Ben Jonson.)

The military department requests that the cadets please refrain from saluting these officers.

McSween, Brown Go To Kentucky

President John McSween and Dean M. W. Brown left Monday afternoon for Lexington, Kentucky, where they will represent Presbyterian college at the annual meeting of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in the Southern States. This yearly meeting of the prexys of the various schools and colleges of the South, to thrash out their individual and group problems is probably the greatest factor in the direction of the Southern educational system. Everyone awaits the return of the representatives as the report of the progress of the debt deliverance campaign is a big item at the conclave and favorable action on this matter is expected.

As we understand it, the delegates are to be taken, after the business session is finished, on a sightseeing tour, climaxed with a banquet at Danville. The first trip will be to some of the gigantic hydro-electric projects on the Kentucky river, then on down to High Bridge, Ky., where one of the greatest engineering feats of the country stands in the form of the highest bridge over a navigable stream in the country.

THE SOPHOMORE ISSUE

And after another year has rolled around, the "rats" of yesteryear have become upperclassmen and another group of would-be journalists has been selected to carry on the work after the freshman issue of last year and produce the sophomore issue. Herewith, we humbly present said issue for your approval. We are not putting in any claims for the best of issues but are merely trying to do our best in our own incompetent manner. The staff feels that The Blue Stocking is a publication of the students, by the students, and for the students, and so we wish to thank all who have taken part in this work. At the same time, we would like to ask of the other students that they cooperate more with various staffs, both with contributions and critiicism. However, we would like to beg at this point, that if any criticism is to be made, that it be made to the staff or to the editor. In this way all will be benefitted. Adieu, until next time.

A LOST ART

There is a general concensus of opinion in literary circles today, that debating and oratory have lost much of the prestige which they formerly held. On every side we hear the lamentations of college professors and their wails of the "good old times" concerning the woeful lack of interest among students in this branch of the fine arts. Let us not be too ready to take up this cry, however, until we have made a more critical observation than is ordinarily done concerning the present situation.

In the first place, we cannot deny that, judging from the attendance at intercollegiate debates and oratorical contests, there is a woeful lack of interest on the part of most students. On one occasion last year, a visiting professor remarked that the interest at his institution certainly could not decrease, as there was not a single person in the audience except the judges at his last debate. As we look back on days gone by, when the literary societies played an integral part in the life of the school, and when the days of inter-society debate aroused as much interest as an intersectional football game does today, we must ask ourselves: why this thorough change?

This question opens an interesting field for speculation. Is it that this apparent change of interest from the forum to the gridiron reflects on the intellectual standards of the present generation? Can it be charged that we are undergoing a process of devolution rather than evolution? And if so, what remedy must we use? In answering this, we must acknowledge that oratory has undergone a profound change in the last few years. Bryan was probably the last of the "old school." Since his time we have not found a man who can lead a great party by his oratory alone. We can see him now, as he travelled from one coast to the other, from the Canadian border to the gulf, swaying great audiences by the matchless power of his words — often more power than thought. Yet to him alone cannot he attributed all the credit for his power over his audiences. With all due reverence to his ability as a speaker, we must admit that the psychological effect of the great crowds, and the elaborate settings and decorations, provided a background for the speaker which opened to him the path to the individual's emotions.

Then, too, in debating, we feel that the topics are not selected with the care that they once were. They are either far too old or concern things which do not interest the ordinary college student in the least. Why not try to go to the root of this trouble, which lies with the committees, honorary fraternities, and groups that select topics for debate? Why not ask them to consider the things of interest for this work, rather than the abstract things so common today? As we heard one college debater say: "I really don't know what I'm debating about myself, I'm only trying to shoot a hot line so I can win a debate and get in the 'I Tappa Keg' fraternity." Is this the type of work that will attract interest? If something isn't done we fear that there will be no more Bryans, Douglases and Lincolns.

MASS GAMES

Many, many years ago, in a kingdom by the sea (at that time, that large body of water in front of the present site of Smyth hall), mass games were the common things rather than the unusual. The pigskin sport was the foremost of these, with all classes producing strong elevens. Rivalry was keen and the playing was clean. True, other sports came into the inter-class competition, but not nearly so prominently as football. However, interest died out as the years passed and for several moons up until the present season of 1929, no interclass football games were held. But this year, the coaching staff and those interested hit upon even a better plan, that of inter-company athletics in the R. O. T. C.. It should arouse much interest and competition; so we anxiously wait for the first blast of the whistle on next Monday when Company "A" and the Band start hostilities.

But please don't think that the R. O. T. C. is the only group affected, for it is not. Another great outfit heard of the matter and decided to produce a team. This group is the Home Guard (more nearly—the Old Ladies Sewing Circle) and as soon as they are able to get the creaks and groans out of their joints and untie a few knots in their muscles, they should present a very formidable eleven.

As we understand it, no men who participated in football during the regular season are eligible, so it will be purely a beginner's sport.

A beard growing contest was held recently at the U. of Illinois. There were three thousand entries and a prominent razor manufacturer offered a prize of $500 to the winner. No statement was made as to what dimensions the judges used to determine the victor—length, breadth or thickness. Sweet Briar To the Front

Probably the first girls college in the South to allow smoking on its campus is Sweet Briar college. The Sweet Briar News says that Sweet Briar has now taken her place among the leading women's colleges in another way. The highest consumption of cigarettes, we suppose, will soon be an asset to the female institutions. —The Tiger.

Down in Tulane the more enthusiastic rooters have organized and All-Tulane Rooters club. This has as its purpose the strengthening of school spirit and also the systematizing of cheering out of a somewhat dazed and disorganized student body. The students will have someone to direct their cheering and at the same time there will be leaders who will build up the Rah-rah business. The slogan as announced is, "to weld all Tulane in one football-spirited body." It will be a fine bit of work if it can be successfully carried out. So far it has been received very well and is growing rapidly.—The Plainsman.

Recently the Madison School for the Blind, put forth an eleven which played a good game with a high school team. It was played under regular rules except for the fact that forward passes were barred. Sophs In Charge Of 'Y' Program

The Y. M. C. A. held an interesting meeting last Wednesday night with the sophomore class in charge. H. H. Welch, who was the leader, selected for his topic, "Christmas."

The meeting was opened with a devotional and song led by M. T. Murphy. The first speaker was B. Dunlap, who spoke on "God's Gift to Man." Mr. Dunlap showed that he had put much thought and preparation on his subject and made a very good talk. Next was C. K. Smith, who used the subject, "The History of Christmas." Mr. Smith's talk also showed much preparation, e. i. delving into histories and legends. R. H. Gillespie followed with a well worked up talk on "The Meaning of Christmas," which showed much personal feeling. As the closing talk, W. R. Senter spoke on "What Our Gifts To God Should Be." Mr. Senter's talk was well prepared and interesting as he handled his subject from an entirely new angle. The meeting was closed with sentence prayers.

Since the "Y" cabinet has invoked the idea of letting the different classes have the program each week, much more interest is being taken than heretofore. It is hoped that they will see fit to continue this plan.

say that this is the old true spirit, but it looks mighty bad for the Co[illegible] "A" team as well as the other teams.

Today, if you chance to stroll by the football field, you will see the warriors from the battalion working like their lives depended on these approaching games. In one corner we find Coaches Green and Lynn toiling with Company "A." In another corner we see Coach Ritchie running the much vaunted band team through their drills, and to the writer's opinion, you will see why Fullback McCutcheon is so sure of the outcome of these battles. All of the teams cannot be seen drilling at the same time on account of the scarceness of uniforms, but judging by the soreness of a certain group of soldiers, we know that Coaches Beckman and Dunlap of "C" company, and Coaches Ferrene and McQueen of "C" company have representatives on the field when they can get the uniforms. And last, but not least, a challenge has recently been accepted by the battalion from none other than a picked team from the grand old gang of "Home Guards," who refuse to play in the elimination games, but knowing the worth of his team, Coach "Speedy" Walker has announced that they will play the winner of the battalion elimination games.

Coach Walker, from the looks of his material, has a rather hefty team and they should give a good account of themselves. They will perhaps be seen in several "exhibition" games before their final game. Whatever they do, it is safe to bet that they will be in the semi-finals. And, as Stanford is planning her plays for the coming game with the Army to stop Cagle, so the other teams had better prepare themselves for the driving fury of none other than "Tracy" Fleming himself.

The remainder of this week will be spent in practice, with the possibility of an exhibition match being played, but the formal opening of battalion football will be Monday afternoon when the McCallites from Company "A" engage the Dendyites from the band in what promises to be a game that will be in doubt up to the final minute.

Wednesday, Company "B" will be macthed against Company "C."

The winners of these two matches will, if they still possess eleven men, be matched Saturday, and then the famous eleven from the "Home Guards" will wind up the season playing the champions of the battalion.

At the time of this article, none of the coaches will make any predictions, but Coach Ritchie says that McCutheon isn't so bad at making predictions, and a word to the wise is sufficient.

Frosh Prepare For Basketball

Since his return from a big fishing and shooting (bull) trip to Manning, Coach Lonnie McMillian has issued the call to the frosh for prospects in the line of basketball duty. Many good men are listed on the rolls of the first year men this year and they should produce a winning quintet. Several have had fast amateur competition; several were high school stars, and a few were high in their bids for all-state honors. A schedule of seven games has been arranged, and it is understood that several more will be added before the season opens.

The schedule at present is:

Jan. 10—Wofford at Spartanburg.
Jan. 18—Furman at P. C.
Jan. 25—Newberry at P. C.
Feb. 4—Furman at Greenville.
Feb. 15—Bishopville High School at P. C.
Feb. 20—Newberry at Newbery.
Feb. 22—Wofford at P. C.

cents, or any other way for that matter.

As he built up the case for his proof, Dr. Weston showed that research in bacteriology in the 19th century was one of the greatest forward steps in the history of civilization in that it eliminated the possibility of a great epidemic in any part of the world today. But going on, he stated that the research work of today in the field of nutrition would even eclipse that of bacetriology, for, he said, scientists have now proved that the food one eats determines the size of his body, his capacity to do work and to a great degree, his personality and character. He then went on to substantiate this statement with examples of true experiments carried on by physicians and scientists all over the world along this line.

He then cited the fact that South Carolina has the foremost food research laboratory in the world today because she has the greatest nutritional possibilities of any section known to science. He based this claim on the fact that there is far more iodine, iron, manganese, copper and zinc in the vegetables of the state than any other known country, and stating that these elements are some of the most important in the human diet. In comparing South Carolina with another great food-producing state, he showed that in asparagus South Carolina could show 578 parts of iodine plus the large quantities of minerals, while on the other hand, another state could only show 12 parts of iodine and little of the minerals, and so on down the vegetable list.

Through this great building up process, Dr. Weston showed that the South Carolinians had at this time reached the ninth and tenth generations, while in the goiter belt where there is a shortage of iodine in the foods, they could not pass the fourth generation. The same thing applies to live stock, and Dr. Weston stated that they could not even reproduce without having iodine given directly.

In closing he appealed to the young people of the state to go on with this work, to attract outsiders to the state that they might reap the benefits of the foods, but at the same time to hold their birthright and remain true to South Carolina.

Frats To Stage Hoop Contest

According to an announcement given out last night by the two fraternities concrened, a movement is being launched by the Pi Kappa Alpha and the Alpha Kappa Pi social fraternities in an effort to arouse interest in inter-fraternity athletic competition. It was announced by the fraternities that they would meet in a basketball game in the gym next Friday night at 8 o'clock.

The staff is heartily in favor of this plan and hopes that much interest and friendly competition between the social groups will be aroused.

collegiate rifle matches. He was also well impressed by the interest being taken in inter-company, mass games of football. He stated that he was delighted with the grade system employed by the tactical staff for, as he could see it, it is the most fair system in use in any of the colleges of his territory.

On the other hand, Major Duvall said that he received an unfavorable impression of some of the non-commissioned officers in that they lacked ability to properly command their units, as was the case twice in one of the companies. He suggested as a remedy, that non-coms be left in complete command of their outfits and that no corrections be made by the superior officers, except through the commander himself.

Another visitor during the inspection was Lt. Col. J. D. Fulp, superintendent of Bailey Military institute at Greenwood. Col. Fulp also expressed himself as being well pleased with the showing of the unit, and especially in the line of saluting. Col. Fulp accompanied Maj. Duvall to Greenwood where the inspection of the Bailey unit was held Friday afternoon.

Major Duvall expressed keen regret that he was unable to be with the local unit any longer, but stated that he was on such a flying trip that he just could not do so. He came Friday morning from his inspection of the military department at North Carolina State, and left immediately after the inspection for Greenwood. He goes from there to Athens, Ga., where he will inspect the University of Georgia regiment. From there he will continue on his tour of inspection over the entire Fourth Corps area, which comprises the states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, and Tennessee.

Amount Raised In Deliverance Campaign Reaches $170,000. To Press for $350,000 Goal.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the program of deliverance of Presbyterian college, recently held here, the records of the campaign to date were received, and the committee unanimously determined to hold the present organization intact, and press on to the goal of $350,000. The contributions to date total approximately $170,000, including Clinton's contribution in the early summer, and reports are continuing to come in each day. Many of the churches have not yet reached their goals, but are enthusiastically continuing to that end. Some churches have not yet reported at all.

The chairman, W. P. Jacobs, has issued an appeal to the entire church in South Carolina to rally to the support of the program.

The official organization, now complete, embraces over a thousand laymen. Every nook and corner in the state will be solicited and the program will not be complete until the goal is reached. The meeting of the executive committee, which was held in the Leroy Springs gymnasium reception room, was enthusiastic, and attended by men from every section of the state.

Chi Beta Phi scientific fraternity held a regular meeting in the science building Wednesday night at 7:30. The meeting was well attended and an interesting paper was read by A. O. Jackson. Plans for initiations next week were also discussed with enthusiasm.

The first Chi Beta Phi panel that has been kept now hangs in the chemistry classroom. It is hoped that the subsequent panels will also be placed there to decorate(?) the walls of the room.

1930 Grid Captain LYNN NAMED AS CAPTAIN

LYNN — END

Team-Mates Select All-State End As 1930 Leader. Green Chosen As Alternate Captain.

Ross Lynn, all-state end, has been elected to lead the "Fighting Blue Hose" in next year's football campaign. In being elected captain of the team, Lynn assumes all the responsibility which ex-Captain Beckman dropped when he played his last game for P. C. in the Newberry game.

Jimmie Green, P. C.'s triple-threat backfield man, has been chosen as alternate captain. Green's fine work in action for P. C. has led to the position [illegible] he was named.

[illegible] the guidance of two such leaders as these, coupled with the fine quality of coaching at Presbyterian college, one sees no reason why P. C. should not have one of the finest teams in the state, and it is expected that next football season will be one of the most prosperous that Presbyterian has ever experienced.

PaC-SaC Pictures Are Completed

The photographic work for the PaC-SaC has been completed. J. J. Steffel, artist, representing White's Studios, of New York, was on the campus for three days durnig the past week. During this time Mr. Steffel devoted himself to the taking of pictures which are normally "shot" in the spring. Track, baskeball, boxing, baseball—they have all gone by the board. Editor Fant Thornley may now turn his attention to the assembling and organizing of the other material for the year-book.

Battalion pictures were among those taken by Mr. Steffel on this trip. These photographs are especially noteworthy because they are different from those taken in past years. Forsaking the bare acres of the drill ground, Editor Thornley chose the aboreal environment of the plaza for his military likeness. The battalion, individual companies, the band, rifle team, colors, and staff, were all photographed on Wednesday. The addition of a beautiful background should greatly enhance the value of these pictures.

Another new departure in the picture feature of the PaC-SaC will appear in the athletic section. Individuals will no longer be "snapped" at full length. Instead, half-length pictures, giving enough space to physiognomy to encourage actual recognition, will be substituted.

Mr. Thornley is worthy of praise for his zeal in pushing the work on the PaC-SaC. The day of possibilities and probabilities has passed. It is now an assured fact that the year-book will be in the hands of students before vacation, next June.

Frosh Prepare For Basketball

About fifteen freshmen are out to uphold Presbyterian traditions on the basketball floor, and the prospects for a lively season are bright. Coach Lonnie McMillian has drilled the squad every day for a week, and they are rounding into form quickly, so as to be able to play Wofford shortly after the Christmas holidays. This is the first scheduled game of the season, to be played about a week after the return to school.

These are the men most likely to see action this season:

Barrett and P[illegible], centers.

E. Graham, Ramsey, Dillard and Copeland, guards.

Adams, Nettles, Lockman, Adair and Perrin, forwards.

These and others show promise of turning into one of the finest freshman basketball teams in the state. The men are fast, shifty, and have a good eye for the basket.

The varsity team gets plenty of exercise and opposition working out with the freshmen during Coach Johnson's absence.

Walter Johnson Named Officer

Coach Walter Johnson was elected vice-president of the Association of Southern Coaches and Athletic Directors at the annual meeting at Baton Rouge, Louisiana, which was held on Thursday, Dec. 12th. Coach Johnson has long been known as one of the best athletic directors in South Carolina and such a position was only fitting to a coach of his ability.

GLEE CLUB MEN ARE ORGANIZED

Final Selections Are Made of P. C.'s Songsters. Dendy Heads Company Again.

The final selection of members of the glee club to make the annual tour has been posted. When practice was first announced a goodly number turned out. However, some of these had to be eliminated and the rest continued to work hard, each hoping to get to make the trip. But since only so many can be taken, M. C. Dendy, the director, had to cut the club down to the following:

First tenors: J. E. Means, J. W. McCutcheon and H. J. Montgomery.

Second tenors: J. H. Myers, D. M. Upshur, W. H. Neel, G. W. Ewing, J. O. Woods, L. R. Williamson.

Baritones: W. C. Dendy, C. J. Martin, A. E. Raney.

Second basses: G. V. Burns, J. I. Copeland, H. H. Welch, G. H. Montgomery, W. J. Collins.

Pianist: T. P. Evans.

Orchestra Goes To Spartanburg

Tonight the college orchestra is going to Converse, in Spartanburg, to play for the Co-ed Follies, put on by the University of South Carolina. As will be remembered, the orchestra accompanied the college dramatic club to Converse. The students liked the orchestra and requests were made that it return to play for the Follies. The offer was immediately accepted, and tonight the Presbyterian musicians sally forth to do battle royal at Converse.

Debt Campaign Work Goes On

The campaign to raise the debt of Presbyterian college is still going on. While there is no definite report to make, the volunteer organization throughout the state is still putting forth its best efforts to raise the money as quickly as possible. They have been loyal to the college and have worked hard for it, and by no means do they intend to give up the fight now. President McSween is determined to raise the fund, and he has behind him the student body, the faculty, and all loyal Presbyterians throughout the state.

CLEMSON GAME ON WEDNESDAY

Presbyterian Opens Basketball Season On Home Court. Good Season Is Expected.

With only three more days to practice before the Clemson game here Wednesday night, the Presbyterian hoopsters have been improving steadily and should be in fine shape for the opening game. Since Clemson has had more practice and has also won their opening game against the Erskine quint, the Calvinists will have to put a strong team on the floor in order to stop the Tigers.

[illegible] has a large number of players to pick from and, although no team has yet been selected, the following men have been showing up best in practices and will see service in the game Wednesday night:

Forwards: Lynn, Adair, Senter, and Green.

Centers: Capt. Caldwell, K. Wyatt, and A. Copeland.

Guards: Cheatham, McNaull, Dunap, O., Mason and Bowen.

Coach Johnson has been drilling three different combinations during the week, but the above men are the most likely ones to play. The squad has also had a few work-outs with the rat teams. The freshmen have not had much practice together, but should put a good team on the court in a short while.

Return From Kentucky Visit

President McSween and Dean Brown returned last week from Lexington, Ky., where they attended the annual meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. They announce that Presbyterian college remains on the fully accredited list of the association. Only those colleges which have high standards, excellent equipment and adequately trained faculties are eligible for the approved list. Presbyterian college has been on this list since 1923.

For a while it was thought that financial difficulties of the institution would jeopardize its standing in the association. The executive committee of the association admonished Presbyterian college to free itself of the handicap of debt, and commended President McSween on the progress recently made in the matter of liquidating the debt.

I. R. C. Hears Capt. Wysor

The International Relations club met in open session Thursday, Dec. 11, with Capt. Wysor delivering an interesting talk concerning the history of the Panama Canal and diplomatic conditions as they now exist between Panama and the United States.

After a resume of the history from the time of Columbus' discovery, until the United States took over the construction of the canal, the Captain discussed the various aspects of our diplomatic relations with Panama and Central American countries. He stated that existing relations between Panama and the United States are strained, owing to the inherent differences between the two peoples and inefficient handling of said peoples and the uncordial relations between them and our governmental representatives.

After this address the meeting was adjourned.

The freshman representatives hopefully present this, their first literary [illegible] P. C.

[illegible] forth and bring into the limelight of the literary world, many a Chaucer, Poe, Kipling. We also hope that the old adage, "Practice makes perfect," will not apply here, for we should have to have so trivial a thing as practice mar our earnest efforts.

We ask you not to criticise too severely the statements uttered hereon, at least until we can pick up the game a little more fully. Thank you.

Once again the New Year is upon us. With it, comes new hopes, new ambitions, and keen desires to start the year off in the right manner.

We are in the sixteenth decade of American history. Everyone is looking for prosperity. Farmers wish for abundant crops; merchants want increase of trade; bankers are hoping that the country will be full of money this year. All are looking on the bright side of the eclipse, in this, the happiest time of the year.

Ever since man has been able to keep track of time, the coming and going of years has never failed to awaken his dulled interest, from the [illegible] of everyday. He [illegible] the old year into oblivion, and to welcome [illegible] more hoary hairs to the [illegible]

CHRISTMAS

[illegible] and a merry Christmas to all. Everyone is making ready for the most joyous holiday of the year. Christmas decorations and lighting are beautiful enough to behold on the streets. Families are preparing to invite guests and have happy reunions during the Christmas holidays. As we think of all these things we ask ourselves what we really mean by all this goodness and good celebration.

When shepherds were watching their flocks one night the angel of the Lord came upon them and said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour which is Christ the Lord. The shepherds were to have a sign, the babe was to be wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger. The shepherds decided to go to Bethlehem and see Jesus. So they came to Bethlehem and found the babe lying in a manger. That is the story of the birth of Jesus. Christmas is the anniversary of the birth of Jesus Christ.

Christmas has been celebrated for many years. We feel that we are only following a long established custom in observing it. But it is such a great occasion; shouldn't we realize its significance and not make of it a riotous holiday. There is a time and place for everything and at this time especially, we want to be more thoughtful of what we do.

We all expect to have a grand and glorious time during the holidays. [illegible] to the doer than many days of revelry.

TIME

There's too much hot air blown off about this thing called time.

As I settled down to study the other day, I began to marvel at the amount of time that really is wasted, and the various ways there are of saving time. Some say that by writing out a definite schedule, so that every minute is occupied, much time may be saved. Well, that is all right as far as it goes, but it doesn't go far enough. We may [illegible] every day adds something new, something vastly important to our store of experience, and if we tied ouselves down to a strict schedule, we should surely lose the joy of living.

[illegible] "Rush." A host of men have been saying the same thing [illegible] though we cannot think. Somehow, it reminds us of what Mark Twain said about the weather: "People have been talking about it for a couple of thousand years, but nobody has ever done anything about it."

Time and tide wait for no man, but if we use our heads, we can be master of both. Only when we learn the real art of thinking will time become of secondary importance.

DO IT NOW

By the way, from now until Christmas is a pretty good time for all the rest of us to clean up on our work and put things in good shape. If we do this we will have a better Christmas holiday season and come up to final examinations full of pep, energy, with the confidence that we are doing the work the way it ought to be done.—The Plainsman.

WHEN DOES WINTER COME?

Despondent Shelley comforted himself with the sigh—"If Winter comes, can Spring be far behind?" The prosaic South Carolinian may find proof more relative than this of the early approach of Spring. In fact, Spring is never far behind, but her hounds are always hot-foot on the traces of [illegible] see on every side some blooming, or [illegible] season, which is just around the corner of [illegible] tastes the Spring, and is already preparing for Fiesta, and which, also, still [illegible] and [illegible] Fair.—The State.

At Princeton, the frosh were called upon to name "the most essential quality in the ideal girl." Results were:

Physical beauty—75.

Week-end Trips Attacked

Yale's sacred tradition—of making week-end trips to various New England and New York women's colleges—is threatened with extinction. President James Rowland of the university, heartily condemned this practice, and stated that it might become necessary to make the undergraduates register two times a Sunday, so as to prevent their leaving the campus. Bravo! Another reason for going to college in your home town.—The Plainsman.

Getting out The Blue Stocking is no picnic.

If we print jokes, folks say we are silly.

If we don't, they say we are too serious.

If we publish original matter, they say we lack variety.

If we publish things from other papers, we are lazy.

If we are rustling news, we are wasting time.

If we are not rustling news, we are not attending to business.

If we don't publish contributions, we lack appreciation.

If we do print them, the paper is full of junk.

Like as not, some fellow will say that we swiped this from some other paper—so we did!

A well known Clemson professor keeps his car in the chicken house. One night last week he made a trip to Anderson to see a show. After the show, he declares that he found a nice rooster resting on his gas tank. ALUMNI

Emmet Reed Blake, member of the class of '28, of Greenwood, S. C., will soon complete his work for the M. A. degree at the University of Pittsburgh.

Joe S. Anderson, class of '29, is in training at Brooksfield, Texas, in the army aviation service.

LIBRARY NOTES

Circulation for the month of November was the largest for this year. A total of nine hundred fifty-six books were used, of which books of literature led with a circulation of over two hundred. The library was open twenty-four days, giving an average circulation of nearly forty volumes per day.

Books added to the shelves so far this month include:

"The Purple Sickle Murders" by Croft: "Moul's House Mystery" by Barry; "The Five Flamboys" by Bedding. These were given by M. T. Murphy.

Several books in math and physics: "Introduction to Higher Algebra" by Bocher; "The Nature of the Physical World" by Eddington; "Lectures on the Fundamental Concepts of Algebra" by Young.

Other books include several novels of Henty; "Light of the World" by Arnold; Koran, Speeches and Table-talk of the Prophet Mohammed; Rie's Economic Geology; Lectures and Essays by Slifford; Assyrian Discoveries by Smith.

One of the outstanding books of the year was also added, "A Preface to Morals" by Lippmann.

Judge: "So your only defense is that you were drunk when you kissed this lady. How can you prove that?"

The jealousy supposed to exist between St. Paul and Minneapolis is aggravated and kept alive by the newspapers by such references as this:

A Minneapolis man happened to be over in St. Paul the other day and sauntered into one of the fruit stores, picked up a large melon and asked with a sneer:

"Is this the largest apple you have in St. Paul?"

"Hey!" bellowed the proprietor. "Put that grape down, and have your truck backed up to the door if you want an apple."

BLUE STOCKING ELECTIONS

Next Tuesday the student body will elect new officers for The Blue Stocking, following a [illegible] custom the present staff is offering to the [illegible] recommendations. The men [illegible] have showed by their work and [illegible] interest that they are qualified to take charge of the paper.

The offices to be filled by election are those of editor, managing editor and business manager. For these three places the staff nominates O. W. Chapin, L. C. Jackson, and J. R. Kennedy.

Chapin has been working with The Blue Stocking for over two years. During that time he has done every job assigned to him regularly and well. He is a steady, hard-working, resourceful man. He has been in charge of five or six issues, from time to time, and therefore knows what problems and difficulties must be faced by an editor.

L. C. ("Red") Jackson is perhaps the most fluent of all bull-slingers the campus has ever known. He is one of those imaginative fellows who can take one fact, supply a few others from an active mind, and write a volume. He is a glutton for work, and should be of invaluable assistance to the editor this spring.

Jim Kennedy has been attached to the business end of things ever since he matriculated in 1927. He has held the irking office of circulation manager by way of apprenticeship, and is now ready to embark on a sea of [illegible] to the extent of which he knows [illegible]. As in the case of the other men, Jim is the logical man for the place.

Should the student body see fit to approve the nominations made by the staff, they may be assured of an [illegible] rejuvenated, and interesting, readable paper. It will appear regularly, and, barring fire, famine, and flood, will probably remain out of debt—a large item for the present year.

TIME TO BE CAREFUL

Between Christmas and exams it is easy for one to become careless. Give a man two weeks vacation and he'll work very little for another two weeks. A little leisure is a dangerous thing. It gets into a man's blood and saps his strength and his ambition. Give him a longer stretch and he begins to pall. Ideas are reawakened and visions come back. But with a little leisure it is easy to slacken so completely that it is almost impossible to get down to hard work again.

In the months before Christmas we settle to a definite routine. Work is charted and regulated and therefore becomes a trifle less irksome. Weeks

When time comes for vacation we are more than ready for it, of course. The first three days we sleep in a just for the luxurious feeling that derives [illegible] experience. After that we sleep late because we can't get up. We [illegible] about from one festive board to another, vomiting at all hours, sleeping late again. A la' Christmas grand."

Yes, Christmas are grand, but what a hangover she leaveth!

There is another week before examinations start. In that week any man should be able to review enough work to make the grade; but how many will do it? The majority will wait until the night before an exam, study furiously, and then accuse professors of favoring the old French motto—"They shall not pass."

The post-christmas era is a challenge. Are you going to beat vacation or are you going to let vacation beat you?

EXAMS

And now for exams themselves—for freshmen in particular. College exams are sometimes a cinch, but you can't bet on them that way. You'll be surprised at the way a most good-natured professor can grin and put up a determined fight when the time comes. Some of them pack a fearful wallop. One loafs and sees visions for eighteen weeks—and then the horrible awakening. What a disappointment to find that your old stand-by (you think, "well, there's three hours credit I'll get, anyway") can "smile, and smile, and be a villain."

For seniors, the exam problem is the problem of "diploma or no diploma —that is the question." For juniors and sophomores it means, "Maybe I'll have to take some extra work next year." For the frosh it means, "Maybe I'll raise beans and corn next semester," for if one gets by the first gauntlet without a mortal wound the chances are not bad that he will survive the rest.

However, the Automatic Exclusion Act applies to all classes; hence all classes must beware. A couple of unguarded moments, and even a good student may receive punishing blows. Beans and corn may also be raised by upper-classmen.

They Belong to Me." "I'm Sitting On Top of the World," "Yearning" "For Just a Cottage Small." "Remember, I Love You in Spite of It All."

"I'm Tellin' the Birds and Tellin' the Bees How I Love You." "I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover," "Pinin' Just for You." "I'm Just a Wanderer," "Precious." "Will You Remember Me," "After I'm Gone You'll Soon Forget," but "There's a Spark of Love Still Burning in the Embers of My Heart."

Oh, Yeah!

Most girls have Down in their Hearts a conception
Which they term their "Model Man."
Today while walking down the street
I met a type.
Tall, stalwart, strong,
With a keen eye,
And at his touch I am told
Every one will Jump and thrill and groan.
With the excitement of it
They will grasp his arm,
And look in his eyes,
And plead, because of this Same power he holds over them.
He may not be much
On a dance floor
Or on a davenport
Or in a porch swing—but
In a cushioned chair—
Well, that would be telling.
One little touch of his hand
Thrills them so they feel like
Jumping a mile.
There is a reason, too,
Just like the ads.

THE CASINO JOINS HOWLING MOB

How it ever happened we don't know, but it did happen. What silver-tongued salesman could have sown the seed and reaped the harvest, we know not. But here in Clinton, South Carolina, now (Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and thirty) there is a Vitaphone. There is one great comfort and reassurance attached to the possession of one of these tricks. Before it was installed the public was constantly in danger of being exposed to pictures taken about 1915 —now a picture can't be over two or three years old. In 1915 they didn't know how to produce talkies—praise Allah!

In this section of the country a talking picture is still something new. Put up one of those signs (you know, 100% All Talking, All Singing, All Dancing) and the backwoodsmen get out the Lizzie at once. Just try and park within two blocks of the Casino some evening! And there was once a time when you could enter the murky darkness of the interior and take the first seat your fancy fancied — but now, ah! those days of promiscuous sitting are over. Now you must go in and stand for a moment while you accustom yourself to the gloom. Then you peer hither and thither with an eagle eye. Eureka! a seat! "Er—pardone me." They reluctantly peel their eyes from the fillum and look at you with a fixed hostility. Then they turn their knees sideways for you to go by. You consign yourself to higher powers with a muttered, pleading, phrase and courageously strike out. You step on a toe, lunge forward desperately, a cold sweat starting out on your forehead. You lose your balance, clutch at something—anything—someone's shoulder. Your coat rumples someone's hair and he looks around with an air of smoldering hatred. Whump! You collapse in a seat. A man indignantly retrieves a mashed hat, but you have won.

You have won, but it is a meaningless victory. Tom, Dick, and Harry must enter and leave, treading heavily on your toes, rumpling your hair, sitting on your hat unless you husband it carefully in your lap. And always with the restless, uneasy feeling that you have to do it all again to get out. What price talking picture?

But it's worth it. No longer must you hear "Now we are aged and gray, Maggie" while the boys go "over the top." No longer must you sit tensely, painfully, while Ramon Navarro sings, silently, three reels of "Pagan Love Song," going through all the facial accompaniments. Yes, it's worth it. You have to fight for anything worthwhile in life, you know.

Literary Societies Hold First Session

The literary societies held a joint meeting on Tuesday night. The session was presided over by the president of the freshman society, Bothwell Graham, and was devoted to a study of contemporary authors. C. M. Plowden, Lawson Abrams, S. P. Watson, and Harold Johnson made speeches on various authors, their lives and works.

The freshman society has not yet been named and at Tuesday's session, a committee gave a list of names for the consideration of the members to be voted on at the next meeting.

A Year Ago This Week

Announcement was made that the P. C. rifle team had won from the University of Florida by a score of 3195 to 3046. The match was completed before the holidays.

The student body enjoyed the privilege of hearing Dr. S. S. McClure, publisher of nation-wide reputation. Dr. McClure spoke of a model community which he and his associates were developing near Calhoun Falls. He also commented on the advance toward prosperity made during the past year by both North and South Carolina.

The P. C. boxing team lost to the University of South Carolina by six matches to one. Neil Truesdell won in the bantamweight division, taking the decision over West of Carolina. The best melee of the evening was that between Leardo of S. C. and Lorenzo Wood—middleweights. Leardo was awarded a technical knock-out in the last round.

Professor A. T. Fant was reported as showing slow improvement while in Dr. Hays' hospital here.

Professor A. V. Martin was found, upon return of students from the vacation, to have purchased a new car.

The "Vagabond Son," celebrated P. C. columnist, columned for the last time.

C. W. Grafton, J. S. Dendy, and O. W. Chapin, were elected to the positions of editor, manager, and managing editor, of The Blue Stocking. J. S. Dendy was forced to resign due to lack of time for the job, and R. S. Crawford was named in his place.

Carolina Trounces Blue Hose, 44-19

In their second game of the season Coach Johnson's present crop of hoopsters went down in defeat before the University of South Carolina quintet by a score of 44 to 19. The game was rather slow and listless throughout, neither team showing any too much pep. The Gamecocks were sinking their long shots with uncanny regularity and in a number of cases it looked as if the basket were a magnet drawing the ball toward it, while the Presbyterians seemed unable to hit the bull's eye even on their "crip" shots. No individual play was really worthy of note, but the feature of the game might be said to be the exhibition by both coaches of their entire squads, for a continuous stream of substitutes poured in from each side from the middle of the first quarter to the end of the game.

Carolina got an early lead on the Blue Hose and never let it go, although they were at times guilty of some terrible basket ball. As one writer said, both teams looked more like a group of acrobats than basketball players. Carolina's specialty this year seems to be long freaky shots that some how get in; while the Hose are deficient in taking advantage of their opportunities. Several times the "wearers of the Blue" had good chances to score, only to make a bad pass or miss the loop entirely. The ball would then be taken about half down the court by the "Roosters" and some one of them would sink in a "girder-scraper."

Capt. Rembert was the high scorer of the contest, ringing up a total of 10 points. Remlert showed more form than any of the other performers. Senter and Capt. Caldwell led the scoring for the invaders with five each.

Coach Johnson had an excellent chance to locate his team's defects (helped by the fast opposition) and is working hard to overcome them. The "hardwooders" are expected to put up a much better scrap against the Wofford Terriers Friday night, and have excellent chances of turning in a victory. They will certainly improve as the season progresses, and by mid-season should present a well-rounded five.

The line-up:

Pos.—	P. C. (19)	Carolina (44)
F—	Roberts (1)	Rembert, c (10)

more, but Adair rang three in succession and sank a fine throw as the half ended, knotting the score at 9 to 9.

The play became faster in the second half. Wofford's passing and floor game improved greatly and the action was speeded up. Johnson broke the tie by shooting a free throw and the Terriers went ahead, never to be overtaken by the Presbyterians. Hix sank two while Johnson was making good more foul shots. Caldwell, Jeffries and McLeod mixed in one each. Only Keels was able to get loose, the Terriers guarding Adair closely and stopping his scoring.

The game ended 20 to 14 in Wofford's favor.

The lineup:

R. O. T. C. Issue During Spring

At the suggestion of the military department, plans are being made for an R. O. T. C. issue of The Blue Stocking some time this spring. Such an issue, being a new feature, should be of considerable interest to the student body. If present plans materialize, the issue will contain a wealth of readable articles. It is possible that an article may be received from the chief of staff. In addition, there will be articles by the commander of the Fourth Corps area, by Captain Wyatt, Presbyterian college P. M. S. & T., and by The Blue Stocking staff members, covering special phases of the work of the reserve officers movement and of the local unit. Students who have attended summer camp at Fort McClellan, Anniston, Alabama, will contribute short sketches covering that phase of the military training program. The issue, as a whole, should prove one of the most entertaining of the year.

BOXERS MEET BIRDS TONIGHT

tack on the Birds with "Nub" Truesdell, a crafty and experienced boxer. Truesdell was the only Presbyterian "mitten slinger" to turn in a victory over the Carolinians last year, and he is expected to repeat on this occasion. B. Dunlap will follow Truesdell into the ring as the featherweight. Bernie has plenty of speed and punch, being well able to take care of himself, so his opponent may well look for trouble. Williamson is the lightweight representative and has shown good form in the practices to date. He is expected to show up well in the forthcoming encounter. Fortson comes up for the next clash, being in the welterweight division. Fortson packs a mean punch and is willing to mix with any of them. A. H. McQueen, the only veteran besides Truesdell, will take care of the middleweight, and any who happened to see him in his last go at the Citadel last year will readily agree that he will take care of it. McQueen was not out for the squad when the Hose journeyed to Columbia last year, but showed excellent form after coming out, and has continued to do so this year. He packs an awful wallop, can take plenty and has the endurance. The lightheavyweight is at last filled after much hunting and speculation, with J. W. McQueen. It is not known whether he will enter the ring Satrday night or not, for he has not been out very long, but has shown good form and a good punch so far and may be depended upon in the meets to come later. Blakely is expected to be in there "mixing it" with the heavy boys and a good mixing is looked for. He is another who has not had much practice, but has the endurance and the kick in his "mits."

Carolina will enter the square of ropes much the favorite because of their expereince and the length of their training season; but if they expect a "set up" they are going to be badly fooled, for there will be plenty of Chicken feathers scattered around the field before when the hostilities have ceased.

So far, four other meets have been scheduled to follow the Carolina mix-up. They are:

January 17—Clemson at Clemson.
February 6—Citadel at Clinton.
February 11—Duke at Durham, N. C. (pending).
College of Charleston at Charleston. Date undecided.

There is also a possibility that another meet will be scheduled here. Announcement will be made later.

Terrier Pups Down Blue Hose Frosh

Spartanburg Herald

Two former Spartanburg high stars, Johnny Haynes and Ab Bullington, flashed for the Terrier Pups last night and the Wofford frosh shaded the Blue Hose of Presbyterian college, 37 to 32 in a thrilling and snappy game. The game was a preliminary to the Wofford-P. C. varsity game.

Haynes and Bullington, both members of the upper-state championship Spartan Hi team in 1929, were the stars of the game. Haynes shot 11 points and Bullington was high man with 15. J. B. Copeland, another Crimson Bird alumnus played guard for the P. C. team and showed up well on defense.

Coach Charlie Lutz's frosh cagers displayed a good attack and a smooth working team for the experience they have had together. Coach Lonnie McMillian's team also was a neatly clicking aggregation and boasted a flashy litle forward in Adams.

The line-up:

Erskine Court Men Win In Last Half

On Thursday evening Erskine's Flying Fleet staged a scintillating second-half come-back which defeated the Blue Hose basketballers by the decisive score of 41-19. The game was played at Due West. The score at half time was 13-11 in favor of Coach Johnson's men.

Captain Caldwell was the high point man and outstanding performer for the Blue Hose. He covered the floor in fine fashion and played his position well. Adair came in for his usual share of points, as did Cheatham, but the remainder of the team had difficulty in locating the hoop.

For Erskine, Hambright, McMakin, and Reid were the shining lights. This fast and shifty trio were the engineers of the great rally which so completely changed the course of events in the second period. Each of them repeatedly rung the bell from all angles, and in addition, their passing was superb.

The showing made by the team during the first half indicates that there has been a great improvement in the play since the Carolina melee. The defense is strong. As soon as the team

GLEE CLUB GETS THINGS GOING

Prepares For Annual Tour To Start Middle of February. Program Being Arranged.

President Clay Dendy, of the glee club, announces that the schedule for the annual trip is fast filling out. As usual, the itinerary will be in the lower part of the state; but contrary to the practice of previous years, it will take place about the middle of February instead of in March.

On Monday evening, February 10th, the club expects to appear in Bishopville. On Tuesday evening they will be in either Cheraw or Bennettsville; Wednesday is undecided as yet between Dillon and Timmonsville; Thursday is between Mayesville and Kingstree. On Friday they hope to give a performance in Manning, and on Saturday evening they expect to close the itinerary in Columbia.

It is expected that twenty-one men will make the trip. The glee club itself is composed of seventeen voices. Several of these men will also play in the orchestra, and in addition four or five purely orchestra men will be taken. Among the songsters, there are Means, McCutcheon, and Junius Mont-

C. M. T. Camps To Accept Cadets

In the past there has been some hesitancy in accepting members of college cadet corps for the Citizens Training camps, but a definite ruling has been received that college cadets may be accepted. Application blanks of R. O. T. C. students will bear the written approval of the P. M. S. and T. who will also note the course for which recommended.

It has been found that the college R. O. T. C. man is a great help in these camps and the experience he gains while at camp is a great help to him when later as a reserve officer he is sent to the C. M. T. camps as an instructor.

The camps next summer will be held between June 13th and July 12th and most of the men from this sec-

Y. M. C. A. In Weekly Session

Last Wednesday evening an inspirational Y. M. C. A. meeting was led by H. H. Welch for the sophomore class. The program opened with two hymns and a reading in unison from the first Psalm. After that Rhodes led in prayer.

The first talk was given by R. H. Gillespie on the topic, "Aims of the Model Y. M. C. A. Man." Gillespie outlined the purpose of Y work and spoke of the different ways in which these purposes could be applied to campus life. He was followed by George Smith who took on his topic, "Ideals of a Y. M. C. A. Man." Smith urged the gathered assembly to hold to the highest ideals in their own lives and also in their association with others and their work for the college. The last talk was made on the subject "What the Y. M. C. A. Man Can Do At Presbyterian College." The speaker was C. W. Anderson. He presented in practical form the application of the points made by the other men.

P. C. Rifle Team Scores Win Over Citadel

During the week ending January 11th, the rifle team fired a match with Citadel and Auburn. At the end of the week results were mailed by P. C. and Citadel, but it was learned that the Auburn team had been unable to shoot owing to the fact that their range was under construction.

Results received from Charleston showed that P. C. had scored a victory over the Citadel by slightly over two hundred points. This is largely due to the time spent by Captain Wysor and Tt. Taylor in personally supervising practice and giving individual coaching to the men on the team. Nearly every member of the rifle squad has, by hard work and regular practice, improved his shooting by nearly a score of points. If improvement continues with anything like the rapidity with which it has grown in the past two weeks, P. C. may expect to continue winning rifle contests this year.

The scores of the two teams follow: (Perfect score in each position is 100 points. Perfect score for each man is 400).

SELECTED BY STUDENT BODY AT MEETING HELD TUESDAY

New Head Has Been Identified With Paper Since His Freshman Year. L. C. Jackson Chosen Managing Editor, and J. R. Kennedy Business Manager.

For another the long long trail has opened. O. W. Chapin, of St. Louis, Mo., was elected editor of The Blue Stocking last Tuesday morning after chapel. As his aides, the student body named L. C. Jackson, of Marion, Ala., and J. R. Kennedy, of York, S. C. Jackson will hold the position of managing editor, and Kennedy that of business manager. The trio were nominated by the retiring staff and elected by a unanimous vote of the assembled students.

Chapin came from the Lindbergh city to mariculate in Presbyterian college in September, 1927. In December, he made his debut with The Blue Stocking readers when he edited the freshman issue. In January he was appointed to the post of frosh sports editor, a position which he filled faithfully and well until January, 1929, at which time he was elected as managing editor. At this post, Chapin proved himself a capable and reliable newspaper man. On several occasions he was given opportunities to govern the destinies of one issue, and in each case he handled the paper in masterful fashion. In naming him editor for the year 1930, the student body has merely given him, in a formal way, an office which was already his by right of conquest. Chapin is a man of ideas, energy, and action. In short, he is the logical man for the place. He is a member of Alpha Lambda Tau social fraternity.

L. C. ("Red") Jackson is the cooperative kind of man whom every editor should be glad to have around. He is never afriad to do someone else's job as well as his own, and when he has done both jobs, neither has suffered. Jackson has an active imagination and a fine flow of words. The Blue Stocking readers have frequently been entertained by his articles—articles that are unmistakably his and could be recognized in any place. During the past year he has served as frosh sports editor. Jackson is a sophomore and a member of Alpha Lambda Tau social fraternity.

Jim Kennedy has been apprenticed to the business side of the paper for as long a time as Chapin has been attached to the editorial side. In early [illegible] he was one of those poor freshmen who was conscripted to attend [illegible] and make dues. Once gravitated from this status, Kennedy attached himself to the directing duties of the circulation department. In this place he has been doing his work faithfully and well. Like the incoming editor, Kennedy worked himself into the position of business manager before the student body voted him there. He is a member of Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity.

Carolina Boxers Win From Hose

In the opening fistic encounter of the year, the Carolina Gamecocks stopped the fighting band of Blue Hose "mitten slingers" at Columbia last Friday night with a count of 6 to 1. The going was hard from beginning to end and the boys from the State University won largely because of their experience rather than the fact that they had more fight in them. We would like to say at the outset, however, that the writer does not agree in many ways with the account given by "The State," so if there are any who desire an explanation of the writer's remarks, it will be given on request.

Three technical knockouts were marked up in the bout, one going to the Presbyterians and two to the Gamecocks. The winners took their other four victories by the point route, while in the preliminaries, Presbyterian took the intercollegiate bout in the same way.

Hostilities were opened in the preliminaries when Parker, fast and rugged Calvinist frsehman, sent Stone, a Carolina frosh, down by easily outpointing him in a two-round contest. Parker showed up well throughout both rounds, never weakening and

Blue Stocking In Miniature

Next week being exam week, The Blue Stocking will be reduced in size. Editor Chapin plans to have a miniature issue. This will have room for the news, since nothing happens in exam week; and in addition will make possible considerable saving on the printing bill. It is also a necessary step since exams will keep staff members busy. On February 1st the new staff will make its first real effort. Watch for it.

JOURNEY'S END

In the opening paragraph of "Tale of Two Cities" we find something like this: "It was a season of joy, it was a season of sorrow, it was the Spring of Hope, it was the Winter of Despair." How often there come these mixtures of joy and sorrow, of alacrity and reluctance! Our bitter moments can scarce be separated from some hint of happiness, our happy moments from some taint of sadness. Humans are not made for complete happiness or complete despair. There is always some alleviating element—a grain of sorrow to make joy the sweeter—an atom of joy to make sorrow endurable.

Now that it is over, we of the staff may say that it has been a pleasure to have charge of The Blue Stocking for the past year. The feeling is closely kin to that sentiment expressed by someone many a long year ago, "She's a homely mare, but she's mine." There is a certain pleasant sensation that is derived from the sight of virgin paper going in and printed sheets coming out. And it is nice to pick up the paper, damp with printer's ink, and [illegible] there. One thinks, "Now I edited" I've [illegible] the candle, others disagree. [illegible] It is a true saying, that "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown." Every head that has shared The Blue Stocking crown can vouch for the statement. Every man who has worked this year for his imitation pearl in the ocean will give you two to one and even! It a good bet. For men may come and men may go, but the paper must always go. It may be ruled for about two weeks. After that it takes the aggressive. You find yourself helpless in its hands. It keeps you up until all hours; it worries you, depresses you; hurries you; it makes you cancel dates and avoid enticing diversions that may keep you too long. And above all, it is regular. Not like a clock, for a clock may run down; like the sun itself, which, until the present time, at least, has never been known to run anyway except round and round. To use a current expression, "It is you and the paper, round and round." The funny part of it is that the paper always does its chasing, and no matter how fast or how hard you run, it is hot on the trail, breathing out bad dreams [illegible] with every exhausted breath.

To use another illustration, you feel like the poor unfortunate in the comedy who climbed aboard the bucking broncho, stuck his big feet into the stirrups, and couldn't get them out. It goes through all the antics you can [illegible] and [illegible] you are obliged to ride out the storm. There's nothing you can do about it. If there is no news, you must go about sticking your nose into other folks' business until you find some news. If another fellow is sick or out of town, you must do your work and his too. There is no shrugging of the shoulders and letting things go by. "Let George do it," isn't in the editor's glossary. George gets the jump on you and lets you do it.

It's not like something you do for a living. You don't do it for a lving; you live (if you can) in spite of doing it. And when the thing is finished each week—after you have done your best and have come, to your way of thinking, perilously near to death in the attempt, some fellow comes along and says, "Say, why didn't you do it this way?" Isn't it funny that the other fellow, no matter what the job is, can always do it better than you? For that matter, can't you always do the other fellow's job better than he's doing it? And if you could swap jobs, it would be the other way around.

Let us propound a situation. Suppose you had been playing about in water up to your ankles, and had longed for the open sea. Suppose you had struck out bravely across the billows with confidence in your indomitable strength and endurance. Suppose that, after a long while, after many mountainous billows had gone over your head, you had wanted to go back, only to find yourself caught in the gulf stream, swept irresistibly onward. Now you must fight to get back. You are weary, inexpressibly weary. You must, somehow, get over those waves, rows upon rows of them. Sharks and octopuses and sword-fish play about you, having you in their power but never punching the cash register to take out the profits.

Well, there's the situation. Now we must pause to ask you a question. Suppose, while you are in this predicament, your ear catches the sound of the roaring breakers. Think what despair the sound would bring to your tortured soul. Think how sorry you would be to get back on dry land again. Have you thought about that? Then you know just how sorry the staff is to hear the sound of the breakers. We are only drowning. We don't want to see land.

The die is cast. A ne wstaff puts on the wet bathing suit and strikes out. Maybe they think they know what they're in for, but the chances are against it. The billows, in this case, aren't as big in close to shore as they are out there a little farther, But why keep on in this strain? They might get the blues when it rains.

[illegible] the incoming staff are good. We feel that P. C. is going to make a banner year in 1930, and banner years are always full of news. We feel that The Blue Stocking, under the competent guiding-hands of the new staff, cannot help but make a record-breaking non-stop flight. We, the outgoing staff, take this occasion to say to the new men, "We will have our eyes on you. Do not follow in our footsteps, but take a higher trail—start out on the trail that leads to the top. We believe you can make the grade."

"Ring out, wild bells, across the snow;
The year is going—let it go."

A worthy missionary in India had the hymn "Rock of Ages" translated into Hindustan. On re-translation into English by a student, the first two lines bore this inspiring aspect:

"Very old stone, split for my benefit,

"Let me absent myself under your fragments."—The (Furman) Hornet.

The Poet's Corner

Editor's note—Someone once said that "that fellow Anonymous seems to have written a lot of stuff." Well, here's another effusion that goes to the credit of the same gentleman. We are sure it is he because he signed "Anonymous" at the end of the letter which accompanied the so-called "poem." Perhaps readers would be interested in the little note. We reproduce it here:

"Dear Mr. Editor: This little poem I'm enclosing is an example of what I suppose is "free verse." I know it's free. No editor has ever offered me anything for it yet. Yrs. Anonymous."

And here is the free verse he offered, absolutely free:

To An Expensive Sweetie

I should worry
if you hurry from my arms to other arms;
I should bother
if you'd rahther know their charms.
There are others, girls whose mothers like to have them go with me;
and they smile
their sweetest smiles upon my knee.
And listen, honey,
I've no money—not a single bright rupee, and I shan't go pawn my pants to make whohopee.
So if you would rather do the costlier things, it's "au revoir"
we'll meet no more till we have wings.

Anti-Kissing Campaign

We do not wonder that even the students in Russia revolt, 'cause even Russia's anti-kissing campaign includes warnings printed on the postage stamps. The postal authorities don't want the younger generation to play postoffice. "When the universe no longer holds any amusement for a man, it is time for him to die."—The (Furman) Hornet.

How To Keep From Growing Old

Always drive fast out of alleys.

Always race with locomotives to crossings. Engineers like it; it breaks the monotony of their jobs.

Always pass the car ahead on curves or turns. Don't use your horn; it may unnerve the other fellow and cause him to turn out too far.

Always demand half the road—the middle [illegible] your engine.

Always speed; it shows people you are a man of [illegible] enough as [illegible]

Co-eds again! Here's something we [illegible] it from the Minnesota Dailey, who apparently got it from the paper at the University of Wyoming.

"It's all right to kiss the best boy friends good night, but 'necking' is forbidden at the University of Washington by co-eds there in 'Ten Commandments of Propriety,' compiled by the Y. W. C. A.

Sex appeal was acknowledged as a big help in the search for popularity, but there are other essentials, so the 'popularity code' discloses.

"Always be a lady," commands the code. "Dress in taste, and then don't let your actions spoil the effect. Be a sport always, without yielding your ideals. Keep up on current events. Light chatter is sometimes unwanted. There is always a time for serious topics. Do not 'neck' or kiss promiscuously. A girl whose personality is attractive enough can get by without it. Above all other things—be feminine!"

Amen!

A YEAR AGO THIS WEEK

Professor A. T. Fant was removed from Dr. Hays' hospital to his home in College View.

D. D. Beckman, of McClellanville, S. C., was unanimously elected captain of the P. C. football team for the fall of 1929.

Clemson frosh defeated the Blue Hose in a fast basketball game by the score of 26-22. For P. C., McNaull, at guard, was outstanding. He repeatedly broke up the attack of the Tiger Cubs. In addition, he was unerring at the hoop, and converted eleven points for the Garnet and Blue.

Varsity basketballers won handily in a practice game with Laurens Mill. "Pete" Dunlap, forward, played stellar ball and accounted for nineteen points for P. C. Coach Johnson used three complete teams in the fray, each team holding its own very well.

Debaters tried out for positions on the team. Those chosen were: Brunson, Cole, T. E. Davis, T. M. Johnston, Chapin, J. I. Copeland, Palmer, and J. T. N. Keels. The four alternates named were B. H. Dickson, W. E. Johnson, T. G. Ellis, and W. M. Blakely. The query used in the tryout was: Resolved: That some substitute should be found for the present jury system.

It was announced that Dr. Duddley Jones, professor of psychology and philosophy, would offer a course in South Carolina history for the second semester.

Dr. W. G. George, professor of histology and embryology at the University of North Carolina, visited his brother-in-law and co-worker, Dr. W. E. Hoy, Jr., head of the biology department at Presbyterian college.

"Bill" Weldon and "Monty" Montgomery were hurt in a wreck that occurrred in Laurens, S. C. Montgomery was severely lacerated about the face and neck by broken glass from the windshied. Neither sustained any permanent injuries, and were reported as able to attend classes before the expiration of the week.

The freshman class adopted a resolution to stage a play. It was also decided to issue a challenge to the Dramatic club, the two plays to be judged by a committee of five judges. Mrs. M. W. Brown assumed directorship of the play. Bill Simpson, Gus Adams, and "Caesar" Myers were appointed as a committee to aid Mrs. Brown in every way possible. It was announced that work on the play would be started soon after examinations.

President John McSween was absent from the campus on an extended "good will flight." The trip took him to Lake City, S. C., Charleston, Sumter, Columbia, Florence, and Winnsboro.

The rifle team, then in its infancy, scheduled two new meets. The opponents were Washington college, St. Louis, Mo., and LaFayette college, Easton, Pennsylvania. The first of these matches was set for the week ending February sixth, ond the other during the week of the Fourth Corps Area match.

The military department moved into its present classroom in the basement of Science hall. The room was painted and equipped with the requisite tables, chairs, and sand tables. Previous to that time, classes had been held in the lecture room in Leroy Springs gymnasium.

The Blue Stocking published a touching epitaph for the famous "Vagabond Son," talented but unknown columnist. He still rests in peace.

LAUGH, CLOWN, LAUGH

Willie: "Paw, does bigamy mean that a man has one wife too many?"

Paw: "Not necessarily, my son. A man can have one wife too many and not be a bigamist."

Maw: "Willie, you come upstairs with me and I'll teach you to keep your mouth shut."

Landlady: "And what's wrong now?"

Lodger: "I just wanted to say that I think you get too much mileage out of this roller-towel."

Mrs. Sharp: "Are you sorry that you married the man you did?"

Mrs. Catt: "Yes, but at least I've had some fun making him even sorrier than I am that I did."

She may be the apple of his eye, but she hands him a lemon, although she may have a cherry disposition. It is plum wrong, and if her name is Anna he ought to ban Anna. By this time he would realize that his efforts had been fruitless.

Clemson Court Men Win By Big Score

Clemson College, Jan. 17.—With four new faces in the starting line-up John Cody's cagemen defeated Presbyterian college here tonight by the score of 37 to 12.

The game was featured by the close guarding of the Clemson five, P. C. not being able to score until after the home team had rolled up eighteen points.

Gibson was high scorer of the evening with 11 points ot his credit.

Presbyterian was forced to make long shots at the basket and very few of these were successful. While the visitors put up a spirited fight they did not threaten the home team at any time.

TIGERS TAKE FOUR BOUTS

the bantamweight hook-up between Capt. Rogers of Clemson and Truesdell of P. C. Both men were hard-hitting, fast, clever scrappers. However, Truesdell was doing practically all the charging in and Rogers was unable to cope with the ferocious and continuous attack. Rogers has hitherto been undefeated in the collegiate ring.

Harrell of Clemson, gained the decision of the judges in the featherweight bout with Dunlap of P. C. Harrell was the aggressor from beginning to end and should have at least obtained a draw. These boys were both using a good left followed by a hard right cross. This battle was clean and hard-fought all the way.

Gassaway, hard-hitting Clemson light-weight, easily outpointed Dickson of the Blue Stockings, but he had a fight that he will remember. Gassaway is an experienced and classy scrapper and will deal out lots of misery to his opponents during the year. It is with keen regret that we have to see Dickson drop out after such a fine and courageous start in his first and last stand for P. C. Dickson graduates at the end of the first semester.

The welterweight bout in which Fortson of P. C. outpointed Cannon of Clemson, in the fourth round, was another of the mix-ups featured by clean, hard hitting. Both men were a little cautious in the first round, but after that it was nip and tuck until the bell of the third round. Fortson had been giving Cannon [illegible] considerably but the judges called for a [illegible]

Cannon's brother, Cannor, Sr., rep[illegible] against A. H. McQueen of P. C. But he suffered the same fate. This Cannon had a much harder punch and an excellent come-back, but he could not overcome the terrific body pounding give him by the rugged "Cyclone." McQueen looked even better than he did in his initial combat at the Citadel last year. He had to take a great deal of punishment, but his right was a load of dynamite when he crossed to the body and followed up with a smashing jolt to the head. How Cannon took the punishment he did and still stood up and fought is unknown. The "Cyclone" silenced the loud "boom" of the Cannon.

The light-heavyweight scrap was forfeited to Torchia on account of the recent illness of A. W. McQueen.

To Blakely of P. C., goes the hand of all who saw him make his courageous stand against the powerful Seigel. With little experience and having been sick the early part of the week, he entered the ring against one of the coming collegiate heavyweights of the South. From the instant of the opening of the first round, the spectators realized that the "battle of giants" was to be one of the hardest of the program. Both men sailed in with all they had at the very beginning and were both landing some good punches, but "Ruben of the House of Seigel" opened up with a series of hard right uppercuts that weakened Blakely to the point that his seconds had to toss in the towel, and Ruben won by a techhnical K. O.

Summary:

Parker (P. C.), 147, gained a three-round decision over Culp (Clemson), 150, in the unofficial preliminaries.

Bantamweight: Truesdell (P. C.), 119, outpointed Capt. Rogers (Clemson), 115. Three rounds.

Featherweight: Harrel (Clemson), 124, gained a decision over Dunlap (P. C.), 126. Three rounds.

Lightweight: Gassaway (Clemson), 139, outpointed Dickson (P. C.), 137. Three rounds.

Welterweight: Fortson (P. C.), 148, outpointed Cannon, Jr. (Clemson), 147. Four rounds.

Middleweight: A. H. McQueen (P. C.), 157, took a decision over Cannon, Sr. (Clemson) 163. Three rounds.

Light-heavyweight: Forfeited to Torchia (Clemson).

Heavyweight: Seigel (Clemson), 207, got a technical knockout over Blakely (P. C.), 197. First round.

Referee: Hines (Carolina).

Note: Several members of the boxing team have agreed that the following letter from an alumnus is too good to keep. We are sure the students and boxing fans will receive it in the same spirit in which it is written—with humor, but without malice.

Lightweight: Watts (Carolina), 136, technical knockout over Williamson (P. C.,) 134, one round.

Can this be our chum? It seems to me that Louie was trying to uphold the honor of old Alma Mater without having anyone to hold him up. He should remember that a sock on the jaw is worth two on the feet. Coach evidently outfitted his boxing team in pajamas. I suppose their fighting song is: Sleep on, brave heart, sleep on. And their motto: Requiescat in pace (but remember) Tempus fugit.

If you are an alert business man you can make a fortune by opening a beauty parlor on the campus, since so many of the P. C. boxers are having their chins lifted.

Is the team doing its training in upper berths? One does respond to his environment, you know. It is a shame that the P. C. boxers got their instructions confused. Coach told them the night before the Carolina meet to get plenty of sleep—and they got their dates mixed.

Yours for the manly art,
Dana McLendon.

C. M. T. CAMPS TO ACCEPT CADETS

tion of South Carolina will be sent to Fort Moultrie, Charleston. Little need be said about camp near Charleston as most of the men here know the city and the wonderful facilities for water sports found there.

A priority list is now open at the office of the P. M. S. and T., and students who desire to attend camp may leave their names and addresses on the list. College students who are not members of the R. O. T. C. are of course eligible for the camps. Application blanks will be available on March 1st and when completed after that date may be sent in without delay. The priority list may become a necessity inasmuch as past experience has shown thhat in this corps area alone there were over 8,500 applications received for the 4,000 places in the camps.

Dr. J. W. Davis or Dr. T. J. Peake of this city, will give the necessary physical examinations without charge to any applicant. Application blanks should be sent in as soon after March 1st as is possible. Students from other states may make application to attend the camps at the office of the P. M. S. and T., and mileage, etc., will be suitably arranged for.

GLEE CLUB GETS THINGS GOING

gomery to go after the high ones in the first tenor division. Among the second tenors there are J. O. Woods, L. R. Williamson, Ewing, Neel, and Myers. The first basses are Reney, W. C. Dendy, C. J. Martin, and Freeman Parker. Collins, Welch, J. I. Copeland, H. Montgomery, and Burns will delve for the low ones on the bottom line.

The P. C. orchestra has already proven its merit as a hot number. Programs have already been given in Clinton, Newberry, and at Converse college. Comments of a favorable nature have been received on all occassions. Brabham, Hamlin, Simpson, and Rat Evans, are the four men not before named who will certainly make the trip. Evans is pianist for both the orchestra and the glee club.

Several features of interest will help to make the program unusual and entertaining. A snappy male quartet, a saxpahone quartet, a saxaphone solo by the distinguished Raney, who is so hot that it tickles; a solo on the marimbaphone by the celebrated Clay Dendy; and a clever skit, will all combine to vary the performances and delight the audiences.

The singers have chosen a program in which classical pieces and those of lighter nature are placed in juxtaposition. A tentative list of selections follows:

Laugh, Boy, Laugh—Phillip Greeley.

Hunting Song (From Robin Hood)—De Koven.

Winter Song—Bullard.

The Open Road—Stickles.

Save Up Your Kisses—Kratz.

Two Little Fleas—Bogart.

Calvary—Paul Rodney.

In the Time of Roses—Reichardt.

Venetian Boat Song—Cadman.

This Is She—Rogers.

The Lost Chord—Sir Arthur Sullivan.

In addition to these there will be a few other popular selections of the latest publications.

The club and orchestra are working hard and will be in fine condition by the first week in February. The spirit shown by all members is commendable, and the officers of the organization are sure that the season will be as successful if not even more successful, as any of past years.

"I wonder if Nelson really loves me—he's proposed, yet has only known me a week."

never letting up on his offensive attack. The Presbyterians have an excellent prospect in Parker and he should deal plenty of misery to the fistically inclined opponents of P. C. next year.

In the first of the regular scheduled bouts, "Nubby" Truesdell, crafty and fast Presbyterian bantamweight, scored a technical K. O. over Kenmore of Carolina. Truesdell w asthe aggressor throughout and had a wide margin of points when the Gamecock seconds threw in the towel early in the second round. Kenmore went down several times under the terrific pounding of the Blue Hose flash, but was still fighting gamely when the bout was brought to an abrupt end.

Probably the classiest exhibition of "boxing" in the true sense of the word) came next in the mix-up between B. Dunlap of P. C. and Brailsford of Carolina. This scrap was nip and tuck until the third ruond when Dunlap began to weaken and Brailsford waded in with a series of hard left and right hooks to the jaw. opponent.

"Red" Watts, Carolina's next entry, probably made the best impression of the night when he gained a technical knockout over Williamson in the first round of their scheduled three-round bout. Watts combined a good punch with ruggedness, speed and a good head, and is fast developing into a real contender for S. I. C. honors.

The welterweight war, waged between Wilson of Carolina, and Fortson of P. C., was really the best mix-up of the entire card. Clemson Court Men Win By Big Score

Clemson College, Jan. 17.—With four new faces in the starting line-up John Cody's cagemen defeated Presbyterian college here tonight by the score of 37 to 12.

The game was featured by the close guarding of the Clemson five, P. C. not being able to score until after the home team had rolled up eighteen points.

Gibson was high scorer of the evening with 11 points to his credit.

Presbyterian was forced to make long shots at the basket and very few of these were successful. While the visitors put up a spirited fight they did not threaten the home team at any time.

the bantamweight hook-up between Capt. Rogers of Clemson and Truesdell of P. C. Both men were hard-hitting, fast, clever scrappers. However, Truesdell was doing practically all the charging in and Rogers was unable to cope with the ferocious and continuous attack. Rogers has hitherto been undefeated in the collegiate ring.

Harrell of Clemson, gained the decision of the judges in the featherweight clash with Dunlap of P. C. Dunlap was the aggressor from beginning to end and should have at least obtained a draw. These boys were both using a good left followed by a hard right cross. This battle was clean and hard-fought all the way.

Gassaway, hard-hitting Clemson light-weight, easily outpointed Dickson of the Blue Stockings, but he had a fight that he will remember. Gassaway is an experienced and classy scrapper and will deal out lots of misery to his opponents during the year. It is with keen regret that we have to see Dickson drop out after such a fine and courageous start in his first and last stand for P. C. Dickson graduates at the end of the first semester.

ture of the bout.

The welterweight bout in which Fortson of P. C. outpointed Cannon of Clemson, in the fourth round, was another of the mix-ups featured by clean, hard hitting. Both men were a little cautious in the first round, but after that it was nip and tuck until the bell of the third round. Fortson had been giving Cannon lots of punishment and had worked him consistently, the referee called for a [illegible] to the matter. [illegible] ing effect.

Cannon's brother, Cannor, Sr., rep[illegible] against A. H. McQueen of P. C. But he suffered the same fate. This Cannon had a much harder punch and an excellent combination, but he could not overcome the terrific body pounding given him by the rugged "Cyclone." McQueen looked even better than he did in his initial combat at the Citadel last year. He had to take a great deal of punishment, but his right was a load of dynamite when he crossed to the body and followed up with a smashing jolt to the head. How Cannon took the punishment he did and still stood up and fought is unknown. The "Cyclone" silenced the loud "boom" of the Cannon.

The light-heavyweight scrap was forfeited to Tor[illegible] on account of the recent illness of J. W. McQueen.

To Blakely of P. C., goes the hand of all who saw him make his courageous stand against the powerful Seigel. With little experience and having been sick the early part of the week, he entered the ring against one of the coming collegiate heavyweights of the South. From the instant of the opening of the first round, the spectators realized that the "battle of giants" was to be one of the hardest of the program. Both men sailed in with all they had at the very beginning and were both landing some good punches, but "Ruben of the House of Seigel" opened up with a series of hard right uppercuts that weakened Blakely to the point that his seconds had to toss in the towel, and Ruben won by a techhnical K. O.

Summary:

Parker (P. C.), 147, gained a three-round decision over Culp (Clemson), 150, in the unofficial preliminaries.

Bantamweight: Truesdell (P. C.), 119, outpointed Capt. Rogers (Clemson), 115. Three rounds.

Featherweight: Harrel (Clemson), 124, gained a decision over Dunlap (P. C.), 126. Three rounds.

Lightweight: Gassaway (Clemson), 139, outpointed Dickson (P. C.), 137. Three rounds.

Welterweight: Fortson (P. C.), 148, outpointed Cannon, Jr. (Clemson), 147. Four rounds.

Middleweight: A. H. McQueen (P. C.), 157, took a decision over Cannon, Sr. (Clemson) 163. Three rounds.

Light-heavyweight: Forfeited to Terchia (Clemson).

Heavyweight: Seigel (Clemson), 207, got a technical knockout over Blakely (P. C.), 197. First round.

Referee: Hines (Carolina).

Can this be our chum? It seems to me that Louie was trying to uphold the honor of old Alma Mater without having anyone to hold him up. He should remember that a sock on the jaw is worth two on the feet. Coach evidently outfitted his boxing team in pajamas. I suppose their fighting song is: Sleep on, brave heart, sleep on. And their motto: Requiescat in pace (but remember) Tempus fugit.

If you are an alert business man you can make a fortune by opening a beauty parlor on the campus, since so many of the P. C. boxers are having their chins lifted.

Is the team doing its training in upper berths? One does respond to his environment, you know. It is a shame that the P. C. boxers got their instructions confused. Coach told them the night before the Carolina meet to get plenty of sleep—and they got their dates mixed.

Yours for the manly art,
Dana McLendon.

C. M. T. CAMPS TO ACCEPT CADETS

tion of South Carolina will be sent to Fort Moultrie, Charleston. Little need be said about camp near Charleston as most of the men here know the city and the wonderful facilities for water sports found there.

A priority list is now open at the office of the P. M. S. and T., and students who desire to attend camp may leave their names and addresses on the list. College students who are not members of the R. O. T. C. are of course eligible for the camps. Application blanks will be available on March 1st and when completed after that date may be sent in without delay. The priority list may become a necessity inasmuch as past experience has shown thhat in this corps area alone there were over 8,500 applications received for the 4,000 places in the camps.

Dr. J. W. Davis or Dr. T. J. Peake of this city, will give the necessary physical examinations without charge to any applicant. Application blanks should be sent in as soon after March 1st as is possible. Students from other states may make application to attend the camps at the office of the P. M. S. and T., and mileage, etc., will be suitably arranged for.

GLEE CLUB GETS THINGS GOING

gomery to go after the high ones in the first tenor division. Among the second tenors there are J. O. Woods, L. R. Williamson, Ewing, Neel, and Myers. The first basses are Reney, W. C. Dendy, C. J. Martin, and Freeman Parker. Collins, Welch, J. I. Copeland, H. Montgomery, and Burns will delve for the low ones on the bottom line.

The P. C. orchestra has already proven its merit as a hot number. Programs have already been given in Clinton, Newberry, and at Converse college. Comments of a favorable nature have been received on all occasions. Brabham, Hamlin, Simpson, and Rat Evans, are the four men not before named who will certainly make the trip. Evans is pianist for both the orchestra and the glee club.

Several features of interest will help to make the program unusual and entertaining. A snappy male quartet, a saxpahone quartet, a saxaphone solo by the distinguished Raney, who is so hot that it tickles; a solo on the marimbaphone by the celebrated Clay Dendy; and a clever skit, will all combine to vary the performances and delight the audiences.

The singers have chosen a program in which classical pieces and those of lighter nature are placed in juxtaposition. A tentative list of selections follows:

Laugh, Boys, Laugh—Phillip Greeley.

Hunting Song (from Robin Hood)—De Koven.

Winter Song—Bullard.

The Open Road—Stickles.

[illegible]-Kratz.

Two Little Fleas—Bogart.

Calvary—Paul Rodney.

In the Time of Roses—Reichardt.

Venetian Boat Song—Gaiman.

This Is She—Rogers.

The Lost Chord—Sir Arthur Sullivan.

In addition to these there will be a few other popular selections of the latest publications.

The club and orchestra are working hard and will be in fine condition by the first week in February. The spirit shown by all members is commendable, and the officers of the organization are sure that the season will be as successful if not even more successful, as any of past years.

In the first of the regular scheduled bouts, "Nubby" Truesdell, crafty and fast Presbyterian bantamweight, scored a technical K. O. over Kenmore of Carolina. Truesdell w asthe aggressor throughout and had a wide margin of points when the Gamecock seconds threw in the towel early in the second round. "Red" Watts, Carolina's next entry, probably made the best impression of the night when he gained a technical knockout over Williamson in the first round of their scheduled three-round bout. The welterweight war, waged between Wilson of Carolina, and Fortson of P. C., was really the best mix-up of the entire card. "ALL FOR P. C. — P. C. FOR ALL"

CAPT. BLANTON BEGINS WORK

New Assistant In Military Department Comes From Davidson. Native Southerner and Graduate of Auburn.

Captain William L. Blanton, formerly assistant professor of military science and tactics at Davidson college, has been assigned to duty here, and took up his new work with the opening of school last week.

He replaces Lieut. A. N. Taylor, who was ordered to report to Hawaii last May after having been on duty here for six years. The new officer will assist Captain Wysor in his duties and will teach the freshman and sophomore classes in military science.

Captain Blanton is not altogether unknown to students here as several of the seniors were under him at the R. O. T. C. camp at Fort McClellan, Alabama. He commanded a company of R. O. T. C. trainees there the past summer.

Reporting for duty at Davidson college the summer of 1929, Captain Blanton remained there until ordered to report here the past summer. He was well liked and respected by students and all who knew him.

A native Southerner, Captain Blanton received his B. S. from Alabama Polytechnic institute at Auburn. He later entered the United States Infantry school and graduated from the company officers' course in 1916. Early in 1917, shortly after the United States had entered the war, he entered the service and served in France with the 7th division, regular army. He saw considerable combat service and was cited in orders for gallantry. In 1920 he became assistant P. M. S. and T. at Davidson, remaining there through the school term 1931-32, when he received orders to report for duty at P. C.

Captain and Mrs. Blanton are making their home at the former Spencer home on South Broad street.

Spencers Injured In Car Wreck

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Spencer were injured Thursday afternoon when a truck collided with their car on the Greenwood highway.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer were on the way to Greenville and were rounding a curve when a truck heading in the opposite direction met them and crashed into their car. The car was almost totally demolished.

Both Dr. and Mrs. Spencer were bruised and cut by flying glass, and were removed to the Laurens hospital, where they are resting comfortably. They will be able to return to their home on the campus in a short time. It is thought that Dr. Spencer will be able to return to his classes within the week.

Mrs. Hunter Heads The College Dames

At a meeting of The College Dames last week, Mrs. J. H. Hunter, wife of the college business manager, was elected to head the organization during the coming school year. Mrs. A. E. Spencer is the retiring president.

Mrs. Hunter has always been active among the members of The College Dames, and well deserves the honor given her. The membership of the organization is composed of professors' wives. One of the biggest aims of the society is the planning and carrying out of all of the social functions, notably the rat reception. In the past they have been serving as chaperones in the dormitories during the times of the Pan-Hellenic celebrations.

Schedule Made For Frat Meets

All Social Lodges Meet Monday Night. Y. M. C. A. Sessions Shifted To Thursday.

Schedules for meetings of all the social and honorary fraternities were arranged at a meeting of the honorary fraternity council Thursday afternoon.

The schedule has been arranged so that there will be no conflicts between meetings of the various organizations on the campus.

Monday night of each week is again set apart for meetings of all social fraternities. The hour of meeting is eight o'clock.

Thursday night of each week, from immediately after supper until eight-thirty, is to be used for Y. M. C. A. meetings. The time of these meetings has been changed this year to Thursday nights, instead of Wednesday, which has been the schedule in the past.

Blue Key will meet on the first and third Tuesdays of each month. The second and fourth Tuesdays will be used by Gamma Sigma for their regular meetings.

Chi Beta Phi and Sigma Upsilon will alternate on Wednesdays, the former meeting on the first and third, and the latter on the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month. The time for these meetings will be seven o'clock.

Fridays will be the busy days, especially the second and fourth. Two meetings are scheduled for these two days in each month. Lambda Phi Gamma will meet at seven o'clock, and the student council will have its regular meetings at the same time. There will be no conflict between these two meetings, however.

The International Relations club will meet the first and third Friday nights at seven o'clock.

On the last Friday of each month the Board of Publications will hold its monthly business meeting. The hour for this meeting is also seven o'clock.

No schedule has been submitted for the glee club practices as yet, but a schedule will be arranged so that no conflicts will occur.

Girl Students Are Back This Year

Last year the campus of Presbyterian college welcomed the fair sex back to its domain again for the first time in a number of years. The college has never been co-educational but since the beginning girl day students have, during certain periods, been allowed to attend classes if they live in or near Clinton. At present the future of the girls at P. C. is still very uncertain. The present plan is not at all permanent. The girls now attending the institution will be allowed to receive diplomas from the school upon the finishing of the required work. In other words, when the school accepts a girl's registration it assures her that she may receive a diploma upon the completion of her work, even if the plan of receiving girl students be discontinued before she graduates. This term there are 24 co-eds attending classes on the campus. This is approximately the same number that attended last year.

In manly valor the school has a goodly enrollment this year, although the final figures have not as yet been released. The freshman class this year is quite large and, according to statements from the high officials, is of not a few really handsome countenances, including one from Andrews. Four more students have made it known that they plan to enroll during the next few days.

Publications Under Board Of Control

New Body Organized To Direct Fortunes of Paper, Magazine and Year Book.

At a meeting Wednesday afternoon the newly-formed Board of Publications elected officers for the coming year, and awarded the contract for the printing of this year's Blue Stocking to The Chronicle Publishing company. The members of this board are the editors of the three college publications and two members of each staff. Those representing the PaC-SaC are: Collis Land, editor, and F. B. Pinson and B. B. Redmond; those representing The Collegian: John Osman, editor, Barney MacLean and Tom Shinnick. The Blue Stocking was represented by J. W. Combs, L. A. McCall, and Ben Covington, editor.

This organization is a new one on the campus, and was formed for the purpose of bringing about a better co-ordination between the different college publications. All future printing, engraving, and other contracts given by the various staffs must first be passed by the Board of Publications. In this way the budget can be handled with much greater ease than was possible in the past with the staffs of each paper working independently.

Officers elected at the initial meeting were: Ben Covington, president; Collis Land, vice-president; and Tom Shinnick, secretary-treasurer.

Bids from The Chronicle Publishing company and Jacobs and company on the printing of The Blue Stocking for the coming year were considered. The contract was awarded to the Chronicle Publishing company. The PaC-Sa contract was awarded to Foote and Davies, of Atlanta, last spring and so did not come under the jurisdiction of the board.

Swedenberg Visits Campus Friends

H. T. Swedenberg, popular English professor now on leave of absence, was a visitor on the campus last week. Professor Swedenberg is now studying at the University of North Carolina for his Ph.D. degree, which he expects to receive next spring.

Mr. Swedenberg is an alumnus of Presbyterian college and taught here until 1931, when he began his work at Chapel Hill. He has a fellowship at the North Carolina institution. After a summer vacation in Europe, Professor Swedenberg will return here next September to resume his duties as assistant professor of English.

During his stay here he was very popular, both as a student and as a teacher; and the student body is looking forward to his return next year.

During Mr. Swedenberg's absence, C. W. Grafton has been serving as assistant professor of English.

Glee Club Work Gets Under Way

Organization To Be Under Direction of Doctor Huntley. Many Capable Men On Campus.

Work of organizing and training the glee club is to begin some time within the next week, according to Dr. Huntley, who is to have this group of embryonic Caruses under his guidance this year. He is expecting to have plans made for this year's program within a short time.

There are nearly two score men on the campus who have had experience on the glee club in the past three years, and quite a few freshmen have shown themselves to be possessors of good voices. They will no doubt be on hand at the first practice.

The glee club is fortunate this year in being under Professor Huntley. While he has not had as much experience directing choral work as he has as an accompanist, his thorough knowledge of music will enable him to make the most of what talent there is on the campus.

Professor Huntley has been a student of music for a number of years, and plays both piano and pipe organ. He has played for churches in Rock Hill and in Richmond, Va. He was assistant organist in the First Presbyterian church in Richmond, was organist for three years in Mizpah Presbyterian church, and for a time in the Broad Street Methodist church in the same city. While in Richmond, Professor Huntley studied [illegible] Flaxington Harker, organist of St. Paul's Episcopal church, and a celebrated composer.

During his stay of about three years in France, Professor Huntley kept up his interest in music, and is keenly interested in his work with the glee club this year.

Musical Fraternity Brought To Life

At a meeting of Lambda Phi Gamma fraternity Wednesday night, W. J. McCutcheon was chosen president for the coming year. Lambda Phi Gamma is a national music fraternity that in the last few years has been rather inactive on the Presbyterian college campus. Last year, through the efforts of Gil Adams, the chapter was revived, several members being initiated during the latter part of the school year.

This year the chapter is planning to become an active part of the musical life of the campus. New members will be pledged at some time in the future, selected from the talent on the campus.

McCutcheon well deserves the honor given him, as he has been untiring in his efforts on behalf of the glee club and orchestra for the past three years. He has also been in the band for three years.

McCaskill Leads Frat Council

At a recent meeting of the honorary fraternity council, J. C. McCaskill was chosen president for the ensuing term.

This council, which is composed of the presidents of all honorary fraternities on the campus, selected a man who is well fitted for the duties of this office. McCaskill is a member of the senior class, and is business manager of The Blue Stocking, president of Sigma Upsilon, and a member of Gamma Sigma. He is a member of Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity, and of Sigma Kappa Alpha scholastic fraternity.

SYNOD SESSION IS HELD HERE

Church Body Considers Many Questions. Asks Trustees To Bar Dancing On Campus At Presbyterian College.

The Presbyterian Synod of South Carolina met for the third successive year at Presbyterian college a few days before the opening of school. Next year it will again convene here for the fourth time. The date of that session is to be September 5.

This year's meeting of synod was a busy one. The plans for the liquidation of the affairs of Chicora college, a major problem before the synod, took much of the time. It was reported by W. G. Query, of the liquidating committee, that the college had assets of $441,171.91 and liabilities of $377,542.58, including a $250,000 bond issue which was floated several years ago when an expansion program was planned.

The stewardship committee reported a budget of $200,000, which is a $100,000 reduction from the budget of the past year. Of this budget, Presbyterian college is allowed 12.8 per cent, while Thornwell orphanage is to get 4.7 per cent. A resolution recommending that all institutional budgets for the [illegible] be made up on a flexible basis to conform to income, rather than fixed schedules without regard to unforseen decreases in income.

At the beginning of the session Dr. J. M. Wells, pastor of the First Pres[illegible] ed moderator. This was not Dr. Wells' first experience in the position. He has also served as moderator of the general assembly. He is quite active in national and international religious organizations.

A memorial service was held in honor of the Presbyterian ministers of the synod who died during the past year. Among those whose memory was eulogized was Rev. Bothwell Graham, father of Professor Graham of the college language department.

The synod elected the following trustees to Presbyterian institutions: Directors of Columbia seminary, Rev. Alexander Sprunt, Charleston, and S. H. Edmunds, Sumter; trustees of Thornwell orphanage, C. W. Stone, [illegible] A. J. Law, Greenwood, [illegible] J. G. Mayes, Winnsboro, and Rev. S. K. Phillips, Columbia; trustees of [illegible] Seminary, [illegible] Judge M. M. [illegible] Greenville, and Rev. W. Ben Smith, Greenville. All trustees and directors [illegible]

Ticket Prices Are Reduced

At a meeting of the athletic council this week, it was decided to reduce the prices for tickets to games to be played on Johnson field this season.

This announcement will no doubt be welcomed by the many fans who follow the ups and downs of the Blue Hose. A much larger attendance at the games should result than would be the case if former prices were adhered to.

The price for adult tickets for the first home game will be one dollar, including tax.

Admission to the other varsity games will be one dollar plus tax, which will make the total one dollar twenty cents. Students from other colleges will be admitted for forty cents, and high school students for twenty-five cents.

These prices show a nice reduction over last year's admissions, and it is hoped that a crowd as much larger in proportion will attend the games.

THIS MODERN AGE

[illegible] have been against the youth of this age, and more especially the youth of our generation. Some of the older people [illegible] amazement and horror on [illegible]. They call us aimless creatures with no objectives, and have even gone so far as to call our age "the jazz age" and have termed us the rag-time generation, et al. Maybe they are right in their conceptions—but if they will recall twenty-five years and consider what was done then (we mean the results that were the means to an end at that time) and compare them with our accomplishments we have just as much to be proud of as they had. In so far as we have been able to gather the data, methods were used then for "sneaking out," and for fooling the old folk that we look on today as terrible. So there are two sides to the question; and today's youth have opinions and ideas of the past generation that would probably shock some of our elders if they were made known. If they only knew—maybe they would be more moderate in their criticisms.

Let us cite one instance that will ascertain our argument and demonstrate the change that takes place in thought and action in one generation. We understand that the Y. M. C. A. in planning their rat reception wanted to have something different and informal. The custom heretofore has been carried out in this way: the social department matched rats with the young ladies of the city, and these freshmen were urged to find the girl. He was given a street address that looked Greek and in some cases was told that the house wasn't numbered and to find her as best he could. The present "Y" administration thought that this was unjust to a new man, and therefore broke a precedent. In doing so they took advantage of Leap Year and tried to plan a satisfactory social. However, it seems that some of the older folk were astonished at this procedure and exclaimed, "My goodness, if I were a girl and was invited to attend in such a manner—I'd never go." If our honored elders were young today and possessed such ideas, well, we agree they would not go, for they would not be invited. During the years times have changed and in this social evolution youth has been enlightened. Why, no longer than fifteen years ago it was considered scandalous for a boy or girl to go to the store and order a "coke." And now millions flock to the soda fountains daily. It then was a crime for a fellow to smoke a cigarette, and today it is taken as a matter of course.

Our girls of today are prettier then they were then (according to old photographs we have seen), and why shouldn't they be? They have more advantages than girls of the past. Our fairer sex have ideals just as high as those of bygone days and they have the same sense of right and wrong, but look at things from a different angle. We take our hats off to to the girls of our generation because we respect and admire them. They have courage and common sense, and that is what it takes to face the issues of the day.

And we believe that the experiences we are having today are preparing us for the years ahead. For we believe that conditions will continue to change and twenty-five years hence we won't be able to compare the morals of that day with ours of the present. Our earnest hope is that they will stand the test and be found just as sound and pure as ours.

Modern youth has impulses just as noble, ideals just as high and desires just as pure as those of our forebears. And in time we shall hold positions of honor and trust, and we will fulfill those duties just as they are today and in some cases better.

But we will adapt ourselves to our environment and will try to understand the youth of that day better than we are understood in our generation.

HONOR — IS IT YOURS?

Just how do you rate back home? Do the people of your community respect you as an honorable man? If they do, just how much is that honor worth to you? You are worth no more than your reputation. If it is questionable, then your character is also. And what else is there to you—nothing. No man is worth more than the attitude that he has toward honor and especially his own honor.

If you are the type of a fellow that is weak and is easily led into temptation, take for granted that you have found yourself. Now, in the beginning of your college career is the time to correct that wrong. And it can be done if you have the grit and determination "to carry on." We believe that the code of ethics that a man sets up in his freshman year determines the influence that he will have during his four years of collegiate life. If he aims high and goes straight—he will eventually be an important factor in student activities.

On the other hand, if you come to Presbyterian college with loose morals, if you are so weak that you tremble when you walk, if your head rattles and if you are transparent — in other words, if you have no ambitions, no aim in life and no definite purpose for living; you are a "flop," and who wants to associate with you. If you are so darned weak that you can't say "no" when a fellow offers you a drink, if your pennies burn your fingers and it is impossible for you to stay out of a "crap" game—you need the sympathy and pity of your schoolmates, for you lack "spunk" and have a yellow streak where your spinal column should be located. In other words, you have no honor and will never be a part of Presbyterian College.

P. C. has an honor system, and the majority of her students are proud to be a part of this important feature of our campus life. We consider it a vital influence on our campus, as all of our traditions (and they are many) are founded in our honor. Our Alma Mater is proud of the men "who have gone before," who, when within her walls, were boys who held her honors sacred and today they are real men, and she can justly look with pride on them. If you have no sense of right and wrong and if your courage does not measure up to that standard which P. C. requires of her men—then you are not and can never be a part of our historic institution. In time you will be known and as a result you will bid us farewell in haste; mother's heart will be broken and dad will be grieved.

P. C.'s standards are high and it takes a man to measure up to them. If you can meet her requirements and have the honor and self-respect that every true gentleman possesses, then you will enter into our college life, respect our student government, assist its officers—your officers; and eventually your honor will make a name and place for you in our school life. Alma Mater can then look down on you as a favorite son in whom she placed confidence and in return was honored.

AESTHETICISM

Is beauty a snare, or pleasure a sin? Does appreciation of either or both, warp the soul and sear the morality of a man. Four hundred years ago it was thought so, and today there are those who would revive asceticism.

Girolamo Savonarola used to wander the streets of Renaissance Florence and in an awful manner foretell the doom of the evil-doers who read obscene books like Bocaccio, and who worshipped vanities. Then in the church of Santa Maria della Fiore he frightened people with his prophecies. What an effective prophet, this ugly, but seemingly inspired Dominican monk.

They hanged and burned Savonarola and threw his ashes in the River Arno. Such was the end of a great conscientious objector to people enjoying life. They had a great storm right after his death and people still believe that the Dominican was chosen of God.

Lige about as is beautiful; I see no need of putting on robes, a cowl, wear a rosary and go my way with a bowed head, telling my rosary. Some would even have us wear blinders that we might not see beauty about us and thus be snared into evil ways by some necromancing woman.

The point I want to make is that we are getting away from the aesthetic and becoming prudish in the extreme. No one now studies music, sculpture and painting as they used to. The fine arts are unappreciated. We are losing our perception of the fine things of life. This country today is, as far as aestheticism is concerned, entirely indifferent and neglectful.

I think that it comes from a narrowness of perspection, produced by the warped and bent ideas of conventionality existent today. A Correggio is looked upon as an obscene picture by a great number of people. The Faun of the Renaissance, as a sensuous painter of nudity, not as the Ariel who graces the canvas with such delicate subjects that they seem slighly beyond humanness.

Sculpture is always the recipient of criticism, the anatomical perfection is forgotten, always, in favor of the lewd thought. Because critics are lewd, we who would enjoy a Rodin or a Michaelangelo are termed as lightly soiled in our thoughts.

As for music, where is the man who knows of Wagner, Verdi, Gounod or Chopin.

The greatest thing that could happen to the nation is not an economical prosperity, but a newborn consciousness of fine arts; of the aesthetic. People would enjoy pictures of da Vinci, Raphael, and know of Cimabue and Giotto. They would know that Venus de Medici was distinctly not Venus de Milo, would know the Laocoon, the Victory of Thrace and enjoy the knowledge. Maybe we would recognize Habanera from Carmen and know the story of Faust.

Anyway, the purpose of this article is now accomplished. I have taken up enough space to fill my allotment on the editorial page.

However, think this over: you will get a kick out of some of these things if you give them a chance to get at you.

If we could get aesthetic, life would be a grand path strewn with roses down a street paved with diamond studded gold bricks.

We shall not, because beauty is a snare, pleasure a sin for the naive and unsophisticated college man — at least so we're told.

. . . tobaccos made for cigarettes and pipes; granulated tobaccos. But there was plenty of room for a tobacco made solely for pipes.

If you look, you will find that a great many tobacco packages say "for pipe and cigarettes." But the Granger package says:

PRESBYTERIAN LOSES FIRST GAME TO CLEMSON, 13 TO 0

Tigers Score Two Touchdowns In First Half. Weight and Experience Is Deciding Factor In Contest.

Second Half Was Calvinist Victory

Blue Stockings Come Back and Hold Clemson To Zero Yardage. Punch To Score Lacking.

By Walker Combs, Jr.

Fighting until the last whistle sounded, the Presbyterian college football team ceded victory to the Clemson Tigers by the score of 13-0. Twice during the game P. C. was within scoring distance, but the superior weight and strength of the Clemson eleven was too much.

The game was played Friday afternoon at Clemson.

Superior weight and experience was the deciding factor. Clemson men were almost twenty pounds heavier than Presbyterian. In the starting line-up of Presbyterian there were four sophomores, and in all twelve sophomores played. Once, however, the Presbyterian squad got the feel of the game, they played Clemson on more than even terms. In the whole contest, Clemson made only two more touchdowns, gained twenty more yards from scrimmage, thirty more yards by passing. Clemson had the advantage of the punting most of the time, especially during the first half, and this factor was one of the main reasons for the score.

When Clemson's touchdowns were scored in the first half. If either team held the upper hand during the second period, it was the Blue Hose. Starting out with an advantage in the punting, the Tigers soon placed the Blue Stockings on the defensive. Two good punts by Clemson, and two returns by Perrin, which were high but short, together with a fumble by Clemson which was recovered by Patterson for a 10-yard gain, brought the ball to Presbyterian's 21-yard line. Willimon was then run for five successive plays, reversing, twisting, and driving the line, to put the first tally over. Clemson had begun the game with heads up football and had swept through in the first few minutes before the Blue Hose were acclimated. Try for extra point failed.

For the rest of the quarter, following Copeland's kickoff, which gave Clemson the ball on their own 20-yard line, the offensives of both teams were working evenly. Perrin was gaining steadily, and Adams' punts were leaving their mark. The quarter ended with the ball on the 40-yard line, in Clemson's territory.

As the second quarter began, Woodward proved to be the mainstay of the Clemson offense. Two runs accounted for nine yards, and then a pass, of which he was the receiver, was responsible for the second six points scored by the Tigers. Miller's try for point after touchdown was successful. The score was now 13-0, in favor of the Tigers.

Presbyterian then seemed to hit their stride. This 13-point lead was to stay, but for the rest of the game, except for brief moments, it was the Clemson team that was on the defensive. For the rest of the half, Clemson's gain from the line of scrimmage was exactly equal to zero yardage. Lynn was swamped in his tracks. Barrett clipped off 10 yards, and later, on two times with the ball, gained seven yards. Parrin gained successively three, four and a half, and twelve yards, with a total of three more yards added.

P. C. recovered a fumble by Hook. Adams completed a long pass to Pinson, and Barrett and Bolick hit the line for gains of three and four yards, to carry the ball to the Clemson 3-yard line. Four downs were available, and of the same circumstance.

LENOIR-RHYNE NEXT OPPONENT

North State Men To Play Presbyterians Here Saturday. Expect Presbyterian To Have Improved Team.

Presbyterian meets Lenoir-Rhyne on home grounds next Saturday afternoon. With performances Friday as an indication, P. C. will likely more than repeat last year's score, when they bested the Rhyners by two touchdowns.

This week Coach Johnson will spend his time smoothing out the rough places in his team that appeared Friday. Especially will he build up his offensive to a perfectly coordinated machine, able to score even when the opposition digs in and holds with all their power. Eichelberger will also have some work in strengthening his line.

In two weeks' time the two coaches have done remarkably well. All football experts in the state were surprised by Friday's game. But with one more week, Coach Johnson will have a team that has few peers. The spirits of the team are higher than even before the Clemson game.

Punting, a noticeably weak point, will also claim attention. But with a little polishing, the Blue Stocking eleven will loom as one of the strongest teams in the S. I. A. A. Lenoir-Rhyne will need a great deal more power than was apparent in her performance against Wofford.

when the final was used, the ball was resting on the one-foot line. The half ended before Clemson had time to complete a play.

The Blue Stockings of the second half were not the same as those over which Clemson scored the touchdowns. They absolutely refused to give any quarter. Adams' punts were good, and two passes, one to Barrett and one to Pinson, were perfectly executed. Bolick twisted his way for a 15-yard gain, and Hamer made substantial gains. For the last ten minutes of the game, the ball not once left Clemson territory. Coach Johnson's substitutions held their own against the powerful Tiger eleven, and the game ended with the Blue Stockings fighting the Tiger back on Clemson's own 40-yard line.

Johnson Pleased With Team

No matter what the score of the Clemson game, Coach Johnson was highly pleased in the end with the way the boys accounted for themselves. Not a man on the team could be accused of laying down on the job. A comparatively new team learned much from the first half of the Clemson game, and Coach Johnson was proud of his men. In the dressing room after the game Friday he gave his men a heart to heart talk, and the enthusiasm in that camp from that time on was high, so much so that many experts predict that P. C. is due to have many successful years.

FIFTY FROSH ANSWER CALL

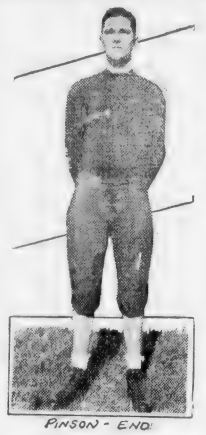
First Year Men Are Light But Fast. Several "Finds" Are In Lot. Schedule Announced.

On Thursday, Sept. 15, Coach Lonnie McMillian sent out a call for freshman football men and the call was answered by nearly 50 men, including some of the best prep players in the state.

With a week of practice behind them, some of the men are beginning to stand out. Horn, although exceptionally light, has the makings of a good center. Correll is also showing up well at guard. The line this year is very light in all positions, but the men are scrappy and fast and will make up for the lack of weight.

The backfield weighs as much as it usually does, with Denny showing up at fullback. Coach McMillian has uncovered two good passers in Wilbanks and Holladay. It looks as if the offensive this year will be built around passes on account of the light line.

The full schedule includes five games:



Friday, Oct. 21.—Erskine at Clinton.
Saturday, Oct. 29.—Clemson at Clemson.
Thursday, Nov. 3.—Newberry at Clinton.
Friday, Nov. 18.—Wofford at Spartanburg.
Thursday, Nov. 24.—Citadel at Charleston.

Although Coach McMillian isn't expecting anything wonderful from the frosh, he seems to think that the team will be good enough to fill the place that the P. C. rat teams have made for themselves in state circles.

Clark Out of Line-Up

Bill Clark, of Union, will be out of the P. C. line-up for several weeks, due to a sprained ankle. Before his injury he was one of the star candidates for quarterback. He passes, runs like a deer, and runs the team like a man of three years varsity experience. The Union "phantom," however, may have to forego stardom because of his injury. Coach Johnson will miss this product of Roy Hogrefe many times during the coming season.

P. C. Grid Leader

PINSON - END.

Pinson, Greenville boy, and captain of the 1932 edition of Presbyterian's gridiron artists, is one of the outstanding flankmen in these parts. He is playing his last year.

BLUE HOSE TEAM SEES FURMAN-INDIAN GAME

The Presbyterian football team Saturday afternoon attended the game between Furman and Newberry in Greenville. Coach Walter Johnson was anxious for the men to watch Newberry's team in action, as P. C. and Newberry play later in the season. In view of the fact that the Lutherans were heralded as a vastly improved team, this trip was to familiarize the team with their plays and tactics, as well as to simply watch other teams in action.

Entire Team At Clemson

The entire Presbyterian football squad, consisting of 38 men, went to Clemson Friday. Coach Johnson decided that every player who has been out all season should be taken on the trip. Most of the student body attended the game, since Friday had been chosen as the athletic holiday by the student body. It is estimaetd that some two hundred of the students were at the game.

Strange Doings At "Mansion Of Hospitality" On Tuesday Night

W[illegible] the upper classmen were [illegible] what strange. All members of the fac[illegible]ulty entertained the members of the Fresh[illegible]ity contingent of the campus [illegible] the occasion being the annual get-acquainted night celebration, dean's "mansion of hospitality" were [illegible] the scenes of much mirth. Mrs. Brimm [illegible] presided at the piano in the music [illegible] room, and captivated Dean Brown [illegible] with her interpretations of all the [illegible] latest jazz hits of the day, while Mrs. [illegible] Brown was in another room, of course. [illegible] The music was also used for a pe[illegible]culiar form of dancing in which the [illegible] partners sat in adjoining chairs and [illegible] spilled the latest gossip.

In the living room the guests sat on the edge of their chairs playing caroms. Although the editor has tried very hard to find who the winners were, that is still a deep dark secret. But on one sofa sat the campus groom, with the president's secretary. Mrs. Grafton was very charmingly entertained in conversation with [illegible].

The climax of the evening came when Mr. Hunter approached the end of the cafeteria style line in the dining room, and asked where the cashier was. It seems that the business manager had become so used to eating in cafeterias during his extensive travels this summer, that even at a formal buffet dinner he was looking for a bill.

The reporter has heard several tales about the behavior of the highly respected and dearly loved Capt. Wysor and Dr. Davis (of Science hall fame). If a student is not afraid of his grades in either of these gentlemen's classes, he might ask them what the game they played was, and who the other men thus engaged were.

Now, really, folks, don't think for a minute that this is an attempt to belittle any reception accorded such honorable personages, but think of this article as a new way of "writing up" a very formal and up-to-date affair. The evening was most enjoyable and, although this article may lead you to believe that it was something very peculiar, let me say in closing that it was one of the most enjoyable occasions ever attended by authorities of Presbyterian college(even if it was on the rats' bad night).

Freshmen Given Warm Welcome

Annual "Rat Run" Held Tuesday Night. Sophomores See To It That Men Are "Entertained."

The outstanding event of the season for the freshmen took place Tuesday night in the form of a general pants-warming parade which began in front of Spencer dormitory at a snail's pace and ended at the railroad crossing uptown in bursts of speed which caused Coach Lonnie Mac to heave great sighs. It was the annual "rat run," always looked forward to by members of the first year class.

Following a custom of year's standing, the management of the Casino theatre gave a free show to the new men, and stores and cafes uptown donated "eats." The places where the rats were fed were Clinton Cafe, Sadler-Owens Pharmacy, L. B. Dillard's, P. S. Jeanes, and Kellers Drug Store. The sophomore class also donated to the general welfare of the first year men.

The parade started in front of Spencer dormitory, with the freshmen clinging to the rope like Alpine climbers; and with Rat Tiller at the helm, made its way to Dr. McSween's lawn, where a sample of freshman cheering was given for the benefit of Dr. McSween's assembled guests. Then, loudly chanting the refrain, "We're gonna ride ole Clemson on a rail," the horde moved on the "Home of Peace" at Thornwell orphanage. But the girls were studying, and in spite of loud and mournful lamentations, the peace would not be disturbed and the sad procession moved on into the city. After stops at L. B. Dillard's, Sadler-Owens, and Clinton Cafe for sustenance, a performance was put on at the monument. The onion eating contest ended in a deadlock; while "Red" Potter took the hog-calling contest in a walk-away. A quartette composed of "Fat" Ferguson, "Tincy" Belk, "Terrible" Crymes, and "Burr Head" Denny gave several heart-rending selections before the punishment began. The gauntlet began at the corner of Broad and Pitts streets and went down to the railroad tracks. The rats crossed the tracks at full speed and dashed straight into the theatre.

A good time was had by all, believe it or not.

RELIGIOUS ACTIVITIES

The first meeting of the Ministerial club is called for 1:45 p. m. Sunday, Sept. 25. All old members are asked to be present, and all new men cordially invited to attend. Of course, as the name implies, this club is primarily for those men who are candidates for the Gospel ministry; however, all men, freshmen or upper classmen, who are interested in Christian work, are urged to join the club. A chance will be given them for active Christian service during the school year. The club not only intends to cooperate with the Y. M. C. A. in spreading a Christian spirit on the P. C. campus, but also to help the men who compose its membership.

Brief devotional exercises will be led by F. B. Parker, after which plans and business for the ensuing year will be discussed.

There is a welcome for all who care to come to the college auditorium Sunday, and meet with the Ministerial club at its first meeting of the year.

Don't forget the college students' Sunday school class at the First Presbyterian church at 10 a. m. This is a special class for the college men and will be led by one of the professors.

Hi-Y News

The Clinton Hi-Y club, sponsored by the college Y .M. C. A., reopened its meetings Thursday night, September 15. The club lost several men last year through graduation, and twelve men were initiated into the lodge Thursday night.

All who desire to attend the meetings are welcome to do so. The club meets each Thursday night, at 7:30 in the "Y" room in the gym.

LIBRARY NOTES

At this time we are well started on a new school year. The library will have to stay open over time to break last year's record. During the 1931-32 session the library had the largest circulation that it has had in its entire history. The circulation for the year was 13,161, which exceeded the former record by nearly 4,000. Within this period of time there were added 1,1[illegible] new books, many of which are valuable for their outlook on up-to-date problems. These new books cover [illegible] fields of fiction and history. Last year, fiction, as might be expected, led in circulation; however, history ran a close second.

An interesting book has recently been added to the collection. It is by Yeats Brown, "Lite of a Bengal Lancer." This book is the autobiography of a Sub-Altren of the Bengal Lancers, his experiences during the war and his study of Yoga. This book should prove to be of interest to both old and young.

The library has just completed cataloging all back copies of the PaC-SaC that it has been able to collect in the past three years. It now has a complete file with the exception of the issues of 1917 and 1918. Any alumnus having an extra copy of either of these years would confer a great favor by presenting it to the library.

As in past years, Willard L. Jones, through the English department, is instructing freshmen in the use of the library. In the three recitations set aside for this purpose, Mr. Jones familiarizes the first year students with the cataloging system and gives them some idea of the books that are at their disposal.

Throughout the year boks will be continually added to the library. The names of these books will be posted as they are received. It is sincerely hoped that much interest will be shown in the use of them, thus making this year even more successful than the last.

"We saw a big crowd up in front of your house last night, Goldie. What was up?"

"It must have been my shade while I was undressing."

MANY OLD MEN FAIL TO RETURN; FRATERNITIES HEAVY LOSERS

Another college year has rolled around and we are back at old P. C. Back, yes, but lacking—lacking many of the friends and pals of last year. There has come to our campus many new faces and new life for P. C., but amid all the shouting there comes the realization of the fact that many of our "buddies" are gone..

It seems that this year has taken a heavy toll among the fraternity men on the campus. Every year they are hit by graduation and such, but this year the toll seems heavier than ever before. Of the six fraternities on the campus, not one is without its lost. All have been hit by graduation, but the toll runs high due to transfers and, we suppose, the depression. Forty-two fraternity men have been lost this year, fourteen through graduation and the others, thirty-eight in number, by transfer and financial difficulties. The A. L. T.s were hit the hardest, losing nine men. The Pikers must have held a horseshoe, for they lost only four.

Men lost by the fraternities were:

Pi Kappa Phi: Gus Adams, Pucker Andrews, J. R. Fulp, Washie Miller, T. Goodlette, Skipper Johnson, and Jim Davis.

Pi Kappa Alpha: Bill Senter, Bill Zealy, Donald M. Upshur, and Kenneth Cox.

Kappa Alpha: Bernie Dunlap N. G. Quantz, Tupper James, Julian Bolick, Tom Hopkins, J. C. MacDonald, William B. Blackman, and Ben Axon, Jr.

Alpha Lambda Tau: W. P. Ferguson, Frank Brigman, Archie Cheatham, Red Jackson, Ed Graham, Pete Knox, H. B. MacDonald, Bud Keeble, and M. Montgomery.

Beta Kappa: Jim Harden, D. M. McNaull, Bob Gilleonie, Jack Pellitzer, Henry Storey, W. L. Watkins, John Shurley, Buster Smith.

Alpha Kappa Pi: Mac Caskey, H. S. Martin, S. W. Monroe, Johnny Cannon, B. H. Good, J. D. Avant, Meyer Frank and Bob Moore.

The toll of the non-fraternity men does not seem as heavy as does that of the Greeks. Over thirty-five of the non-fraternity men are not back this year and of this number only thirteen were seniors. The remainder were lost through transfer or old man depression.

A ray of hope brightens us a bit when we realize that there are over a hundred new faces one the campus to replace those that we have lost but to join us in their memFrom this group we hope to make new [illegible]ory.

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

DEAR OLD P. C.

South Carolina with her wide variety of scenic and historic interests, her fine traditions, and her noble sons, is a most fortunate state, and may well boast of her fortune.

Let's look at this rare old province; we see on the southern borders the muddy, ugly old Savannah. To the west lie mountains of majestic beauty, hardly out of the sound of the beating of the ocean, that roars along palmetto and pine clad islands of the coast. Go north for a few hours and one has left Paradise for the hurry and scurry of the Old North State.

Within this area lies an enchanted spot called P. C.

Here are beautiful things galore; flower-filled woodlands, roses draped along fences, brilliant vines coiling where they can, ivy blankets draped over ancient walls. Here stands P. C.

P. C. with her white columns and red brick a veritable colonial aristocrat. I can in my imagination liken P. C. to a ruby, set in a symphony of green.

Those who love the chronicle of Judas Maccabeus, or of Bruce, will love the sagas of P. C.

They are the stories of battles, fought hard and many won. P. C., from the king to the lowest pawn, plays the game—hard, but gallant like the chivalrous of old.

P. C. has a more vivid history, with a more beautiful and picturesque setting for it, than any other school in the nation. Its history begins definitely on that day in 1880 when William P. Jacobs, an adventurer of the Christ, dedicated the school and ushered it on the way.

To a strange and appealing degree, P. C. has become, for her sons, another home. Even the visitors who come to the school find themselves under a spell of romance. P. C. inspired the most inspiring Alma Mater of them all.

Here, then, is a school that man has cherished in word and in deed. His stories celebrate it, he sets it lovingly like a jewel in his romance, his songs, his ideals; he graces it with his best girl, he works for it and in fine, he garlands it with his imagination, wears it into his life year after year, until it comes to be a part of him and his daily present.

That is my description of dear old P. C.

—ROMEYN.

P. C. THROUGH THE EYES OF A FRESHMAN

Can you imagine for a few minutes, a lonely, homesick, and blue lad, longing for home, mother and dad and the old crowd—transported into a new world and environment in a day's time. We, as freshmen, have had that experience and have felt the heartaches and doubts that come once to every man when he first leaves home.

But now we have passed through this experience and face a radiant and glowing future. The new men have made acquaintances and have found a cordial welcome which does not lack warmth and amiableness. We fellows who have wanted and yearned for home, now are content with P. C., and our schoolmates, and as we think of this there comes to our minds this thought: "Why not be friends, for are we not all of the same family and have the same "Father"? And it may be said of the P. C. men that this thought is brought out very clearly in the comradeship and friendliness of the upperclassmen toward the freshmen.

You may ask if the "rats" are not more or less made liable to the iron will of the upper classmen—yes, of course the freshmen have to abide by the laws that have been laid down. But these are not over-bearing; the sophomores are merely carrying on old customs and traditions. There are some men who come here thinking that they know it all and would stand head and shoulders above the average man. It does not take the sophomores long to bring him down and place him on the level of the average. And, too, it teaches a fellow to stand on his own feet, to face the world with ambitions, and a will that generally brings him to the goal.

Again, let's follow the freshmen as they enter the academic department of the college. In the class room the men come in contact with Christian professors who have the welfare of the students at heart. They seem to care when a man meets class without his lesson prepared. This adds a new significance to school life, as some of us hail from schools where it was taken as a matter of course if a fellow didn't know his lessons.

Then, we might glance at the spiritual life of the college—the new man comes from a home where the Bible is read and taught, and he has been associated with God-fearing parents. The college also takes care of this part of the student's life, as he has Christ held up to him as the goal for which every man should strive. This comes through the chapel exercises each morning, and the work of the Young Men's Christian Association. It even carries it farther and gives us opportunities that we did not have at home; in that we have the privilege of helping carry out the command of Christ, in teaching, preaching and in the other religious activities on the campus.

Then, too, we freshmen are pleased with P. C.'s athletics, as we have coaches, trainers and managers who are well equipped for their tasks and are known throughout intercollegiate circles in the South. If the men will abide by the instruction of these coaches and enter into the spirit of the games—that old P. C. Spirit—it will not only make him a better man, physically, but he will be better mentally, and he will be a gentleman whether our team is the victor or not: in that he will have caught that traditional vision of P. C. sportsmanship.

We have tried to get across the idea that we like P. C., and that we will ever strive to be worthy of the traditions that are being handed down to us.

—J. I. M.

OUR CAMPUS

No one will deny the statement that this student body is fortunate in living on one of the most beautiful campuses in the state, if not in the entire South.

At the first sign of cold, the maples will begin to clothe themselves in various shades of red and yellow, and soon every other tree will be following their example. Then the campus will be ablaze with an autumnal splendor that cannot be surpassed anywhere. The shrubs, with their bright-colored fruit, which will be a lasting spot of color for the dreary winter months, begin to lose their foliage, giving their fruit an even brighter appearance. Fig bushes, all yellow in their new fall clothing, the oaks, in various tints of red and brown, the sweet gums, with their deep red foliage, all go to make up a picture that even the most talented landscape artist could not reproduce.

In the spring, every plant and tree takes on a beautiful green, giving new vigor to the whole place. Even the student body, as it emerges from its long hibernation beside the radiator, takes the cue, and puts on a fresher appearance, a liveliness which has been lacking for some time. Then, as the so-called spring fever begins its deadly work on all of us, what better place is there to take our troubles than the Plaza, under one of the big trees, there to lie unil the spirit moves us, or until that bell calls us to a class which we are dreading to meet—especially at this time of the year?

Added to these bits of color, are the numerous species of birds that make their nests in the trees and shrubbery of the campus. These little feathered creatures are protected here, and therefore are lavish in their songs for our benefit. And once in a while we can get a glimpse of a redbird, thrush or catbird, as they fly in and out of the shrubbery.

But what are we, who get the most enjoyment out of it, doing to protect the beauty that we have here around us? You may not think there is anything that can be done by any one individual member of the student body, but to that I will answer that there are many things any one of us can do. And none of these is hard to do.

There are signs in different parts of the place saying, "Keep off the grass." Do we keep off? Most of the time we merely walk around the sign and go on our way, helping to make a path across some otherwise beautiful spot. And what an unsightly thing a path is.

There are many small trees and shrubs that have not been here long enough to have started thriving. Do we help them in their struggle for existence? Most of us do not. If they happen to be in our way, we either tumble over them, or give them a kick as we pass along, not realizing, perhaps, that they may someday be the most beautiful things about the college after we are gone.

Let's each of us awaken more fully to a realization of the beauty around us, and try our best to preserve it. In this we shall be doing only one thing—making it all the more beautiful.

GET SOMEBODY ELSE

The Lord had a job for me; but I so much to do
I said: "You get somebody else, wait until I get through."
I don't know how the Lord came no doubt he got alone;
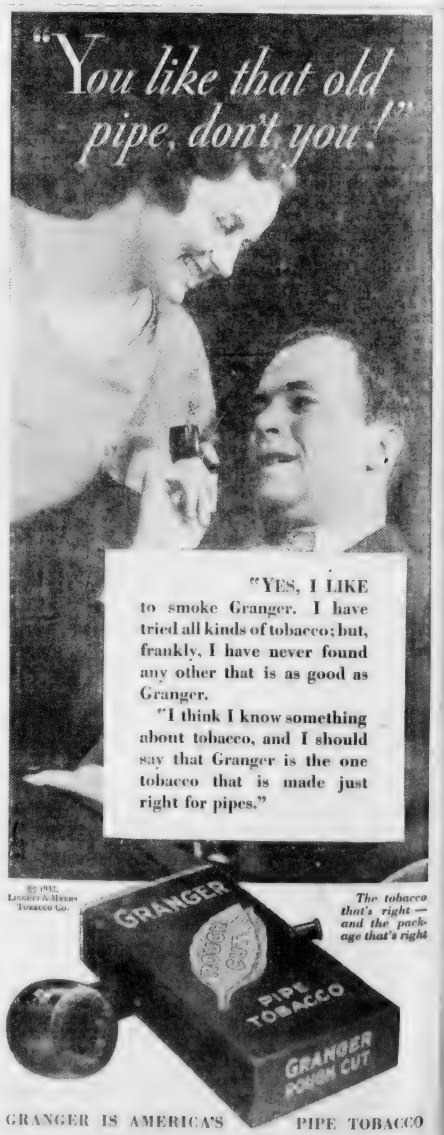
But I felt o' sneakin' like!
I knew I'd done God wrong



One day I needed the Lord
Him right away;
But He never answered me at all
I could hear Him say
Down in my accusin' heart:
I've got too much to do;
You get somebody else, or wait
I get through."

Now, when the Lord has a job for me
I never try to shirk;
I drop what I have on hand and the Lord's good work.
And my affairs can run along wait till I get through;
Nobody else can do the work tha
God has marked out for you.

BLUE STOCKINGS DEFEAT LENOIR RHYNE SATURDAY

Presbyterians Succeed In Pushing Over Only One Touchdown. Safety Is First Score In 9 to 0 Win.

North Staters Put Up Hard Fight

Fourth Quarter Passing Attack By Bears Takes Ball Nearly To P. C. Goal Line.

By Walker Combs, Jr.

The Presbyterian eleven defeated a hard-fighting, heavy Lenoir-Rhyne team Saturday afternoon by a score of 9 to 0. In scoring the touchdown and safety, the Blue Stockings crashed to the brink of the goal five times, only to lose the ball within the final 10-yard line, and see Newton punt his team out of immediate danger.

The safety, and first score of the game came when Adams' punt struck a Lenoir-Rhyne player and rolled over the goal line. Newton took the ball on the run, but Reeder, playing a fine game at center, tackled him for the safety. Returning the kickoff, the Presbyterians battled again within scoring distance, but a fumble was recovered by a Bear and the P. C. threat was ended for the time.

The touchdown was made in the opening minutes of the fourth quarter. During the third, Newton had much the better of the punting duel with McFadden, P. C. quarterback. It was only in the closing seconds of the third period that Presbyterian showed flashes to overcome the wonderful defense of the Bears. Bolick got loose for a 20-yard run off tackle, carrying the ball to the 20-yard line. With spectacular form he crashed through the line, with Barrett adding yardage also to the one-yard line for a first down. On the next play the line swept everything before it, and Bolick took advantage of the opening to go five yards over the line.

In the course of the fracas, the Blue Stockings earned 16 first downs, gaining 161 yards from scrimmage and passes. Lenoir Rhyne made four first downs all made in the last quarter in their only real threat during the game.

Newton passed to Whitener for four completed passes, gaining an average of 11 yards per pass, to take the ball to the 11-yard line. They came within inches of having a first down and one yard to go. But the Blue Hose reserves proved impregnable and the touchdown was denied the Bears.

Adams punted out of danger, and the Blue Stockings began another offensive attack. However, they had failed to make great headway when the final whistle blew.

It must be said that Adams played one of the greatest games of his career. His superiority at quarter was well in evidence. Bolick was the same plunging-driving half of last year, rather more so. He rolled and twisted and drove, and the strength of his body was too much for the opposition. Barrett, Perrin and Sims did much ball toting and were stars in interference and defense.

In the line, Reeder, Mills, and Copeland played spectacular games. Mills at tackle missed few tackles. Reeder piled the Lenoir Rhyne center in a heap time and again, and got a great many tackles. Copeland's play was truly spectacular. At the other end, Pinson was perhaps more steady, but Copeland was always to be seen in the enemy's backfield smearing play after play.

For Lenoir Rhyne, Newton played a wonderful game. As quarter, he punted, passed, and ran the ball as well as the team. Poovey, fullback, deserves commendation. However, it was Newton who threw the passes that took the ball to the Presbyterian two-yard line. It was Newton who punted out of danger innumerable times, and [illegible] Newton [illegible] several brilliant returns of Presbyterian's punts.

The 16 first downs shows the superiority of the Blue Hose team. The Lenoir Rhyne team was brilliant at times, even though weak against the best that P. C. gave.

The game was won, but it was won against one of the hardest fighting teams, one of the cleanest tackling teams that has played on Johnson field. Few times did they miss their man. Presbyterian showed they were capable of punch. Their passing attack clicked remarkably at times. The failure of the team to score when down on the goal line must be, in the final analysis, laid to the fight and spirit of the visiting Bears. Five times the Blue Stockings knocked and only once did they succeed in crashing the gate.

The line-up:

Six Games Remain On P. C. Schedule

The remaining games on the 1932 Presbyterian college football schedule are as follows:

Oct. 8—P. C. vs Mercer at Macon, Ga.
Oct. 15—P. C. vs High Point at High Point, N. C.
Oct. 29—P. C. vs Wofford at Clinton.
Nov. 4—P. C. vs Newberry at Newberry.
Nov. 12—P. C. vs Citadel at Charleston.
Nov. 19—P. C. vs Erskine at Clinton.

Track Captain Calls Runners

Turk Osman, captain of the 1933 track team of Presbyterian college, has sent out the call for all men who are interested in running the cross country.

In supporting this team, the athletic authorities are inaugurating a new sport this season. Two years ago the college had a team with one meet, decisively winning from the University of South Carolina.

Three meets have been planned and it is believed that P. C. will have a good team. Georgia, Carolina, Clemson and Davidson are also sponsoring this sport. Although a hard run of three miles, the cross country is especially valuable in developing wind and endurance and putting the men in good shape for the spring track season.

Football Booklets Given Students

Through the courtesy of some of the business men in Clinton, the students at the college were recipients Wednesday of a helpful booklet done up in a neat way. The booklet contained this year's football schedule, a list of the varsity men, their positions and weight and also an explanation of the new rules which went into effect this fall. To the majority of the student body who are still hazy over the matter of new rules this ought to prove useful. Also in the book was an explanation of the signals used by officials in the games.

P. C. TO MEET MERCER NEXT

Blue Stockings To Face Powerful Opposition Saturday. Seek Revenge For 1931 Defeat.

Next Saturday will find the Blue Stocking gridsters again facing powerful opposition when they meet the Mercer Bears at Macon. The Mercer eleven has one of the strongest teams that it has had in years, and word from their camp state that [illegible] out to stop the Presbyterians.

Coach Walter Johnson's Bear Hose are a much more polished and machine-like team than the one that opened against Clemson.

Mercer has one of its strongest teams in years due to the return of nearly all of last year's letter men.

Remembering their victory in 1931 and their defeat last year, the Hosemen, believing in the law of averages and reinforced by that much-famed P. C. spirit, are going to fight until the last whistle.

In case of a victory for the Blue Stockings, the contest will be of no small importance considering that their aggregation is one of the most highly rated elevens of the S. I. A. A.

McSween, Wysor Pep Up Team

Dr. John McSween praised the football team for its showing against Clemson in a speech at the "pep" meeting on Friday night. He stressed the magnanimity of the team in the face of defeat, in the way that they carried on even when beaten and made thrust after thrust into the enemy's territory.

"I was proud of them," he said. "I think they are great."

Captain Wysor also was adulatory. Reminiscing some eight years, he recalled the first time he saw a Presbyterian football team in action. "They were doped to lose to a larger team that day," said the captain, "but they went on to the field and fought with the same spirit I have come in contact with since coming here. They did not lose. It was only last year that that team scored a victory over the Blue Stockings."

FROSH OUTFIT LOOKS BETTER

Several Men Begin To Show Up Well In Practice. Higby Developing Into Good Punter.

After the second week of work, the freshman football squad is beginning to predict a successful season. The team is coming around fast and some of the boys are becoming quite optimistic.

Showing up well on Addison in the line and Huey and Higby in the backfield. Addison has been playing the end position exceptionally well. Higby has developed into a triple-threat man, with especial emphasis on his punting.

On Wednesday the Clinton high school came over and gave the frosh team a scrimmage. The field was muddy, so there was no brilliant ball carrying. The rat team showed a better defense than offense. The offense lacks power, but attention will be given to that phase of the game and it is hoped that a powerful team will be developed before the season is well under way.

Some time in the near future, the frosh and the varsity will meet in a practice contest. The freshmen are already getting primed for this meet and [illegible] much [illegible] what they are going to do to the Higby has developed into a triple-"big" team.

Oct. 8: 2nd Lt. J. E. Barnes, with Cpl. [illegible], J. as orderly.

The [illegible] ordering instructors [illegible] each meeting at drill to put [illegible] through their paces. The [illegible] of these men is being [illegible] and each one should [illegible] able to call every member of [illegible] company by name and have the correct [illegible] of freshmen and sophomore instructors.

The uniforms for the freshmen and the [illegible] have not yet arrived, but are expected to be here shortly.

The inspection last week was made by Captain Wysor. However, no grades were given, probably due to the fact that not all of the upper classmen have their complete uniforms. In the future, however, the inspections will count, and all uniforms must be complete, including the button insignia, chevrons, etc.

The seniors have now drawn their sabers and can be seen proudly carrying them around on the campus and marching with them at drill. If one were to make a round of all the sentinel posts sometime at night they would more than likely find some of the proud sword-bearers standing in front of the mirror striving their best to emulate some renowned military figure, in all probability "Napoleon."

Under the guidance and direction of Cadet Mills, the band is now beginning its practice. Last year's band proved to be an exceptionally good one, and it is hoped that the one this year will even rise above that.

The office of the officer of the day is the small room adjoining Dr. Woodworth's lecture room. This office is not a place for loafers; it is put there for the purpose of aiding the military authorities, the college authorities and the student body. The officer of the day and his orderly are expected to execute all orders directed to them from any of the above mentioned, but the service is not to be encroached upon by any one who has some minor wish or desire to be fulfilled.

RELIGIOUS ACTIVITIES

The Ministerial club outlook for the year is very promising, considering the results of the first meeting which was held in the auditorium Sunday afternoon, Sept. 25. Freeman Parker, the president, conducted the service which took the form of a combined devotional and business meeting. As regards time, the club voted to continue its meetings at 1:45 each Sunday afternoon. Plans for the year were outlined and included the following:

One Sunday each month for open discussion on questions vital to all boys, especially ministerial students.

One month devoted to programs dealing with personal evangelistic work.

An attempt by the club, if favorable to all members, to become a member of the state ministerial association for college students who are candidates for the ministry.

Deputations to be sent out to other colleges, and deputations from other schools to be entertained here.

To find an appropriate motto for the club.

This rough outline gives promise to the fact that there is going to be plenty of variety and inspiraion in the club's activities of the future.

It is interesting to note also that quite a number of new candidates from the freshman class were present. Those whose names were taken by the secretary were: H. M. Wilson, Jr., Ernest Arnold, Richard Potter, Cliff Johnson, Bill Smith and James Ratchford. Two additional new men, one from the junior class, Wylie Narron, and one from the sophomore class, William Gibbes, were admitted also.

With this promising new material on hand, the club will not feel so keenly the loss of the last year's senior class members of the organization.

All ministerial students on the campus cordially invite the other members of the student body to attend the meetings of the Ministerial club. Some sudents have the idea that they would be intruding if they should happen to be present some Suunday afternoon at one of the meetings. They will not be intruding. It is extremely important that all students, whether ministerial candidates or not, should get together on common ground to worship God and to learn something concerning the various vocations which will be followed, and their relation to each other. For example, to learn how a minister can help a civil engineer, or how a civil engineer can help a minister, and how both can work together toward a common end. No one can work alone in this old world; we must pull together, and a good way for efficiency in pulling together in a spirit of cooperation is found in association. So the Ministerial club sincerely welcomes all who care to attend its meetings, or engage in its activities.

There will be evangelistic meetings in Clinton beginning Oct. 19 and continuing for ten days, led by Rev. R. C. McQuilkin, president of the Columbia Bible college, Columbia. All college students are invited to attend the services and are urged to do all they can to promote their success.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

A great "session" was held at the auditorium on Thursday night after supper, Professor Bothwell Graham, with a host of wit and wisdom, conducted one of the most successful group discussions in the memory of any present Presbyterian college student. The theme of the discussion was that of "Friendship." Professor Graham most fittingly gave a few introductory remarks that added to the general spirit of "Friendship." After the introduction a few important questions were put forth for the discussion of the students. Several questions of interest were offered, but the one which was most enthusiastically received was the question, "Can two fellows be rivals for the same girl and remain friends?" A wiener said "yes." The question was received with some negative answers. Dr. Jones spiced the occasion with some incidences from his experience which added humor and thought to the question at stake. Prof. Graham added his share of the humor also. The meeting was short, closing with a hymn and the dismissal prayer by Dr. McSween.

Any student desiring a list of the questions will be given a copy. Apply to the president of the "Y." Barney MacLean.

For Next Week

Coach Johnson will grace our program with a short talk on the subject of "Physical Education." It is undetermined just what phase "Coach" will talk on, but you can bet it will be worth hearing. We like to hear him talk and he has a real message for everybody, especially for those students who are unable to go out for football. Maybe it will be the answer to some particular problem of yours. The service will be held when the bell rings at 7 o'clock, just after supper, on Thursday, October 6th.

OOFUS GOOFUS
THE OFFIS BOY

Every newspaper at times has an urgent need for more copy, copy being the black stuff which fills the pages, and on these occasions every one available who is not too feeble or too inebriated to tickle the keys of a typewriter ("mill" to the paper boys) is called on to grind out copy.

To this urgent call, I, Oofus, the offis boy, have nobly responded. I have jumped into the shoes, or perhaps I should say, grasped the pens of Winchell, Brisbane and McIntyre and I now offer to the world of wise cracks, laughter, and cat-calls this unique literary effort.

On second thought, cross out Brisbane.

All of which gets me no place at all. But I have more space to fill, so the pen travels on.

"Doctor" Shine Lowry brings back some interesting tales of his adventures in the far West, stalking the elusive magazine subscriber. After hunting through Washington, Oregon, and California, and finding the pastime unexciting, Shine decided to try his luck in Mexico.

He learned the Mexican lingo, acquired an artificial Mexican complexion, and fared forth to peddle his wares among the peons. The natives bought freely of his goods on the strength of his word that McCall's was printed in Spanish; and business was booming when Shine suddenly received news that sent him back to the United States in a very large hurry.

The company had decided to pay its Mexican representatives in pesos.

On his way east, the doctor stopped in Reno, the city of fast and furious divorces. He purchased several divorces while he was there, as there was a [illegible] on and he got them at reduced prices. Mr. Lowry will use a couple of them himself, he said, but he rest are for sale. Any one wanting [illegible] a good Reno divorce, guaranteed to last, and delivered to your door, is advised to see Mr. Lowry.

Reno does not hold an election for mayor. The lawyer with the largest number of successful divorce cases to its credit gets the office. The present mayor has lost only one case in two thousand. The one he lost really should not count against him, he declared, for his client shot her husband during the trial and the case was dropped by the court.

With a percentage like that, he should [illegible] a great one raw decision.

Still speaking of Reno. There is a preacher there who has tied up almost as many couples as the mayor has untied. Food for the mill, so to speak.

A sure cure for all ills was suggested to me the other day by an old darky whom I must have presented a doleful appearance. I have never tried the cure myself, but you may find it useful.

The object needed is a black cat, caught at the hour of midnight, blind in one eye, and with one ear broken. Take this cat at midnight to a place where two streams come togther to form a V and boil it alive in oil until the whole thing, hide, hair, and bones, comes apart. Then throw the whole business into the stream on your right. The bone that floats upstream is your lucky piece. Fish it out and keep it with you always. It will cure all your ills and give you the best of luck as long as you keep it.

That is what the old Negro told me, and I pass it on to you. Take it or leave it.

Professor Willard L. Jones, librarian and amateur statistician, has estimated that if all the people in the world who persist in calling him "Wee Willy" were laid end to end it would be a good thing.

And since "Editor Cox" had me out chasing front page scandal all night last night, I guess I'd better call a halt to this "space filler."

ALUMNI NEWS

Friday at the Clemson game, the P. C. grandstand reminded one of an alumni convention. The following old students were at the game: Jim Hardin, '32; F. L. Brigman, '32; Jerry McKenzie, class of '28; Rev. I. M. Bagnal, '27; Styles Hughes, '26; Ken Hughes, '26; Bob Ritchie, '31; John Ballenger, '16; Francis Hart; "Cotton" Neighbors, "Peck" Cornwell, Ansel (Buchanan) Bobo; Al Brice, T. D. Jacobs.

October 29 marks a "red letter" day for the alumni as well as for those on the campus. This is the date of the Wofford game and also "home-coming" day. Many alumni are expected to be present for the game, the luncheon in their honor, and the alumni meeting. Every year the old men are brought together again in great numbers at these reunions. The student body is looking forward to the October Saturday with these men.

Ross M. Lynn, captain of the '30 football team, who taught in the public schools of Dublin, Ga., last year, has a like position at Darlington School for Boys, Rome, Ga. During the summer Lynn traveled throughout the state of Georgia in the interest of the college.

LIBRARY NOTES

During the past week the following new books were catalogued and are now ready for perusal: Buehler, "State and Local Tax Revision"; Grose, "Everyday Writing"; Mason, "Challenged"; Pargment, "Lectures Pour Debutants"; and, Sinclair, "Letters to Judd."

There is another book not listed above which, because of its interest, deserves special notice. It is another of Julia Peterkin's color novels. Carrying out the title scheme of "Green Thursday," "Black April" and "Scarlet Sister Mary," this one is entitled "Bright Skin." This is the story of a mulatto girl on a large plantation. The story itself is interesting in its pattern but it lacks the real touching understanding of "Scarlet Sister Mary."

Beginning Tuesday, Mr. Jones will instruct Professor Grafton's freshman class in the use of the library. It is [illegible] catalogue, stack room, etc., and it will be an annual custom for the librarian to [illegible] count on the English grades of the instruct freshmen in the use of the frosh.

The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

Due to the annual on-hing season there have been many socials, smokers, and other forms of entertainment taken place on the campus.

Beta Kappa entertained with a smoker during the early part of the week and it is said there were plenty of "smokes" for all.

Pi Kappa Phi had a social Tuesday evening as part of the rushing season. There were a large number present and, according to rumor, a great time was had by all. Guests included Misses Florence Bailey, Agnes Shealy, Dolly Milling, Collette Davis, Sara Copeland, Anna Mae Tarre, Anna Belle Kennedy, and Pat Giles. Prof. Grafton and his wife came in for a while in the early part of the evening. Punch and cakes were served by "Deacon," and it must be said that he looked very well in his white coat.

Pi Kappa Alpha was host to several members of the faculty as well as a group of freshmen at a smoker Tuesday night. The members of the faculty present were: Dean Brown, Beta Theta Pi from Centre college, Captain R. E. Wyson, Dr. Brimm and Prof. Jones, all members of Pi Kappa Alpha. Refreshments were served and the occasion was enjoyed by all.

A social was held in a room of visitors at a social staged Saturday evening following the football game. A smoker was held Wednesday night for a group of freshmen.

BOOK REVIEW

By Frank Guess

1931 PULITZER NOVEL

The Pulitzer prize of literature is awarded each year to that novel which best portrays some phase of American life. "The Good Earth," Pearl S. Buck's very gripping story of China, is a story from American life yet the author is an American herself, who writes with a profound knowledge coming from long experience and keen observation in this foreign country. Even though it does not exactly meet the requirements of the Pulitzer award, the book is probably more worthy of the coveted prize than any other novel.

The story centers about the large family of Wang Lung, a poor farmer, who tills his little plot of ground for a meager living. When he takes as a wife a slave from the Great House of Hwang, she settles quickly into his life, toiling industriously by his side in the fields. Plentiful harvest brings silver into Wang's outstretched hands. It is the fruit of his toil, yet he knows the good earth has been kind. The silent O-lan bears abundant children unflinchingly in quick succession. Famine comes swiftly to prey upon them, and they accept with quiet submission. There comes upon one the whole realization of the desperate condition when O-lan snuffs out the life of her new-born child to keep from having another mouth to feed. To me there is nothing more pitiful in the entire book than Wang chewing a few dried beans and putting his mouth to that of his child, pushing the little wad of food through her thin lips.

On a pilgrimage into the south O-lan steals jewels, which Wang uses upon their return to buy land from the fast fading House of Hwang. Again the good earth yields abundantly.

It would be impossible to write of the book without writing especially of O-lan. In the life of this submissive woman there is that stark tragedy that finds expression only in the one word—pitiful. It is the tragedy of a lifetime spent in worshipping humbly at the feet of her husband, only to be cast aside for the new wife—Lotus. Out of the stolen jewels Wang had allowed her only two small pearls, which she dropped carefully into her bosom. When Wang demanded the pearls for Lotus, O-lan gave silently—her overwhelming grief expressing itself in two big tears which rolled swiftly down her plain, yellow cheeks. Over her dead body Wang cast a fleeting look of remorse for this faithful mother of his children.

If there is a criticism it is that one finds an almost total absence of plot in the book. It is Chinese life—the life of a family—their ups and downs. It is written well. The style is excellent. One could hardly say more. Despite the entirely impersonal way of writing there is deep feeling and pathos throughout. Mrs. Buck has the power of holding an intense interest During the famine one can almost feel that grating hunger, gnawing at their bones, and eating the very hearts out of their wasted bodies.

We follow Wang to the height of his glory—fulfilling his heart's desire when he establishes his family in the abandoned house of Hwang. Never once, though, does he forget the good, brown earth which brought his riches. At the close of the book there is a foreshadowing that disaster will come and the Wang house will fall as the Hwang. As he walks over the land with two of his sons, who have mentioned selling part of the land, Wang gives them the wise counsel to keep the land—never sell it, and always there will be something to fall back upon. That smile exchanged over his gray head is sufficient to know that history will repeat itself—that which comes from the earth goes back to the earth.

Not all will like the book. It is appealing to the minority, yet it should be read for its merit. We have nothing but praise for the author. Mrs. Buck has written a fine and [illegible] novel.

FACTS AND FIGURES GIVEN ON FROSH CLASS

'93 boys, only eighty are not members of some church. There are six different denominations represented in the group. Sixty-four are members of the Presbyterian church, and three are Presbyterian but not church members. Nineteen are Methodist, and four are Methodist but not members. The Baptist church is represented by fourteen members. There is one Episcopalian, one Associate Reformed Presbyterian, and one Congregationalist among the number, and one who is not a member, but prefers the Episcopal denomination.

Another interesting fact about the student body which has come to light is that there is at least one student from all but eighteen of the counties in the state. The counties, and the students from each follow, the first number being freshmen, and the second upper classmen: Abbeville, one, one; Allendale, one, none; Anderson, two, five; Bamberg, one, one; Chester, one, one; Clarendon, none, seven; Darlington, three, none; Dillon, one, three; Florence, two, four; Georgetown, two, none; Greenville two, six; Hampton, one, none; Kershaw, one, two; Laurens, 27, 55; Lee, none, five; Marlboro, one, none; Newberry, none, one; Oconee none, four; Orangeburg, one, none; Pickens, one, two; Richland, three, three; Spartanburg, two, four; Sumter, two, none; Union, two, four; Williamsburg, one, two; York, six, 21. This shows a total of 69 freshmen and 137 upper classmen from all sections of the state

But not only does P C look to South Carolina for her students but to eleven other states. South Carolina, with 206, tops the list by states, and Georgia comes second with 12. North Carolina claims 19; Alabama, four; Florida, four; Kentucky, two; Tennessee two; Virginia, two; West Virginia two; Pennsylvania, one; Wisconsin one; and the District of Columbia, one Twelve states are represented.

STUDENTS HEAR CONG. McSWAIN

Fourth District Representative Speaks On National Defense At College Thursday.

Congressman John J. McSwain, of Greenville, who represents the Fourth South Carolina district, Thursday morning delivered the first of a series of lectures planned by the administration of Presbyterian college for the student body. Mr. McSwain's talk was on "A Safe and Sane Policy of National Defense."

In his speech Mr. McSwain pointed out the need for some policy of national defense, stressing the attempts of the nations to bring about peace, but also the fallible nature of people.

Mr. McSwain was one of the foremost proponents of the bill which retained the R. O. T. C. units in the colleges of America. A bill was introduced, retiring about two thousand officers, which would mean that those posted on duty at the various colleges and universities would be required for post duty somewhere else, thereby killing an important phase of America's national defense policy.

Mr. McSwain does not think a war is brewing. He hopes that there will never be another. Having served in the World war, he does not want any one to have to endure the pains of war again. But he cited history to prove that hoping against war does not prevent it.

He reiterated time and again that he is a sincere pacifist.

"Somehow a spark is struck and nations get together," said the congressman, "and the national defense policy is aimed at preventing the wanton destruction and murder of millions of men due to lack of training or a lack of program on the part of the United States government."

Mr. McSwain is a very interesting speaker, breaking forth into occasional witticisms that are refreshing. At one time the presence of girls in the audience interrupted his train of thought and he was forced to grasp into the air for the words. He came back with "sanctimonious" and the student body sighed, wondering why he had not taken longer.

Mr. McSwain has just completed a three-thousand-mile tour over the United States with two army pilots, Colonel Finkle and Lieutenant Halverson, and his secretary. The tour was an inspection of various army posts. Mr. McSwain is chairman of the military affairs committee of the house.

Advanced Men Get Uniforms

Uniforms for the advanced students in the military department at Presbyterian college have arrived. The shipment was received on Wednesday morning. The juniors were fitted on Wednesday afternoon.

The new uniforms are very distinctive this year. Last year a great improvement was made in the uniforms of the advanced corps men, and this year another improvement has been made in the ornaments worn with the uniform. Especially the cadet officers' uniforms have been made more brilliant with the addition of cap and lapel ornaments.

This year the seniors will wear crossed rifles with the letters "P. C." in the place of the regiment number. Above this the letters "U. S." have placed over them in blacked letters "R. O. T. C."

Captain Wysor, head of the military department, has been here four years, and each year since his arrival some change for the better has been seen in the uniform.

Those uniforms which were in need of altering will be finished by next week, it is thought.

Glee Club Work Now Under Way

The glee club of Presbyterian college has begun regular work under the management of Dr. S. M. Huntley.

Music has been ordered but has not yet arrived. The time at the practice Tuesday and Friday nights was spent in singing hymns. The glee club probably will be called upon soon to sing in some of the churches of neighboring communities.

Although last year the glee club did not make a trip, this year ten days will be allowed the club. It is thought that three trips of three or four days each will be taken by the club.

Some forty men have reported for try-outs. Among the number of freshmen coming out, there a several good voices. The organization will be larger than it has been in many years, according to the number of men at the first practices.

Graftons Occupy Tribble Aaprtment

Professor C. W. Grafton, assistant in the English department, and his wife are occupying one of the Tribble apartments, in the northeastern section of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Grafton were married in Virginia this summer, on June 6. They spent a part of their honeymoon in Canada and the latter part of the vacation at summer school at Evanston, Ill., where Mr. Grafton is studying toward a degree at Northwestern university. .

Mr. Grafton, known more familiarly as "Chip," since he was a student here a few years ago, was wearing colored glasses the first part of last week. The cause of this was attributed to domesticity.

No?

Well, he was driving a nail and a piece of steel flew into his eye, greatly irritating the membrane. Accordingly, the young professor was incapacitated for a day, but his eye has steadily improved.

R. O. T. C. Men Get First Pay

Government pay checks for men of the advanced R. O. T. C. course were issued Friday afternoon.

All students of the advanced R. O. T. C. of both the first and second year received the first checks of the year from the government at 2 o'clock. These checks are received from Washington every three months by the P. M. S. and T. The next checks will probably come some time in January, unless some deviation from the usual custom is made.

The Advanced I students are not receiving as much in this payment as the Advanced II students. The amount which the government allows those who make the advanced course is the same for both years. The difference in the amount of the checks can be accounted for by the fact that, during the past summer, those who are now taking the second year of advanced work attended camp at Anniston, Ala.

Captain Wysor, P. M. S. and T., was assisted by Captain Blanton. The checks were issued from the business manager's office in the administration building. The issuing of this money, however, is entirely in the hands of the military department.

Staff Leaves Town, Paper Comes Out

Last year's headlines in The Gamecock, student publication of the University of South Carolina, stated that the paper was without an editor. The Gamecock received special commendation for the systematic machine that had been established there.

This week, The Blue Stocking goes the Carolina paper one just as good if not better. The editor, Ben Covington, Jr., who is also manager of the football team, is on a trip to Macon, Ga., with the team. The managing editor, Walker Combs, Jr., also went to Macon to witness the game, and the assistant editor, Allcobrook McCall, who usually gets up what has to be gotten, has taken a trip into the southern part of the state.. Therefore, The Blue Stocking is left without the three top men on the staff, and still the issue appears.

There is some system. Part of the work was put in before the above parties left. The rest is to be attributed to Hart Odom, freshman sports editor. The staff has promised to be on the job next week.

Telegram Sent Mrs. Glasgow

It is with sincere regret that The Blue Stocking announces the death of Col. E. L. Glasgow on Friday, Oct. 7, at Salem, N. J. Col. Glasgow for several years was head of the R. O. T. C. unit at Presbyterian college.

The following is a telegram sent to Mrs. Glasgow by the college:

"On behalf of Presbyterian College we wish to express deepest sympathy. Col. Glasgow's fine spirit and excellent service still abide in our institution. His memory continues fresh and inspiring. We esteem him as a gentleman, honor him as a friend and respected his character as a Christian man. We are greatly saddened at his departure.

FROSH CHOOSE FRATS TUESDAY

Rushing Season Comes To Close. "Silent Period" In Effect As Choice Is Considered.

Monday, Oct. 10, brings to a close "rushing season" for the social fraternities.

At one P. M. on this date there starts what is known as the "silent period." Within 24 hours no fraternity man is permitted to speak to a freshman in regard to fraternities. The purpose of this day is to give the freshmen a chance to quietly consider the question without being molested. This day is very helpful to the first-year men.

Tuesday morning in chapel every man who has received a bid from a fraternity will hear his name read out These men will meet in Dr. Brimm's class room at three o'clock on the same date to make final decisions. Dr Brimm will be in charge because of the ill health of Dr. Spencer, who usually does this work.

One-Third Students Are Fraternity Men

Of the 300 students on the campus, about one-third are fraternity men. Although the six fraternities have lost very heavily through graduation and because many others did not return his year, still the fraternity roll consists of about 77 names. These men, according to their fraternity, are:

Pi Kappa Alpha: H. S. Elliott, B. Graham, III, J. E. Osman, R. D. Lynn, C. N. Plowden, J. H. Viser, T. B. McTeer, Jr., H. E. Bolick, J. Carson, R. D. Hannah, L. A. McCall, H. S. Odom, A. J. Plowden, W. Tisdale.

Pi Kappa Phi: C. W. Adams, C. J. Barrett, F. B. Pinson, B. W. Covington, Jr., J. B. Copeland, J. W. Dillard, Jr., M. H. Hunter, Jr., J. C. McCaskill, H. L. Nettles, C. W. Copeland, C. W. with the team. The managing editor, Graham, N. E. Andrews, E. C. Gilmer, Walker Combs, Jr., also went to Ma- H. Wyman, III, W. J. Clark, R. M. con to witness the game, and the as- Perrin, A. B. McCullock, Pride Rat- sistant editor, Allcobrook McCall, who teree, Jr., J. M. Seagle, K. F. Mills, usually gets up what has to be got- J. Little.

Alpha Lambda Tau: A. D. Ferguson, F. D. Parker, J. N. Dendy, B. A. Lowry, J. B. Woods, C. B. Elliott, T. A. Howell, F. Johnston, J. M. Tolbert, M. K. Lowry, F. B. Waldrop.

Alpha Kappa Pi: W. M. White, J. F. Davis, S. L. Abrams, J. R. Horton, B. A. Robinson, James Davis.

Beta Kappa: J. E. Greer, R. W. Rampey, J. H. Stamps, M. P. Freeman, J. C. White, W. N. White, G. Barron.

Pan-Hellenic Plans Being Arranged

Bunt Woods, president of the Pan-Hellenic council has announced that arrangements have almost been completed for the annual celebration for pledges of the various fraternities. He has been in communication with an orchestra in Cleveland, Ohio, and states that there is a great likelihood of getting the orchestra down.

The great number of talented freshmen in school this year points to a large number of pledges to the various social fraternities. All the energies of the Pan-Hellenic council are being turned toward making this a successful social event.

BOOK REVIEW

By Frank Guess

THE FOUNTAIN

It is extremely hard to write of "The Fountain" because it is the kind of book that anything one could say about would be quite incapable of expressing exactly its merit. Charles Morgan, an English officer during the World War, has used his own experiences and those of a thousand and more others to make this chronicle of the strange love of exile in Holland. Reviewers have praised the novel to the utmost, it is a best-seller, Alfred A. Knopf, the publisher, has prospered for the author a great future, and we need no explanation.

Julius Alison, the very quiet and reserved English officer, welcomes his imprisonment in the ancient Dutch fortress as a time in life that is entirely his own. He wears his whole being in the writing of his "History of the Contemplative Life" and lives peacefully, placidly, with only an occasional thought of the outside world which seems so far away. Interned for the remainder of the war, Alison settles with a friend in a cottage upon the great Van Leyden estate. Here at the estate is Julie, step-daughter of the landowner, the perfect Dutch gentleman, Pieter. At first there is friendship with Julie and Lewis, then more, and finally their love is each other's existence. The future is forgotten at Ecstatical, it is an interlude when nothing matters, an interlude remembered as a dream. Julie's husband returns from the war hopelessly maimed, a man living for a woman who has never loved physically but who learns to worship him as a god. There seems to be between the three a bond linking their souls — husband, lover, wife. The love-story is queer and strangely moving. It is something filled with a deep and inner tie.

The book is quietly and beautifully written, and expressing so much the emotional, the contemplative side of the inner life that it hardly reaches the very intense or gripping at any one time. The style of the words is good. The plot is unique, woven perfectly, and closely throughout. Morgan has made the characters real, yet sometimes one will puzzle about Lewis. For those who may accuse the book of immorality, let me say that I think it is hard to condemn the natural love presented in Morgan's subtle style.

At first the book may seem long-drawn-out. This is not true of the whole. I think most readers will wonder until the end about the name. Finally when the book is finished, and Julie is gone, one hardly knows what to say: perhaps that it is superb or maybe that it is a masterpiece.

Chi Beta Phi In First Meeting

Members were present for the first meeting of Chi Beta Phi, national scientific fraternity, held Wednesday night.

This was a business meeting, and plans were made for the securing of outside speakers for the "open house" meetings, at which times the entire student body is usually invited to attend.

Dr. T. J. Peoples, who was last year elected an honorary member, has pledged his assistance in securing the speakers, who will lecture about some recent developments in the various branches of science.

Plans were also made to issue bids to several men eligible for membership in the fraternity. Bids will be issued in the near future.

The officers for the year are: Gonzales Barron, president; D. H. McFadden, secretary, and T. L. Shinnick, treasurer.

Uniform inspection from now on will be held each Tuesday morning at the regular drill hour. If there is no notice on the bulletin board warning is that there will be an inspection just the same. This inspection is automatically each Tuesday morning.

The inspection that was held last Wednesday by Capt. Wysor proved that the cadets were neglecting their duties. Special attention is called to the belts and shoes — there appeared to be a lack of polish and "elbow grease." The canteen has on sale a polish that is highly recommended by the military uathorities for use on belts and shoes. Capt. Wysor stated that this past inspection being the first one was graded very easily, but hereafter the grading will be strict. Belts must lose their dirty appearance and shoes must shine. Also the brass must have a generous massage of Blitz and plenty of polishing.

Seniors have now drawn their full equipment of insignia, which includes the spread eagle for the cap, cross rifles with the letters "P. C." on them, and a collar ornament bearing the letters "U. S. R. O. T. C."

The seniors at drill period on Thursday morning received instructions on the art of handling the saber. Their instructor was Capt. Wysor, an experienced and capable teacher.

The freshmen have now drawn rifles, commonly known to each new soldier as a "heavy artillery cannon." The freshman instructors are looking forward with great rejoicing to the teaching of the new men in the art of handling the rifle.

Congressman J. J. McSwain spoke Thursday morning in chapel of the great service that is being rendered to the young men of our country through the R. O. T. C. system. He stated that the government was spending a lot of money on them but that he also knew that somewhere in later life the money would be repaid in the service that these young officers would render to the nation.

LIBRARY NOTES

Although the student body has fallen off in number from last year by a small margin, the circulation for the month of September exceeded the circulation for the same month last year by more than fifty volumes. Fiction led the list with the largest circulation for any one class, closely followed by literature, philology and sociology.

One of the most interesting volumes added to the library during the past week was a gift of R. H. Corry, "Whither, Whither," edited by Walter S. Hankel. It is a humorous and cynical "symposium to end symposiums" on sex, love, ocean travel, literary criticism, etc.

OOFUS GOOFUS

THE OFFIS BOY

Well, we're back again. It looks as if the column, like the brook, must go on forever. You know:

Cows may come, and cows may go,
But the bull goes on forever.

Now is the time of year for potential football team managers to make their presence known and state their desire to the military authorities. Every year there are more applications for this position than can possibly be accepted, so all men interested are hereby notified to waste no time in applying to Captain Wysor for the position.

It comes to us from an unreliable source that the team has a match scheduled with the University of Wisconsin co-ed team for sometime during the winter.

That will be a nice trip.

The increased enrollment in Economics proves that P. C. students have inquiring minds. They want to find out for certain how many rocks there are in a pile.

The questions, "How high is up?" and "How long is a string?" will be taken up in one of the advanced classes.

One of our fellow-inmates who did everything but turn purple and go up in smoke when the afternoon schedule of class classes was announced met the class the other day, and after listening to three different roll calls and seeing Instructor Bissett preparing to record the progress for the fourth time, queried as to its meaning.

"What's the big idea?" he said, "you have already called the roll three times while I've been here."

"Oh," said Bissett, glancing at his roll sheet, "you are in the first section. You were through an hour ago."

The last time we saw him, the poor boy still had a wild look in his eye.

Scientists are still trying to break up the atom. They should let it alone for a few years, and let the depression get rid of it. It has broken up everything else.

After Dr. McSween's talk in chapel, there was some conjecture as to where Mr. McSwain's plane could have "lit." Most people do not seem to know that Clinton has an airport; but if you will ride two hundred yards along the road that turns off to the right where the Laurens highway turns left to cross the railroad you will be able to see the port. Most of the time it looks like any other comparatively level field, but when a plane "lights" there, it is fairly recognizable as an airport.

Last fall a circus made a one-day stand there. One of the main attractions of one of the side shows was a ferocious-looking animal, dark-skinned and covered with hair. He glared at the crowd through his tiny pin-point eyes and made no sound except a guttural half-growl, half-grunt. The spieler seemed to have a great fear of him and spoke of him as the "Wild Man of Iscorotan, half-man, half-beast—had eaten nothing but human flesh before his capture 'in the jungle of Oscoru.'"

His grotesque appearance excited the interest of the boys in the crowd and they laughed at him a great deal, and teased him.

Outside the tent a squat figure of a man with a superfluity of hair on his face, but no other distinguishing physical characteristic, stopped the group of college boys and said to them, "I wish you boys wouldn't make fun of me so much inside (nodding toward the tent). I got to eat just like you guys; and I got a wife and three kids in New York to keep up. I don't like it any more than you would, but I gotta do somethin'."

If you must have a moral for this tale, try "All that glitters is not gold."

As the last straw, we offer you the following conversation which took place between W. H. Touchberry and Frank Johnston. The two were mixing lime preparatory to liming the tennis courts.

"Is it not now of the correct consistency?"

"Perhaps, so, but the addition of more lime will not mar the integrity, although we must continually guard against a superfluity."

"A superfluity of lime may always be equalized with water, taking care, however, that the superabundance of the mixture does not overflow the vessel, you know."

"Yes, but considering the—"

How do you feel?

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

As the "rushing season" reaches its climax, there seems to be a renewal of smokers and socials given in honor of members of the freshman class. Among those of the past week were the following:

On last Thursday evening the Kappa Alpha fraternity entertained a large group at a very delightful social. Ice cream and cakes were served late in the evening.

The country club was the scene of a buffet supper last Saturday evening when the Alpha Lambda Tau fraternity entertained in honor of members of the freshman class.

The Beta Kappa fraternity was host to a group of freshmen on last Friday evening at a social, closing one of the most extensive and enjoyable seasons of rushing the chapter has ever held.

A large number of members of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity were guests at a banquet in the crystal room of Hotel Columbia on last Tuesday evening. Members of the P. C. freshman class also were guests. It was given by the Carolina chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha in honor of the grand treasurer, Robert A. Smyth, of Atlanta, and the freshman pledges of the Carolina chapter. After the dinner, the following speakers were heard: Governor Ibra C. Blackwood, W. G. Belser of Columbia, George M. Ivey of Chalotte, N. C., Dr. McSween, Dr. Jones and Dr. Brimm of Presbyterian college, and Mr. Smith. All speakers were members of the fraternity.

The Pi Kappa Phi fraternity entertained in honor of members of the freshman class on last Tuesday evening. Refreshments were served during the latter part of the evening.

Miss Georgia B. Blakely was a visitor to the Erskine campus, Due West, on last Thursday afternoon.

On last Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Waldrop, accompanied by Miss Sara Frances Terry, motored over to see their son, Frank, who received an injury during the Lenoir Rhyne game of last Saturday.

Mr. and rMs. J. D. Beacham of Honea Path, were visitors on the campus last Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. I. I. Appelt of Manning, were on the campus last Thursday, stopping by to see their son, Louie, who is a student here.

OUTLAW OF THE JUNGLE

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the great animal painter, Paul Bransom... inspired by the leopard's fierce fighting power and relentless hunt for prey which makes him the terror of every beast of the African jungle.

—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes

They are not present in Luckies ... the mildest cigarette you ever smoked

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

"It's toasted"
That package of mild Luckies

"If a man write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse-trap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door."—RALPH WALDO EMERSON.
Does not this explain the world-wide acceptance and approval of Lucky Strike?

RELIGIOUS ACTIVITIES

At a meeting of the Ministerial club Sunday afternoon, Oct. 2, a motto was selected. The motto reads, "To the Glory of God Alone." This was chosen as the best representative of the cause of a minister of the Gospel. However, the motto by no means simply refers to ministers. It would be a good policy for every man to live for the glory of God alone.

The club is contemplating a feed or a social or some kind of "get-together." The sooner this arrives, the sooner the ministerial candidates will like it, because there's nothing like a good feed or gathering to take the kinks out of one's brain, and out of the skin over the middle section of one's body.

Seriously, the club is preparing for the services to be held in Clinton beginning Oct. 19. We believe these services are going to be a blessing to this community, and to our college.

Hi-Y News

The Hi-Y Congress of the Carolinas met in Raleigh, N. C., Friday and Saturday, Oct. 7 and 8. The Clinton club in the high school was represented. The representative returned with a report that should aid the club along several lines.

The new men in the club are taking an active part in the activities, and [illegible] settling down with the old members. This is encouraging and gives promise of a fine year.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

Coach Walter Johnson, as he always does when he talks to boys, made an inspiring and instructive talk at the "Y" meeting Thursday night. He gave an outline of how phyhical education originated.

According to Coach Johnson physical education started in Germany in the 18th century. Fencing and vaulting were about the only forms of exercise which were engaged in.

In 1821 the first book on gymnastics came to America. After that we find a constant growing interest in physical education. Physical training in America started at Cambridge in 1826. We find the first gymnasium at Harvard in 1827.

Dio Lewis, in 1861, started the Normal Institution of Physical Training School at Ne wYork city. This made America the first nation to introduce organization for physical training.

In 27 years, from 1915 to 1932, America has risen from third to first place in physical education.

In rgeard to what an athlete should do to be worthy of the name of an athlete, Coach Johnson says that he should (1) keep his body fit, (2) be thoroughly loyal, (3) play clean, (4) have team spirit. He believes that living up to these things is what makes a fine football team. Johnson has been with P. C. from the time when it had only 87 students. He first started with only 16 men to make football trips.

As a warning, Coach Johnson said young men should be careful how you young men should be careful how they use their leisure time. That is when so many boys fall short.

About 40 boys were present to hear Coach Johnson.

Blue Key Convention To Be Held Here

P. C. Roosevelt-Garner Club Is Organized

LOCAL UNIT TO CORRAL VOTES

[illegible]vington Named President At Organization Meeting Held Last Week. Medallions Are Placed On Sale.

By C. R. Johnson

Last Monday noon a Presbyterian college chapter of the Young Democratic club was officially organized. [illegible]mes H. Galloway,, who is a senior [illegible] the University of South Carolina, [illegible]d student head of the organization [illegible]re, was present and personally had [illegible]arge of the organization of the local [illegible]it. Mr. Galloway was representing [illegible]n. Robert M. Cooper, state senator [illegible]d financial director of the Democratic campaign in South Carolina. A large number of students assembled for the meeting.

At the session officers for the local [illegible]oup were elected. Dr. John Mc[illegible]reen, president of the college, was [illegible]ected honorary president from the [illegible]ministration, Dean M. W. Brown in [illegible]half of the faculty, and H. H. Ferguson for the student body. Active [illegible]fficers were also elected. Ben W. [illegible]vington, Jr., was chosen president; [illegible] B. Copeland, vice-president; J. E. [illegible]man, executive committeeman; B. [illegible] McLean, recording secretary; W. [illegible]hnson McCutchon, corresponding [illegible]retary, and Charles N. Plowden, [illegible]easurer.

The collegiate Roosevelt-Garner [illegible]bs were first organized at the Uni[illegible]rsity of South Carolina. They are [illegible]part of the national organization of [illegible]oung Democrats.

Under date of Oct. 12, the following [illegible]s been published from Raleigh, [illegible] C.::

"Tyre C. Taylor, of Raleigh, presi[illegible]nt of the Young Democratic Clubs [illegible] America, today said a membership [illegible]al of 1,500,000 had been bettered [illegible] 150,000, with 3,700 organizations [illegible]42 states and the District of Co[illegible]mbia.

"A new goal has been set to increase [illegible]embership from 1,150,000 to 1,500,[illegible]00 by November 8, the date of the [illegible]neral elections, he said.

"The Young Democratic Club of Il[illegible]ois, with 225,000 members, is the [illegible]rgest state organization, Taylor [illegible]id, but New York state, with 650 [illegible]al clubs, was classed as a 'close [illegible]cond'."

The purpose of the clubs is to edu[illegible]te the young people along govern[illegible]ental lines and to place in office [illegible]ose nominated on the Democratic [illegible]cket. If, in the future, the Demo[illegible]atic party is to be led by able men, [illegible]e young people of today must be [illegible]ught the ideals and standards of the [illegible]arty. Through the Young Democratic [illegible]ubs this is being done in an excellent [illegible]ay.

It is hoped that by the first of No[illegible]ember the majority of students at [illegible]resbyterian college will be wearing [illegible]e Roosevelt-Garner medallions, local [illegible]fficers have said. The cost of joining [illegible]e organization is very small—only [illegible]fty cents. All students interested [illegible]ay secure medallions from Charles [illegible]. Plowden.

FRESHMEN ACCEPT FRATERNITY BIDS

Death Claims R. B. Smith, Jr.

The Blue Stocking regrets to announce the death of Robert Brearly Smith, Jr., of Wilmington, N. C. He was a student at P. C. during the two years, 1923-25. He was a native of Kingstree, S. C.

After leaving P. C. he attended Georgia Tech for two years. At the time of his death he was engaged in electrical engineering in the employ of the Tide Water Power Co., of Wilmington. He was a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity at both P. C. and Georgia Tech.

He died at the Kelly sanitarium in Kingstree from complications setting in from an appendicitis operation on Oct. 7.

The student body joins with the staff in extending their deepest sympathy to the family.

Grades For '31-'32 Are Announced

Scholastic Standing of Fraternities On Campus Compared. Wide Range of Marks Noted.

An interesting announcement has been made in regard to the scholastic standings on the campus for the 1931-32 session. The standing for the first semester was announced last term, but the year's average has just been released. Much interest is manifested each year between different campus groups in regard to their scholastic standing.

The average for all men students last year was 1.124, while the average for fraternity men was 1.371. The non-fraternity men led with an average of 1.526.

The average of the six fraternities vary greatly. First honor goes to Pi Kappa Alpha, who had 17 members.

W. M. Ferguson, O. B. Simmons, Die

The student body was grieved to learn of the death of William M. Ferguson of Ronzo, and O. B. Simmons of Laurens, both of which occurred during the past week. Mr. Ferguson was the father of Maxwell Ferguson, a member of the freshman class. The staff, the faculty, and the student body unite in extending their sympathy to Maxwell, and the other members of his family.

Mr. Simmons was the father of Miss Louise Simmons, who was college registrar for two years. She served one year under President Parkinson, and during the first year of Dr. McSween's administration. From P. C. she went to Mary Baldwin college, Staunton, Va., where she served as registrar. Last year she attended Vanderbilt university, specializing in city numbers, baritone sax trios, etc. It promises to be one of the best musical organizations ever sponsored by the Pan-Hellenic council.

'RUSH' SEASON ENDS TUESDAY

Forty-Seven First Year Men Pledged To Six Nationals On Local Campus. Initiation To Be Held Next Semester.

By L. A. McCall, Jr.

After four weeks of intensive rushing, the fraternities of Presbyterian college culminated the season by bidding forty-seven of the ninety-four freshmen boys on the campus. There are six national social fraternities on the campus, all of which have been outstanding in their rushing. Parties, smokers, trips to ball games, banquets, and suppers have been given during the past four weeks in honor of the new men. The season closed Monday at one o'clock with the beginning of the "quiet period," which lasted till 3:30 Tuesday afternoon, at which time the men receiving bids met in Dr. Brimm's classroom and announced their choice. Dr. Brimm acted as chairman of the faculty committee because Dr. Spencer was unable to preside. Professor Lothery assisted.

The result of the season shows the Beta Kappa fraternity leading the list in the number of men accepting bids. Fifteen men accepted Beta Kappa bids. Pi Kappa Phi and Pi Kappa Alpha fraternities tied for second place with 11 each. The Kappa Alpha group received five new men; the Alpha Lambda Taus three, and the Alpha Kappa Pi two. From the number of men receiving bids to fraternities, this seems to be one of the best freshmen classes in the history of the college. Exactly one-half the class accepted bids.

A list of those accepting bids follows:

Kappa Alpha: James McClary, Georgetown; E. Allison, Walter, Orangeburg; Colin M. Hudson, Greenville; James Addison, Goldville; T. P. Valley, Pickens.

Pi Kappa Alpha: Phil A. Adams,

Metzger Orchestra To Play For Dance

The Pan-Hellenic council announces for their pledge dance, "The Band Supreme," Ted Metzger and his Campus Owls from Cleveland, Ohio. This orchestra will be touring the South at the time and P. C. will be fortunate to have them at the coming celebration. It is a band of college musicians, graduates of Miami university, Ohio, and has been organized nine years. There has been no change in the personnel for two years.

For nine consecutive years they have played at Vermillion-on-the-Lake, an elite and popular resort on Lake Erie, just west of Cleveland. In winter their time is divided between Lake Shore hotel, Cleveland, the Bamboo Gardens, Cleveland, and fraternity dances.

There are 11 men in the band, playing 22 instruments, a vocal trio, comic numbers, [illegible]

Revival Starts Next Wednesday

Plans Being Perfected for City-Wide McQuilkin Meeting. 75-Voice Choir To Lead Music.

The first revival service of the union evangelistic meeting to be led by Rev. R. C. McQuilkin, president of the Columbia Bible college, Columbia, will be held next Wednesday evening, Oct. 19, at 7:30 in the Thornwell Memorial church. Extensive preparations are still being carried on throughout the city and it is hoped that on the very first night Mr. McQuilkin will be greeted by a large congregation.

Mrs. J. F. Jacobs, Jr., who was asked by the Ministerial union of the city to have charge of the music for the services, announces the following as her assistants in getting together the large chorus choir:

Miss Maude Sumerel, First Baptist church; Miss Anna Bell Hudson, Broad Street Methodist church; Mrs. K. B. Sloan, A. R. P. church; Mrs. S. P. Bowles, Thornwell Memorial church; Mrs. T. M. Sease, Lutheran church; Dr. S. M. Huntley, Presbyterian college glee club; Mrs. James, First Presbyterian church.

Each of the above is an efficient choir director and no doubt will greatly aid Mrs. Jacobs in organizing the choir for the meeting.

On Monday and Tuesday nights of this week, there will be union services at the Methodist and Baptist churches, respectively, in preparation for the coming of Mr. McQuilkin, and the start the evangelistic services proper.

Sigma Upsilon Gets New Men

At the first meeting of the year, Sigma Upsilon, national honorary literary fraternity, Wednesday night issued bids to seven men. J. W. Combs, Jr., was elected secretary and treasurer of the organization. Discussions were entered into as to programs for the year. J. C. McCaskill, N. G. Barron, and J. W. Combs were appointed on the program committee.

The men receiving bids are: Rollin Barney MacLean, Powell Freeman, W. M. Frammton, "Chubby" Alexander, "Polo" Pinson, and T. H. Wise. The men accepting bids will be initiated at the next meeting.

Plans Considered At Session of Local Body Last Week. Resolution Passed Pledging Support To College Authorities.

The regular meeting of Blue Key was held Tuesday night at Hotel Clinton, at which time many items of business were attended to, among them the making of plans for the state convention of Blue Key, which is to be held here early in December; discussion of the petition that was to be sent to the faculty in regard to its ruling in regard to phyhical education for the student body; resolution to support the rulings and decisions of all constituted authority on the campus, and other minor matters of a routine nature.

The state convention of the fraternity will be entertained by the local chapter on the campus from Thursday, December 1, until Saturday, the 3rd. Registration will take place during the afternoon of the first day. The first business session will be held Friday morning, and will continue until Saturday noon, at which time adjourment will be in order, after deciding on the time and place of the next meeting.

Besides the chapter here at Presbyterian college, there are chapters at Carolina, Clemson, and Wofford. All these schools will be represented by men from their Blue Key chapters. Thus here will be a grouping of the leaders of half the college students in the state.

Plans are being made to have a banquet during the convention, at which it is hoped that two distinguished members of Blue Key will honor the occasions with talks. They are Governor Ibra C. Blackwood and General Charles P. Summerall, president of The Citadel.

The decision was made to have the student body appoint a committee to work out some suitable system to substitute for the present system of physical training, which is proving more or less objectionable to a certain percentage of the students. When the new plan is completed Blue Key will then endeavor to, and is hoped to be in keeping with the traditions of the fraternity, will present it to the faculty. Under the schedule for training now in force, hardships are being borne by some of the students who have to meet the classes at certain times. It is hoped that all these difficulties may be smoothed out.

Another important subject brought up in this meeting was the matter of differences that may from time to time arise between constituted authority and a member of the student body. Each year there are cases in which there are differences of opinion. Blue Key passed a resolution, the main points of which are as follows:

The fraternity will at all times lend its influence to the support of the faculty, student body president, and his council, and all other recognized authority connected with this institution.

Where opinions differ greatly about any matter concerning members of the student body, or about anything that occurs concerning the student body, it is earnestly hoped that an appeal will be made direct to one of the governing bodies, rather than to allow talk to be spread in devious ways. This will always lead to only one thing, in the opinion of the members of the fraternity—anarchy. And that is a bad thing for any organi-

THE PRO AND CON OF PHYSICAL ED

It seems that of late there has come from [illegible] of our institutions [illegible] one must [illegible] some [illegible] of physical training. This, of course, did not bother [illegible] to any one undertaking [illegible] athletics [illegible] with the right spirit, will improve our bodies and develope them. We will develope coordination and precision; and we shall also be able to think more accurately and readily. Some of the fellows say that they have no time to give to this program; just pause for a moment and do a little thinking for yourself. Consider the football men, who put out more time every day than any other men on the campus. Yet, they have time for study and social activities.

Also, this form of exercise brings the men together and friends are made that could never have been formed in any other way. Freshmen and seniors are thrown in closer contact with each other; and it is possible that a life-long friendship will be started by only one hour of playing together. And therefore we think that the authorities should be thanked for this plan of physical education.

But we also have the "cons" to deal with and we must needs journey on another path. The assembly rooms in the college are scattered over a wide area, that we walk several miles every day going to and from classes. We believe that this—with the distance to town, is enough exercise for the average man. Then, there are those who are fortunate in having scholarships—and some of them are hard, too—and call for hard manual labor. Yet, still the hours of physical training are required. Why, we ask, should the authorities be so unreasonable? But here is a fellow who is so fortunate as to have a dining room scholarship; he has a hard course—works three hours a day regularly; and yet he must give up a part of his afternoon, three hours per week for P. E. This fellow will go half-heartedly into the game and will not enjoy it and will probably be the cause of some other fellow's afternoon being disagreeable. Therefore, we believe that he would be better off, and also the other fellows, if he were in his room studying, or at some other task.

Neither do we like the way that the schedule is arranged. The afternoon is "split right half in two," making both halves worthless because in the period of time before and after we do not have the chance to do anything worth while. Why can't this schedule be changed so that the student can take his exercise at will; and at the time that it best suits him. If he wants to study today for an examination tomorrow—why can't the P. E. come on the following afternoon? Yes, of course we realize that there would have to be some efficient way in which a fellow could be "checked."

When a man comes to college he has to pay "a right handsome sum" in order to obtain the advantages that the college offers. It seems that he should [illegible] as he wants [illegible] If he is inclined toward athletics—then let him [illegible] NO SOONER IS EBB SILVER A DED[illegible] THAN YOU CEASE TO SEE OTHERS, BUT SEE ONLY YOURSELF." —Phillips Brooks.

one. He may be a great athlete. Then his gentlemanliness shows itself up in the form of good sportsmanship. If he is working, his very being, whether in overalls or in the finest of tailored clothing partrys the courteous bearing that only a gentleman may have.

Are we, students at Presbyterian College, the gentlemen that many people think us? Or are we hiding behind the mantle of deceit, which we remove when we are by ourselves? Do we have two natures, one of them that of a gentleman, and the other a fiendish nature which has nothing of a gentleman about it? None of us are the latter, of course, but do we not often have a tendency to show something of this fiend? There are times when we become cross and irritable and say some little thing that hurts somebody's feelings, or do something that injures some one's good name. We say things behind other people's backs that we would not say to their faces. Are all these things gentlemanly? I think not, although I am just as guilty as the next man.

Let us change the slogan, "Where Men Are Made" to "Where Gentlemen Are Made," and then live up to it.

The following is an extract from the Pat-Sat of 1914, and was our Alma Mater at that date. Compare it with the present and tell us which you like the best.

In a city small, but rarest,
In a state that far is known
In a land that is the fairest, ,
Alma Mater has her home.
She is worthy of all honor
That to her we gladly give,
For she is the lavish donor
Of the truths by which men live.

She is faithful to her mission
Of conducting all aright,
For she never gives admission
To a view that hides the light.
Our ideals are much higher
Since our guardian she has been,
And our zeal is all on fire
Just to show the world we're men.

May her beacon light direct us
Ever upward to the right
As she has equipped and armed us
For the turmoil of the fight,
In the future may God keep her
On her mission brave and true,
Cheers, boys, for Alma Mater,
For the Garnet and the Blue.

AN OLD STORY

One day a miser came to a rabbi. The rabbi took him by the hand and led him to the window." Look out there," he said. And the miser looked into the street. "What do you see?" asked the rabbi. Most Dazzling Play By Blue Stockings This Year Made Behind Perfect Interference.

By Walker Combs, Jr.

Smarting under the sting of the defeat at the hands of Mercer, the Presbyterian Blue Stockings ran wild over, under and around the High Point Panthers to amass a total of 39 points to their opponents' none. From the very start of the game the Blue Hose began to score and not one quarter was played in which they did not cross the enemy's goal line at least once.

Barrett and Perrin cooperated with Adams in running the ball down the field at the start for the first touchdown. The ball was very seldom in High Point's hands. Presbyterian ran up 13 points in the first quarter.. Taking the ball on a kick-off following the third touchdown, Perrin galloped behind sterling interference for 90 yards and a touchdown. Not hesitating a moment, he chose his opening and fairly flew through it, going across behind Mills, who took the remaining man out of the way. It was the most dazzling play pulled by the Presbyterians this season.

The second half did not add as much to the score as did the first two periods. P. C. succeeded in crossing the end zone in each of the periods, however. The last touchdown came as the result of a pass, from McFadden to Waldrop, over the goal line.

The playing of the Blue Stockings was spectacular. They spared nothing in sweeping their opponents off their feet. Barrett, powerful runner and blocker, accounted for three of the touchdowns. Perrin went across twice, and Waldrop caught a pass to score once.

Elliott was injured and will be out of the game for a while on account of a bad leg. Copeland, last year's all-state and all-S. I. A. A. player, suffered a wrenched back. It is not known how long they will be out of play.

Barrett, who has been kept out of games most of the season because of last year's injuries which continue to crop out, played spectacularly. The entire backfield cooperated in perfect execution of plays that sent the ball over six times.

The line, too, played a good game. It was due to the performance of the entire team that Perrin was enabled to score on the kick-off. Every man on the team took out an opponent, and the play went through with precision.

The line-up:

Bogge	left guard
Harvin	center
Reeder	right guard
Ewing	right tackle
Pinson	right end
Adams	quarter
Barrett	halfback
Perrin	halfback
Sims	fullback

Score by periods:

P. C.	13	13	7	6	—39

"Babe" Rampey Out With Measles

"Babe" Rampey, center on the P. C. team, has been out of the game for several days with measles. He was taken ill when he saw the huge fellows at Mercer and the goose pimples turned red. The doctors diagnosed the case as measles.

This is Babe's senior year. It is tough to get sick right in the middle of the season, but since it had to happen we hope the Babe gets well in a hurry.

He has been confined to the Thornwell orphanage infirmary. It is thought he will begin meeting classes sometime next week. The next football game is two weeks off.

Thornwell Trims Newberry, 46-0

Scoring almost at will, a well-trained team coached by "Shorty" Stamps and Robert Lynn, Thornwell orphanage had little trouble in taming the "Bulldogs" from Newberry on Johnson field Friday afternoon.

From the beginning of the game, the splendid Thornwell line made gaping holes for the speedy backs to plunge through. Thornwell got the ball immediately after the game started by recovering a fumble on the kick-off. They marched down the field to a touchdown. For the remainder of the first half it was all Thornwell. The Newberry team didn't make a first down, the Thornwell team breaking through on nearly every play and smearing the runner.

Coming back in the second half, the Newberry team put up a stiffer fight and made the Thornwell team kick on several occasions, besides making several first downs for themselves. But they couldn't completely stop the Thornwell team and the Blue and Gold continued to pile up the points. The score stood 46 to 0 at the end of the game.

Garland, midget quarterback for the winners, chose his plays well, besides scoring two touchdowns, intercepting one of Newberry's numerous passes and racing 40 yards for the other. Jordan, fast and scrappy right end for Thornwell, played an excellent game. His end wasn't rounded during the game.

Newberry, finding the Thornwell line a stone wall, resorted to passes which netted them two first downs. Perrell did some good defensive work for Newberry until he was carried off the field with an injured ankle. Thompson also punted well, getting off some for 50 yards.

Coaches Stamps and Lynn have a light team, which does not rely on power to gain ground, but has in its bag many trick plays that worked well Friday. The team is well drilled and is going to make trouble for somebody this year.

No Game Scheduled For Next Week-End

The P. C. Blue Hose will have next week-end to themselves. This is their first vacant Saturday since the season started four weeks ago. The following week the team meets Wofford, playing them in the home-coming game on October 29. From then on there will not be another week off until the season closes.

Coach Johnson will give his men some light work probably this week, tuning them up for hard work before the Wofford game. In view of the home-coming on the date of the Methodist game, Presbyterian will be more than ready, and Coach Johnson is taking every precaution that he can to [illegible]

Charlie Barrett, who on Saturday ran up three tallies against High Point. Charlie was out of the game most of last year because of injuries and has played only a little so far this season. However, in view of his performance Saturday, and the fact that his injuries are almost past history, he will begin his bid for state honors. His sophomore year he was the star blocker for the S. I. Duncan Downs Clinton Hi, 19-7

In a rather hectic battle Thursday afternoon on Johnson field, the Clinton High team went down in defeat before a strong Duncan team, 19 to 7. Although the margin of victory was only two touchdowns, the Duncan team played rings around the Clinton team. The score probably would have been much larger but for the fact that the Duncan team was penalized about every other play for distances ranging from five to fifteen yards for every fault known.

Clinton started off the fireworks in the first quarter by marching down the field and crossing the goal on a forward pass of about 25 yards. From then on it was all Duncan.

The first touchdown by Clinton only served to put the Duncan boys on edge and they immediately ran through the Clinton defense for a touchown and capped it off with an extra point. Before the dust had settled on the first touchdown, the big Duncan team drove its way down the field to another touchdown, but failed to make the extra point. The score was 13 to 7. The Clinton defense then tightened and held back the Duncan team for the rest of the half.

The second half was featured by drives of each side. Overcoming their many and numerous penalties, the Duncan team fought its way down the field and scored another touchdown, but failed on the extra point. When the game ended the ball was on the Clinton goal line and another touchdown was cut off.

The main reason that Clinton remained in the running was the steady play of Boland and Ray in the backfield. Those boys can check-out with a football. Ray was on the receiving end of the touchdown pass for Clinton.

Freshman Team Moving Along

The freshman team is coming right along under the able coaching of Lonnie McMillian and it looks as if he is going to put out another good first-year team. The one last year was exceptionally good, coming second in the state. They lost only one game and that was to the Carolina frosh by the score of 7 to 6.

There is no lack of punters on the rat team. Higby, Quarterman and Wilbanks can boot the ball for good yardage consistently..

In a scrimmage on Wednesday afternoon the first team of the varsity was unable to get going and the rat team held them scoreless. It was not until the varsity second team came and the first freshman backfield went out that the varsity scored on the rats.

The freshmen also had a scrimmage with the orphanage team on Wednesday and ran through the Thornwell boys for three touchdowns. This shows that the freshmen are working hard because the orphanage team seems to be the best that has come from there in several years.

The first game for the frosh comes next Friday against the Erskine first-year team. There has been a rumor that the game is to be played at Winthrop.

WHO'S WHO ON THE P. C. CAMPUS

the purpose of this column to bring before the student body, their record in such way to inspire more men to seek to attain the heights [illegible] each week two men are to be reviewed.

HERBERT HAMBRIGHT FERGUSON

[illegible] Hambright Ferguson, president of the student body, is the first [illegible] He was born on September 14, 1911, and is a resident of S. C. While a small boy, he had outstanding ambitions: to travel [illegible] a good boxer.

With these in mind he graduated from [illegible] High School. He [illegible] Junior and Senior years, and [illegible] He has attained fame here. The [illegible] offices and honors that have been held by [illegible] manship. He was president of [illegible] Junior class, and vice-president [illegible] his senior class. During his [illegible] years he attained another ambition: he was on the boxing squad, a member of the Block "P" Society, a Pan fraternity, national; Gamma Sigma, honorary [illegible] fraternity; Sigma Kappa Alpha, honorary scholastic fraternity, and Phi Key, national leadership fraternity.

[illegible] asked what was the greatest [illegible] his life he answered: "Being [illegible] president of the student body of Spartanburg College. This is it because it is the biggest and toughest job I have ever attempted to hold down. It has given me a feeling of responsibility and a more definite sense of values."

[illegible] chosen vocation, deep down in his heart is: "Teaching because I think I'll enjoy teaching, and I think it will afford opportunity for further study, reading, and development of a well-rounded life."

Asked of his philosophy of life: "Dr. J. H. Jowett has beautifully described what I think are the most worth while things of life: 'The really good things, the big things, are inside and not outside the man. The big things are not luxury, but contentment; not a big house, but a big satisfaction; not accumulated art treasures, but the appreciation of art; not a big library, but a serene studiousness; not a big estate, but a big vision.' If a man makes a comfortable living, enjoys his work, is at peace with God and man, and has a chance to love to work and to play, what matters fame or fortune?"

Of the men and life about him, the student body president said: "I think P. C. boys are one of the finest groups of college fellows you can find anywhere."

[illegible] to the future of "Little Fergie":

COLLIS HILL LAND

C. H. LAND

Collis Hill Land, editor-in-chief of the 1933 PaC-SaC, is the second man to be thus presented. He was born on October 1, 1910, in Cypress, Florida. At the early age of eight he was left an orphan, and entered Thornwell orphanage the following year. There he spent his life until entering P. C., after finishing the orphanage high school. The one great ambition of his life, even from early childhood, has been to teach school. Here at P. C. he has been ably fitting himself for his work.

His campus activities have been varied, leading a helping hand wherever needed. Last year he served very earnestly on the PaC-SaC staff, and was worthy of the honor of being selected to edit this year's annual.

His answer as to what was the greatest day in his life is striking: "It was the day I realized what a fool I was—and that I was put here for a purpose, not for an ornament. What that purpose is, I haven't the slightest idea, but when I leave this earth, how pleasing it will be to know that I have not lived in vain."

In answer to the question of his wishes: "I want to enter into the business world and climb as high up the ladder as I can; to have friends; and to know companionship."

Of his fellow students and the life about him, he said: "I think the students of Presbyterian college are all swell fellows, but I believe that all young people today are too quick to come to conclusions, to accept passing fancies, and to form opinions. But maybe young people have always been that way. Howbeit, here's to the students of ole P. C."

And here's to you and your work, Collis.

OOFUS GOOFUS
THE OFFIS BOY

The versatility, ingenuity, originality, and just plain intelligence of the Presbyterian College faculty can not be equalled. El Professor Graham has coined, or perhaps we should say, counterfeited, a new word. He announced to his class this week that notebooks would be handed in "semi-occasionally."

Now, professor, you know that is too often.

And "Chip" Grafton is teaching a wonderful new dance step. The Romantic Movement—(in four volumes).

The only written application yet received for the position of rifle team manager reads as follows:

"I have had considerable experience handling firearms of all kinds, particularly shot-guns and air rifles. I do not use tobacco in any form or partake of any kind of intoxicating liquors. I have an excellent reputation as a person of good character and high moral standards, and would, I think, make a very excellent manager for the P. C. rifle team.

"I have no objection to traveling; and I pledge myself, if elected to this position, to do my best to help P. C. defeat the Wisconsin co-eds.

"Any consideration you see fit to give this application will be greatly appreciated."

We hope he gets the job. He deserves it.

We wondered how it came about that the Beta Kappa fraternity got so many "pledges." We found the answer. When a new fancy strikes a frat and a mfwwp mfwwp sah mihh came and were the rage. Now the rickracking. The Beta Kappas started the [illegible] the fresh flocked to them. The [illegible] Alpha boys only took in five "pledges," so they have taken to rickracking. We wish them many fine racketeers.

Do you remember your grammar school days when the teacher used to call on the class to repeat verses from the Bible? We rarely were prepared when called on, and a great favorite used on these occasions was the shortest verse in the Bible, "Jesus wept." I remember particularly well one occasion when the sweet young lady who was our teacher in the fourth grade called on her pupils to repeat Bible verses for the visiting superintendent. We had been well drilled beforehand on verses to repeat for this occasion, but an unforseen epidemic of stage fright caused every boy to forget the words he had learned.

The teacher was very much horrified to hear each member of the class in turn repeat the two solemn words of the shortest verse; but she was horrified, mortified, and all but stricken with paralysis when the serious young lad on the last row heaved a great sigh and said, "Well, I guess he wept, too."

The secret of all the excavation work going on between the Administration building and the gymnasium at last has been revealed. Anticipating a Democratic victory in the coming presidential election, a modern, fully-equipped bar is to be installed in the present "Y" recreation room in the gymnasium. The wider of the excavations is for the construction of a specially designed gutter for the accommodation of bar patrons. The other is for a pipe line running directly from the bar to the class rooms and offices in the main building.

The campus crew will undertake the construction of bar room; and in the future, bar-tending scholarships similar to those given waiters in the college dining hall will provide gin dispensers.

RELIGIOUS ACTIVITIES

This is a synopsis of a talk on "Times We Are In" by a member of the faculty.

What sort of a time are we in? It is a time for the best of training, equipment and leadership. There is a great responsibility resting on us as young people of today, the leaders of tomorrow. This responsibility cannot be shaken off. It clings like ivy to a wall. It cannot be shaken off. There are great opportunities for service in the name of Christ. This work does not fall only on the shoulders of the greatest leaders, but also on the shoulders of the subordinates. A great general of an army does not assume all the responsibility in time of battle. His subordinates must be able to make decisions and to face the responsibility that naturally falls upon their shoulders in a crisis. And we are without doubt facing today one of the greatest crises in the history of Christianity.

We must be prepared. Christ needs men who can grapple with situations. Men with faith and character. Men who are men, and not cowards.

Today there is a "ground swell" of unbeliefs. There is much disagreement with the truth as given to us in the Bible. There is too much passive agnosticism. Materialism is becoming king, the ruling force.

Today there is a babel of conflicting beliefs. There is confusion and much dissimulation of the truth. Everywhere new systems of vain philosophy are arising.

Today there is a battle between modernists and conservatives. A battle between the new loose theology of modern times and the fundamental doctrines as set forth by Jesus Christ.

Today there is a tempest of conflicting claims. Men are wondering what is true. People are becoming skeptical.

Time includes an age of vanity. of irreverence. Learned men of the past are no longer respected.

Time includes an age of vanity. Time has ushered in an outburst of individualism. There are three laws which rule individualism: (1) Self-preservation, (2) Self-realization, and (3) Self-gratification. An example of extreme individualism is found in Soviet Russia.

Today has ushered in an onslaught of lawlessness. The modern speakeasy is a good example. All types of laws are being ignored and broken: laws of the home, laws of the school, laws of the state, laws of the church.

Epicureanism has spread rapidly. "Enjoy life while you have it" seems to be the [illegible] of modern youth.

Ministerial Club

The next [illegible] of the Ministerial club October 9, proved to be one of great inspiration and value to each boy present. Interesting talks were made by "Shorts" Van Arnold and Cecil Lawter. Mr. Arnold's talk on the "Key to Character Building" was based on Christ, around whom we should build our character. Our life is a structure. The character we build now will be the character of our lives in the future. Therefore, it is important that we strengthen our life by adding character to it while we are young. Are we going to choose character that is weak and flabby, or are we going to construct our lives around the fundamental teachings of Christ? We must receive Him as King. "Whatsoever He saith unto me, that will I do." We must receive Him as a prophet, for the teaching of Christ is not concerned with earthly relationships, but with future spiritual ones. Some boys who are students, and some boys who are not students, and some girls who are students and some girls who are not, claim that they are constructing their lives around Christ and are aided merely because of the fact that their names are on the church roll. What good is that going to do if we have no accepted Christ as our personal savior and example?

Mr. Lawter spoke concerning the duties of ministerial students. Are we living lives pleasing in the sight of our Lord? Is the influence radiated by our lives evil or good? Do we depend entirely upon material things? Do we carry our problems to Christ? Are we stumbling blocks instead of true ministerial students? Do we confess our sins? Are our lives thoroughly consecrated. These points were discussed by Mr. Lawter.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

The following men spent the week-end in Montreat, N. C.: Johnson McCutcheon, Rothwell Graham, Boyd Underwood and Frank Johnson.

Rock Hill seemed to be the attraction of many of the P. C. boys over the week-end, or maybe it was Winthrop. Who knows? Whatever the answer, the following were on the scene: Herman Quantz, W. M. Frampton, Allison Walter, George Dunlap, Jimmy Neely, Louis Appelt, James Addison, Bob Wylie and John Odiorne.

Reedy Davis was a visitor in Columbia last week-end.

Jimmie Viser and Charles Plowden spent the week-end in Summerton.

L. A. McCall spent the week-end in Florence.

Johnnie Robinson, Lee Quarterman, H. H. Ferguson, Turk Osman and Bart McTeer spent the week-end touring the lower part of South Carolina. It is understood that before returning to school they had several "blowouts." We know that this was a trip of unusual interest as they had the greatest artist in school (in one particular line) along.

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

Freshman at Presbyterian college has the advantage of having all the fraternities on the campus affiliated with national organizations. The following is a brief account of each of the six fraternities represented locally. The material for this article is from Baird's Manual on College Fraternities. The write-ups are arranged according to the age of the national organization.

Kappa Alpha

This order was founded at Washington college, now Washington and Lee university, Lexington, Va., December 2, 1865. The fraternity was established with the idea of creating an organization to foster and maintain the manners, customs, and ideals of characteristic achievement, other than "sectional" of the Southern people. Washington and Lee, under the presidency of Robert E. Lee, being considered the appropriate place for the inauguration of such an institution. It has confined itself to the South with the exception of planting three chapters in the state of California. For more than 20 years there has been no extension consideration of extension beyond the "chosen limits," and the policy was declared to be fixed. The first chapter was at Washington college, established in 1865, and the new est chapter is at the University of Los Angeles, established last year. The total membership totaled 21,951.

Pi Kappa Alpha

This organization had its beginning at the University of Virginia, in March 31, W. Ramey, on the night of Thomas L. Four men were its founders. They had been intimate friends, having attended Virginia Military institute together, and all having served in the Confederate army. They took an active part in the battle of Kern Market, under General Stonewall Jackson, who was at that time based at V. M. I. The men, finding themselves together again at the University of Virginia after the war for mutual work, united to perpetuate their friendship, and so the organization was begun. Its history was ever varied and enchanting. Dr. Grimes, of the Presbyterian college faculty, has been a leading figure in the chapter for many years, and it has been largely due to him that the fraternity has had such a successful life. The total number of chapters is 42, placing it among the first ten fraternities in the country according to size. The membership in 1930 numbered 11,466.

Beta Kappa

Hamline university, St. Paul, Minnesota, was the place of the birth of this fraternity. It came into existence on October 15, 1901. It existed as a local for 21 years, when it was decided to expand into a national, and Beta chapter was established in 1922. The fraternity was incorporated in 1925. A committee on expansion was created in 1925. This made a survey of the college and fraternity fields, out of which has developed a list of approved institutions and definite plans for the future development of the fraternity. A cup is awarded annually to the chapter leading the fraternity in scholarship, and a second, known as the national relations cup, is given to the chapter ranking highest in all things pertaining to its relations with the national organization. The fraternity now has 15 chapters. The 1930 membership was 2,173.

Pi Kappa Phi

This group was founded at the College of Charleston, in Charleston, S. C., on December 10, 1904, by three friends. It was a concrete and permanent result of a friendship that had flourished since the elementary school days in the environs of one of the South's oldest towns. With the definite purpose in mind of extending the influence of the organization, the incorporation as a national fraternity took place in 1907, the purpose of the fraternity as stated in its constitution, is to promote fellowship and mutual trust among its members, to uphold the traditions and ideals of the colleges where its chapters are located, to encourage excellence in scholarship, and to inculcate in its members the highest ideals of Christian manhood and good citizenship. The organization now has 32 chapters. The membership in 1930 was 4,518. L. H. Mixson, of the freshman class at Presbyterian college, is a son of one of the three founders of Pi Kappa Phi.

Alpha Lambda Tau

Oglethorpe university, in Georgia, was the home of the first chapter of this fraternity. It was begun by a group of men who first organized as the Alpha Lambda club, the first fraternal organization at Oglethorpe after its reorganization in 1913. Its purpose had been to foster good fellowship and understanding at Oglethorpe; but it was decided that the organization should become a national order. Consequently the fraternity was incorporated under the laws of the state of Georgia. The name was registered as Alpha Lambda Tau, and the members determined that the new national should grow with the new Oglethorpe. Today it has 22 chapters, its newest one being at Mississippi State. The membership in 1930 was 1,250.

Alpha Kappa Pi

This group had its start at the Newark College of Engineering, Newark, N. J., on January 1, 1921. It remained a local society until March 23, 1926, when Beta chapter was placed at Wagnes college, Staten Island. Prior to this date a committee had worked out a complete plan for nationalization and on the date mentioned all former actions were ratified and a formal announcement of the future policy was made. The total number of chapters now numbers 22, the newest addition being Wake Forest. The total membership in 1930 was 656.

Fraternities have always played an important part in the campus life at Presbyterian college. The first chapter was founded here just ten years after the founding of the college. This was Pi Kappa Alpha chapter, which has been in existence since that time except from 1919 to 1921, during which the state prohibited fraternities in colleges. The next national was Pi Kappa Phi, which came in 1907. It was the second chapter of the fraternity. It was reestablished in 1921 also. The Kappa Alpha chapter came in 1921; Alpha Lambda Tau in 1927; Alpha Kappa Pi in 1928, and Beta Kappa in 1930. It is hoped that through this article the fraternity men of the campus, and the non-fraternity men as well, may learn more of the organizations, with whose members they daily come in contact.

zation, whether it is a student body, or a nation.

Blue Key wishes the students, especially freshmen, to be assured of the co-operation of the chapter with every individual student. Any who wish advice in matters pertaining to their campus relations may feel at liberty to consult the members of the fraternity whenever they please. The chapter is anxious to do all in its power to bring about a closer contact between the administration and the students.

M'SWEEN VISITS CHURCH BODIES

Returns Friday From Extensive Trip To Georgia In Interest of Presbyterian College. Will Attend Two Other Meetings Before Program Is Completed.

President John McSween returned Friday from a lengthy trip throughout the state of Georgia. He began his tour of the state from its northeast corner, traveling across the state to the southwest corner—from the South Carolina line to the Florida line, and then up into the northwest corner to the Tennessee state line. The trip included about a thousand miles, and lasted the entire week.

Sunday, October 16, Dr. McSween preached at the First Presbyterian church in Augusta. His next two addresses were in Milledgeville, one before the students of Georgia Military academy, and one before a meeting of Augusta presbytery. He then spoke before two more presbytery meetings, Macon in Dawson, and Southwest Georgia presbytery in Boston. Next he addressed the student body at the Darlington School for Boys, in Rome. On his way home he stopped in Decatur, where he had a part on the program of the session of the Georgia synodical.

Dr. McSween appeared before the Presbytery meetings in the interest of Presbyterian college, since the institution is jointly supported by the Presbyterians of South Carolina and Georgia.

Next week he will appear before meetings of Athens and Atlanta presbyteries. This will conclude his tour of Georgia presbyteries until some time in November, when Savannah presbytery holds its meeting. Dr. McSween then will have addressed all of the six presbyteries making up the Synod of Georgia.

College Glee Club Continues Work

The new Presbyterian college glee club has been practicing for several weeks and, under the new management, has been making great headway. Dr. Huntley is proving his worth in the line of glee club training. The boys, too, are responding with remarkable swiftness. Part of the new music has arrived, and the club will now begin in earnest to prepare for

Faculty To Limber Up Squeaking Joints In Physical Education Classes

The following was found posted on the bulletin board in the Administration building before chapel Friday morning, and will be of interest to both students and faculty.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO FACULTY!

Schedule for Physical Culture

Aesthetic Dancing—Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at 4:30 P. M.—D. J. Brimm, A. V. Martin, A. E. Spencer, J. H. Davis, M. W. Brown, R. E. Wysor, J. H. Hunter, and L. McMillian.

Hop-Scotch — Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, 2:20 P. M.—M. G. Woodworth, "Willie" Jones, J. B. Kennedy, T. E. Lothery, H. E. Sturgeon, R. L. Coe, W. A. Johnson, and Alma Davis.

Tiddle-de-Winks — Mondays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays, at 3:30 P. M.—C. W. Grafton, B. Graham, J. McSween, S. M. Huntley, W. L. Blanton, F. D. Jones, and Mrs. Brown.

Director of Training: Sarg. Young.

Note.—Please be on time or you will be absent. One demerit for each absence. Exercise is compulsory. Please do not ask for an excuse.

This announcement will come as a surprise to most of the faculty, as no doubt they have not even had a hint to the effect that they were to be required to have this exercise each week.

It is expected that there will be teams organized for each of the three activities, and tournaments will get under way in a short while. .

It is reported that there are several members of this group who are adept in the particular branch of the sport to which they have been assigned. Dr. Davis at one time held the aesthetic dancing champion hip of the Fiji Islands, Professor Jones (referred to above as "Willie") holds a long-distance hop-scotch record for some place or other and Mrs. Brown is adept at tiddle-de-winks.

As soon as this group gets in a little practice, there will be more news of the schedules for the inter-group games, which will be played off as soon as possible.

Grades For First Period Are Higher

Fewer D's and E's Are In Evidence Among Grades For the First Month of Work.

Last October when the first grades of the semester were announced there was much turmoil, not only because of the great number of low marks recorded against the members of the freshman class, but against the whole student body.

The first grades of this term have been tabulated, and it is found that they are much better than those made last October, especially among the frosh. Last year the seniors making D's or E's the first month numbered 13; the juniors 39; sophomores 71, and freshmen 169. In these statistics it must be remembered that the classes this year were one year back in standing last year—or, in other words, seniors were juniors, etc. This year the D's and E's stand; seniors, 25; juniors, 16; sophomores, 106; freshmen, 98. Thus, in the student body there are 48 less D's and E's than was the case last year.

Revival Services Drawing Crowds

The long-heralded city-wide evangelistic services in which all Clinton is taking part, began last Wednesday night. Since that time the Thornwell Memorial chapel has been filled to capacity at every session. The Rev. S. P. Bowles has been leading the song services, aided by a choir of 75 voices, with Mrs. J. F. Jacobs, Jr., as pianist.

The leader for he revival, the Rev. R. C. McQuilkin of Columbia, is an outstanding Bible teacher. As head of the Columbia Bible college he has acquired a national reputation and students come to Columbia from all parts of the United States to hear his interesting lectures. He also edits the comments on the Sunday school lesson in the Sunday School Times, Philadelphia. As a speaker, he presents strong, appealing Gospel messages with great power and effectiveness.

Prayer meeting that the revival might be a success are being held each night at ten o'clock in the different dormitories. At the Clinton high school they are being held each morning.

Walks On Campus Being Repaired

Construction Crew At Work In Effort To Make Walkways Passable In Rainy Weather.

Very soon rainy weather will hold no dread for those of us whose shoes are prone to leak. The campus crew, under the capable direction of Sergeant Young, is starting a series of projects that have needed attention for many seasons.

There are a number of walk-ways on the campus that are well-nigh impassible in bad weather, and it is being planned to build all of these walks up to such a level that water cannot stand on them, and to build a concrete curbing to prevent washing.

The first of these walks to be worked on is that leading from the gym-

An Appreciation

Every school has guiding stars. P. C. has them—members of the faculty, in whom the confidence of the students may freely be vested. To each of them we offer praise for the services they have rendered, and thanks for trouble we have caused. But to one man we owe more than a vote of thanks; more than a mere mention of his service.

Years ago, during the days when Presbyterian college was beginning its rise to its present heights, there came a man to the faculty, one whom time has proved to be a guiding star. Under his hand, athletics at P. C. have always received outstanding attention. Teams have won; teams have lost; but there has always been that fight, and that spirit which makes P. C. stand out in the collegiate world. To a great degree this wonderful characteristic may be attributed to Coach Walter A. Johnson.

Last week the author read, and in a round-about way came in possession of an excellent example of the way the alumni of the school feel, and their thoughts are mostly the more mature feelings of the members of the student body:

"Please excuse this poor excuse for a letter, but I just want to say that I am proud of the way 'the team' staged a 'comeback' after the Mercer game. And, may I add, I believe the greatest part of the credit is due to you, Coach Johnson, the finest coach of all and a great sportsman and gentleman.

"Although I have had very little contact with you on the athletic field, I know, as all P. C. men do, that it is your spirit of fight that wins the games for P. C. The service which you render to P. C. is invaluable, and I am proud to say that I am an alumnus of the school which has you for her coach.

"I'll be here to see the P. C.-Citadel game and, whether win or lose, I'll be proud of the team, because I know they will have given their best.

"More power to you, Coach, and best of luck.

"An Admirer,
"Charleston, S. C."

With this statement from an alumnus, the author would like to add a statement of appreciation on behalf of the present students. They are with you now, Coach, and they will always be with you!

Quarterly Bulletin Is Interesting

Current Issue Contains Alumni Section, Inviting Them To Return for Home-Coming.

The quarterly bulletin, regularly issued by the college, is rather different this time. On the front of the current number note is made of the fact that the 1932-33 session is the 53rd year of work at Presbyterian college.

On the second page are found some facts about the freshman class, which is made up of men from eight states. Medicine leads the list of occupations chosen by 58 members of the class who have reached a decision on what they are going to make their life's work.

The third page, and the last page, are taken up with alumni news. Rev. C. K. Douglas, president of the alumni association, announces an alumni business meeting in the chapel at 2 o'clock on Saturday, October 29th. At this meeting officers will be elected.

There is also a letter from President Douglas to the alumni. He praises Dr. McSween for his work at P. C. He also praises the football team, predicting victory over Wofford after a hard battle. There is an urgent request that every alumnus who can possibly do so arrive in time for the business meeting after lunch. A coupon is attached to the bulletin so that the business manager may know, to some degree, how many people are to be at the luncheon. Every alumnus is urged to return the coupon as soon as he receives the bulletin.

Squiff Ball Artists To Take Spotlight

The new collegiate sport of squiff-ball is taking the country by storm, and is meeting with the acclamations of all. Much local interest has been aroused with the announcement of the athletic department that a varsity team will be organized this year. It is understood that the approved rulings on the sport will be out by Thanksgiving, and that early season practice will start on or about the third of December.

Due to the fact that many of our varsity football men are interested in squiffball, the first game will not be played until December 15. Several outstanding men on the campus have had previous experience either in prep or high school circles.

Turk Osman, all-South Africa middle squiff, Johannesburg; Polo Pinson, all-Southern left squiff, Hillsboro High, Tampa, Fla.; Milo Adams, left half squiff on the Charleston 140-pound Squiffliets, Memminger High; Alexander McCollough, all-Saskatchewan right squiff, Hanover High; B. Graham, all-community right half quiff, Clinton Junior High; Bill Clark, all-Union County full squiff, Booker T. Washington High; and G. Barron, who received honorable mention for all-state squiff-squiff at Columbia High.

All squiff ballers or would-be squiff ballers are urged to brush up on their game before the first call is issued for practice. Those who wish may practice squiff ball instead of volley ball, under Coach Bissett at the gymnasium.

It is understood that Professor Grafton, who had considerable experience at Northwestern, will coach the team. Ben Covington, who was affectionately called "Cocie" while managing the Florence Yellow Jacket Squiffles, will fill the bill as manager.

A. W. HAMILTON TO SPEAK HERE

Noted Lecturer To Appear Before Student Body Thursday Morning. Address Last November Is Recalled. Used By Wilson After War.

The second in the series of special chapel exercises at Presbyterian college will be held Thursday morning, Oct. 27, when Hon. A. W. Hamilton of Charlotte, N. C., will speak to the student body. Two weeks ago Hon. J. J. McSwain, representative in congress from the Fourth South Carolina district, began the yearly program of speakers with an address on "A Sane National Defense Policy," taking a stand for military preparedness. Other speakers will follow at regular intervals.

Mr. Hamilton will speak at 11:45 in the college auditorium.

Mr. Hamilton is not unknown to most of the students, since he delivered an outstanding address last November when he appeared at the college. He is a distinguished figure in the fields of diplomacy, the church, engineering, and is an authority on international relations, upon which subject he based his address last year, bringing at that time an address on "America's Responsibility."

His coming again will meet with the entire approval of all who heard him last year. His personality was appealing in its romance and glamour. The son of a Confederate soldier who refused to stay in the South after the war between the states, Mr. Hamilton was born in London. He was educated at Cambridge, and then came to America. The World war began, and Mr. Hamilton joined the British army, being at the front with that country's forces for the first three years. With the United States in the conflict, he felt the call to the flag and was transferred to the A. E. F., and attached to headquarters staff. At the cessation of hostilities he was sent to various cities of Europe by Woodrow Wilson to assist in establishing order out of chaos. President Wilson further honored him by trusting him to carry on messages of international relations to the British universities.

Mr. Hamilton today is Southern director of a consulting engineering society and active in the field of international relations work.

As usual when special chapel exercises are held, classes will begin as soon as the first period ends and run until the 11:35 bell, at which time the battalion will form on the walk in front of the Administration building.

FRATERNITIES—FOR THOSE WHO AREN'T

There are many freshmen among us today are not wearing fraternity badge pins. There are some among these who will write their names higher on the roll of fame and success than many of those who have worn fraternity pins. Success does not depend upon what club or fraternity one belongs to, but upon what one is in the man. What really counts is not what shines on your coat lapel or sweater, but what lies back of your belt buckle. The man with determination and fight will make his way to the top if he has the makings of a man, but if he lacks these vital factors he will never make the grade though he wears every obtainable badge of social and fraternal distinction known to man.

Remember, fellows, fraternities are helpful, but not essential. There are many of you who may be disappointed because you did not receive a bid, but don't "let it get you." Forget it, buckle down to the task before you, and as soon as you prove your worth as a man you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you have all that is necessary to be successful.

You are just as good as the other fellow—show him that, and we all will be proud of you.

FRATERNITIES—FOR THOSE WHO ARE

The [illegible] activities on our campus are to be congratulated, individually and collectively, for the bunch of fine men generally pledged. The freshmen, as a rule, are to be congratulated on their excellent choice.

At the present time a few words to the upperclassmen pledged may be called for. You are subject to the same rules that govern the freshmen, and it is your duty to see that they are carried out. You are subject to the same penalties for failure to do so. Remember that you are now a member of a fraternity, and not the fraternity the man. Regardless of the name of your fraternity, or what its ideals, moral and codes are, if, like a chain, it is no stronger than its weakest link. What you are and what you do, if commendable, will raise the standards of your fraternity higher in the esteem and favor of mankind; and just as surely will your infamous and underhanded actions drag down that name, and those standards—no matter how high it may rate.

It is up to you, pledges. Will the name and standards of your fraternity stand on a higher plane a year from now, or on a lower plane?

"The task is yours—we're watching you."

PERTAINING TO CHAPELS

It is my sincere belief that chapel at P. C. is not, as it now stands, worth two cents, Mexican, to any individual.

Day by day we go to the auditorium and go through the form of worshiping God. It has become mere boresome form to everyone.

No one pays any attention to the Scripture read, and only a rare few to what may be said pertaining to the words of God. The most deplorable and, shall I use the word, desecrating fact concerning chapel, is the indifference of the majority to the prayer offered. There are only a few who bow in reverence; the rest stare around, hit each other, and shuffle their feet in awkward boredom.

I think chapel should be remedied, and I offer a remedy as well as I think it.

Every day is an anniversary of some important event. Why not take this incident, birthday or whatever it may be, and use it to the intellectual advancement of the student.

If it be the day that Ticonderoga fell, tell us about it. If it be the day that J. E. B. Stuart was born, tell us of him. If it is the anniversary of Luther's death, tell of it. If Chopin was born, have some of his compositions played and tell of his life. Maybe Columbus discovered America or San Salvador—don't let it go unnoticed, as it was this year.

There are a million and one things that can be used for ten-minute talks in chapel during the year. The faculty can study up on their day and use an assigned topic—or students can. With Scripture and prayer the chapel could be made worth while to all.

Chapel is at the present very boring to the majority of us, but we could find a heart-felt interest in learning every day some new fact concerning this universe about us and of those who inhabit it.

It can be easily ascertained by some responsible person or persons, what event has happened on every day. I advocate applying this to chapel services.

Religion, as a mere form, is not worship of God; it is valueless to us all. Chapel has become form only.

Let the next week bring forth a new kind of chapel that will leave a germ of thought with the majority present; and all may benefit and derive pleasure and good. —Osman.

COLLEGE STUDENTS AND POLITICS

Clubs of Young Democrats have been springing up in almost every institution of learning in the country, or if not Young Democrats, Young Republicans, Socialists, etc. They have as their aim the support of their party for the good of the country. They work to get their candidate elected. Maybe they are a good thing, maybe they are not.

The state of Virginia once thought the work of students in the political races as undesirable. An editorial in the college weekly of Washington and Lee university last week gives an insight into the thoughts of the Virginia students today in regard to the matter.

"But the following persons shall be excluded from registering and voting: idiots, insane persons and paupers; persons convicted . . . of treason, or of any felony, bribery, petit larceny . . . a student in any institution of learning, be regarded as having gained or lost a residence as to the right to vote by reason of his location absent to obtain his own school fees or interest in such an institution," so reads the law of the Commonwealth of Virginia. And that, indeed, is why [illegible] although they may be "educated" and classified as an adult.

"If there is such a thing as discrimination, here is an example. The state has passed a law that prevents students of its 'educational' institutions voting in the coming national election. Urged by his professors to take an interest in politics and exercise his franchise to vote, the student of legal voting age runs up against this 1887 law that prevents him, as a student, voting for the president of the United States in the state of Virginia.

"Virginia is willing to take the student's money for the poll tax. The student may pay that, but let him try to register. His money is taken without question, but his vote isn't wanted. He must buy a license to use Virginia's roads, but Virginia doesn't want to use his vote. He spends money for nine months in the Old Dominion, but the Old Dominon says 'You don't pay taxes.'

"Perhaps a college town might find some 'self-benefiting' reason for discrimination, but why a state should inconvenience members of its educational institutes by disenfranchising them is hard to understand. Hill-billies not knowing enough to try to understand the word 'politics' may go to the polls; the college student cannot."

THE COLLEGE DAMES

"Human nature is a funny thing." The more you do for people the less they seem to appreciate it. And we just do not understand why this should be a conspicuous reality in the Blue Stocking student body. We plan for our dances, have our parties and other social events of the year. Who is it that sees that everything goes over "in a swell way?" Who is it that sees that the "dorm" is spic and span for our lady guests? Who is it that stays up until the wee hours of the morning—to care for our girls? Who is it that you call on for advice about these problems? In fact, who is it that is always ready to help any individual, club or fraternity? It is the wives of the professors and other men of the administration. They have an organization known as The College Dames. And they are waiting to help in any student body activity — or anything else that they are called to do.

Is it not strange that we have these social functions, and call on these ladies to help us. They give their time and labor unreservedly; and yet they haven't been thanked for this service. We mean that the individuals and clubs never think of this small courtesy. Isn't it the least that we can do to tell them just how much we appreciate their interest and help? Then, why it is that it is never done?

Is it because we are careless—and do not think of this gentlemanly courtesy? If so, we should try and remember that the smallest service rendered for any kind of function, by anybody should be appreciated. What more can anyone expect when they are called on for work than to receive at least our appreciation? We are frank in saying that it is shameful the way that the P. C. student body has treated the Dames; and we are humiliated when we think of it.

It would certainly be advisable for the administration to add another course to the present curriculum, one in etiquette, or in other words, "good manners," and require every man to pass this course with an "A" before he receives his "sheep-skin." Let this thought sink home—and remember the service that The College Dames are doing for us. Then when they help us in our social functions, make it a practice of telling them just how much we appreciate it. And better still, it would be a good idea for every club to so pride itself in its manners that the secretary would be asked to write a letter to these ladies expressing the appreciation of the whole group.

Fellows—let us say again that the very least we can do is to be courteous. When we are careless in such matters "it shows up a rough spot in our character"—let's be polite; and determine never to have another social gathering without telling The College Dames we appreciate their services and interest. "What less can they expect?" —M. A. C. L.

Just what is "rough cut?"

THE tobacco that is cut best for pipes might be termed "whittle cut" or "rough cut," like Granger. It requires a type of tobacco different from the tobacco used for chewing tobacco or cigarettes. Then again, Granger is made by Wellman's Method.

Granger has a pleasing aroma. It is slow burning and cool. Just try it!

FRESHMEN START OFF WITH BANG TO TRIM ERSKINE, 38-12

P. C. First Year Men Surpass All Hopes of Most Rabid Fans In First Game of Season.

Higby Gallops 80 Yards For Score

Sensational Run Climaxes Afternoon of Splendid Performance By Blue Stocking Team.

Playing their first game of the year, the Presbyterian freshmen pulled a surprise after surprise to beat the little Fleet from Erskine by the score of 38 to 12. Erskine was in position to score twice, and crossed the goal line each time. They scored in the opening minutes of the game against the Blue Socks' second string, and again as the result of several passes and a line drive in the final period. The rest of the game was all in favor of the P. C. first year men.

Receiving the ball on their own 20-yard line, Erskine failed to gain, and punted to Guerard on Presbyterian's 45-yard line. A penalty set the ball back 10, giving the Little Fleet the ball on P. C. 18-yard line. Simmons completed a pass for first down, McCuen went around end for seven, and Whitten made first down through the line. On a lateral pass McCuen crossed the goal line for the first tally of the game. The try for extra point failed, leaving the score, Erskine6, P. C. 0.

It was then that Coach Lonnie McMillian sent in his first string and the fireworks started. If the Erskine score was [illegible] short order, the Presbyterian tally was of even shorter. On an exchange of punts P. C. received the ball on her own 49-yard line. Denny crashed through the line for five yards, Quarterman and Denny each gained considerably for a first and ten, and then Quarterman hurled a perfectly executed pass to Higby for 25 yards and a touchdown across the goal line. The score stood, 6 and 6.

The P. C. rats came close to scoring early in the second quarter, but Whitten punted out of danger for the time being.

Denny was the power in the Blue Hose offense. He crashed off tackle for gain after gain, side-stepping when necessary and driving for all he was worth when that was impossible. For a long while, Higby was unable to get off for any spectacular runs, saving his burst of glory until the third period when he galloped from his own 20-yard line to return a punt for a touchdown. Quarterman was doing fine work, while Wilbanks was satisfying himself with quarterbacking.

The second P. C. score came in the middle of the second period. Denny and Quarterman ran wild down the field, gaining eight to 10 yards at a clip. Finally Denny ran the ball out on the two-yard line. Higby made two attempts, missing goal by inches. A penalty gave P. C. the ball near the goal after an exchange of punts. Denny plunged for nine yards and a goal on a straight power play.

Erskine made several gains, but fumbled on a trick play, and Horne in every play of the game, recovered as the half ended.

In the opening minutes of the third quarter the Blue Socks crossed the goal line again. Denny and Higby cooperated in making first down. Denny ran through the line for 18 yards, and then Quarterman went 24-yards to the one-yard line. Higby twisted over to the tune of the "tatooed lady." The score at the end of the third period was, P. C. 18, Erskine 6.

Horne recovered a blocked punt on the one-foot line to put the Socks in position for their next score. The two teams had battled on fairly even terms, until a penalty forced Erskine fighting, bitter-spirited team thru the to punt. The attempt was blocked and one they will see in action next Sa[illegible] Horne recovered. Higby ran the ball [illegible]urday over and Holliday kicked the extra point, the first of the game.

A burst of brilliance on the part of the Erskine team followed this score. Taking the ball on the 50-yard line after the kickoff. Whitesides, who was the biggest threat as a running back, gained eight. Two long passes put the ball on Presbyterian's three-yard line, and Simmons galloped through the bewildered P. C. yearlings on the first play to score. The score now stood, P. C. 25, Erskine 12.

Higby ran back the kickoff to the Erskine 39-yard line. Denny and Higby gained eight each for a first down, and then Higby, who improved with every run, gained 13 yards around right end. The plays followed each other in rapid succession, with Denny crashing off tackle for six yards, Quarterman making first down, and then running 15 yards around left end, scoring a touchdown with the aid of splendid interference on the part of Davis.

With the score 31-12, Higby pulled the most dazzling and sensational run of the day. Three plays failed to score for Erskine. Whitten punted to Higby who, from his own 20-yard line, ran 80 yards for the final touchdown.

At end, Allison played a fine game, and Forehand's work at tackle deserves especial commendation. Not even the most ardent supporters of the team expected so great an exhibition.

Freshmen Face Cubs Saturday

With their 38-12 defeat of Erskine as a starter, the Presbyterian freshmen began their season in earnest. Next Saturday, while the varsity battles Wofford, they meet the Clemson freshman team at Clemson.

Much has been said about the Clemson squad. They have a strong, heavy, powerful team. However, the P. C. freshmen showed a nicely coordinated attack, with power and speed very well distributed. The line, which was feared to be the weak point, did excellent work against Erskine.

It is planned for Manager Shinnick to wire in the report of the game in time for the special edition to come out next Saturday night.

Blue Stockings Play Wofford Saturday

After enjoying their only open date of the year by witnessing the Erskine-Wofford game at Spartanburg Saturday afternoon, the P. C. varsity set to work today to shape itself for the home coming battle with Wofford at Johnson field next Saturday.

Last year, it may be remembered, Wofford defeated the Presbyterians at the Wofford home coming day game. P. C. is anxious for the chance to settle old grievances in a gentlemanly way on the field of honor.

A great crowd of P. C. men are expected back on that day to dig up memories of the heroic past, and talk about what used to be. Few, however, will be able to remember a harder terms, until a penalty forced Erskine fighting, bitter-spirited team thru the

Thornwell Downs Duncan, 13-0

On Thursday afternoon a strong Duncan team went down in defeat to the best team Thornwell has had in the past several years by a 13-0 score.

Displaying a strong passing attack and a hard running attack, Thornwell succeeded in pushing over two touchdowns by the pass route in the first and fourth quarters. The pass for the first touchdown was from Garland to Jordan. These two men have been outstanding for the entire season. The second touchdown was made by a pass from Garland to Beeman. The extra point was made on a pass to Jordan.

The Thornwell team consistently ran through the Duncan line only to be stopped by Blackwell, who played a fine game for Duncan in the backfield. Coan led the running attack for Duncan, displaying swiftness on end runs and punt returns.

By wining this game, Thornwell has shown itself as the outstanding contender for the district championship. They have only to defeat Clinton this week to win the championship. If they win they probably will have to play Greer for the semi-upper state class B title.

Coaches Stamps and Lynn deserve a great deal of credit for bringing the team through thus far in such fine shape. Their team will go into the game with Clinton favored to win, but a scrap can be expected in this annual clash.

Date Of Citadel Game Changed

The sports department of Presbyterian college announces that the date of the final game of the year, against the Citadel at Charleston, has been changed. The game will be played on Armistice day, November 11, instead of the scheduled date of November 12.

Coming at the end of the season, this will give the football team a short vacation, since the 11th is on Friday. Supporters of the team are looking forward to a good game when these two South Carolina elevens meet.

Injuries Numerous In Blue Hose Ranks

A number of injuries have entered the line-up during the past few weeks, thinning the ranks at practice each afternoon.

Bobby Reeder has been out for a week with a swollen knee. B. Redmond, junior back, has been observed walking around the campus as though he were afraid some one would poke him in the back, and now Robinson, parenthesis tackle, hurt his funny bone. J. B. Copelan looks like a walking hospital on the practice field. Barrett is bothered with an injured hip, and Searcy Elliott limps pretty badly down in the flats each afternoon. They'll all probably pull out of it by the Wofford game.

Newberry In Tie With Clinton Hi

Newberry, Oct. 21.—Newberry and Clinton fought to a tie today as the game ended with Clinton lacking only 10 yards for the winning marker. Thompson gave fans a thrill with an 80-yard run for Newberry's score. The Hatchings held on several occasions to show their best game of the year. Boland was the spark to start Clinton by driving for first downs with Ross going over. For Newberry, Thompson, Welling, Longshore and Holm featured, with Boland, Ross Cooper, Abrams and Hitt doing well for Clinton.

EVERY P. C. MAN SHOULD PATRONIZE THE BLUE STOCKING ADVERTISERS

WHO'S WHO ON THE P. C. CAMPUS

It is the purpose of this column to bring before the student body, their [illegible] and in that way to inspire more men to seek to attain the heights [illegible]. Last week two men are to be reviewed.

JOHN CALVIN McCASKILL

John Calvin McCaskill was born in Barnwell, in the southern part of Georgia, September 15, 1913. Since that time he has lived in many different [illegible] in fact; so "Skeeter" has a wide knowledge of the geography of the surrounding states. At the present time he is a resident of the little city of Liberty Hill, S. C., the home of former Governor Richards, his uncle.

McCASKILL

During his early childhood John says he passed from stage to stage in the hunt for [illegible] ambition. From policeman, [illegible] etc., to president of the U. S. his ambitions ran in regular boyish style. But above them all, the desire to be a minister excelled. Born of a family of God-loving people, "Skeeter" has always walked close to the way of right.

It was without hesitation that John answered the question of the greatest decision in his life. "The greatest day of my life was the day I entered Presbyterian college—entered upon an entirely new and different aspect of life."

"My philosophy of life is: Let each day take care of itself. Give one's best effort to the task at hand, but do not worry concerning what the future has in store. Select the line of work in which you are best suited and most interested, and subordinate all other matters to it."

At last McCaskill has found the field in which to devote his life. His ambition now is: "Teaching history—because my talent (if any) seems to lie along that line. I am interested in history above all else."

"The people about me are a good sort," said McCaskill, "and I have very few intimates. The general opinions other people have of me are not important to me, except that I do not like to 'rub any one the wrong way.' Of the life around me, I say that I could want nothing more pleasant. The life on the campus, and the contact with the other fellows is truly ideal."

A list of the varied activities of this fellow shows him fully worthy of an interview in this column. He is a member of four fraternities on the campus: Sigma Upsilon, national honorary literary fraternity; Gamma Sigma, honorary journalistic fraternity; Sigma Kappa Alpha, honorary scholastic fraternity; and, according to his own words, the Pi Kappa Phi, national social fraternity. He is business manager of The Blue Stocking, and a member of both The Collegian and Sigma staffs. He is president of Sigma Upsilon, and of the honorary fraternity council. In the military department he is a first lieutenant.

HALL SEARCY ELLIOTT

Hall Searcy Elliott was born in the little town of Hazelhurst, Ga., on February 18, 1911, and since that time he has been aiming his life toward a career as a doctor. From earliest childhood it has been his greatest ambition to be a doctor. Now that he is a senior in college, his work is soon to be a realization. From P. C. he goes to some medical school from which he hopes to graduate into one who will someday be listed among the greatest surgeons of the country.

ELLIOTT

As to his philosophy of life, Searcy said: "Life is the journey that takes you from the depths of obscurity to the heights of fame, and then—for many people—back to the levels of despair; but to come, to a glorious end. Life is to be taken seriously, but never so seriously that it cannot be enjoyed to its fullest extent. I don't believe a boy should be condemned for things traditionally called 'wild oats' but in his more mature years, he shows signs of a 'steady' head. Love is an essential thing in life, and a thing which cannot be expressed in words—unexplainable in an article like this."

Elliott, when asked of the life and people about him, answered, "I can get along fine with almost anybody, but I have very few really close friends. I think the boys at P. C. are all fine, but there are few people anywhere that hold the keys to my innermost feelings. The life about me is ideal; in fact, life is THE thing."

According to Sarey, the greatest day in his life, so far at least, was the day he was initiated into the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. It's probably the same way with all fraternity men—the day of their initiation marks the beginning of a completely changed life for them..

Since coming to Presbyterian college, his activities have been numerous and outstanding. On the football field he has always been noticeable. He is a member of the Block "P" club. He has been treasurer of every class since entering school, and was elected vice-president of the local chapter of Blue Key, national leadership fraternity when it was installed last semester. He is also president of the local chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha, national social fraternity; and a leading admirer of a certain local girl.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

Because of the city-wide evangelistic services being held twice a day in the Thornwell chapel, the regular weekly meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was not held last week. At the meeting on Oct. 13 the 40 boys present heard Dr. B. O. Whitten, superintendent of the State Training school, of Clinton. Dr. Whitten, according to his own statement, has recently been studying neurology, birth control, and mental hygiene. However, he had for his topic the general subject of paralysis, with especial reference to physical education as an aid to overcoming the effects of paralysis.

Dr. Whitten brought to mind the broadness of the subject in hand. There are so many different kinds of paralysis that it would be impossible to cover the topic in even a very general way in a 20- or 25-minute speech.

Speaking of idiocy, Dr. Whitten stated that some specialists go so far as to say that 90 per cent of idiocy is due to tramatic conditions, that is, injuries before birth. The speaker believes very strongly, however, that "like begets like." He believes that heredity plays a very large part in this question.

Infantile paralysis is another form of paralysis that is continually brought to our attention. This attacks the spinal column, affecting the motor nerves. It is not exactly under [illegible] stood how it is contracted, although it is thought that contraction often comes through carriers. Infantile paralysis most generally attacks between the ages of two and six, though it may attack later. The results of this disease on any particular patient cannot be predicted. The outcome depends on the severity and extent. Deformity comes when the muscles which have wasted away are drawn out of place by the opposing muscles. If taken in time this situation can be helped by putting the affected part in a cast. After the attack is over the patient must take it easy for about two years before anything can be done to help restore strength. Sometimes an operation is performed to shorten some of the muscles. After as much as possible has been done along this line it remains for the patient to try to start some of the muscles back to work by determination and perseverance, in daily exercise and workouts.

With spinal menengitis the main thing is to try to get the patient to live. If the patient does live there is just a chance that he will ever regain his former strength to some extent, probably never entirely.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

Uniform inspection will be held at the regular inspection hour during drill period on Tuesday, Oct 25. In previous inspections the inspecting officer has made temporary allowance for belts, shoes, insignia, etc., that have not been polished, but now that each student understands fully just what to clean and polish and how to do it, it remains that the remainder of the inspections will be on a stricter basis.

The neater the appearance of each cadet on the campus and up-street the more favorable comments received. Although one may not realize it, every student of P. C. in the R. O. T. C. is noticed by various and numerous outsiders. Their comments upon the unit are relayed from one person to another (mostly the ladies) and finally find a resting place in the ears of both Capt. Wysor and Capt. Blanton. Their reaction to these remarks depends upon the nature of them. If good, their attitude is that of one well pleased, if bad, then . . . drastic results. Let's each and every one uphold the tradition of P. C.'s unit and present a neat appearance on all occasions.

It has come to our attention that Lt. Taylor, formerly instructor an instructor in military tactics and science here at P. C., is now stationed in the Hawaiian islands and very contented with his new duties.

His duties require some attention to mules used in the machine gun company, and it is understood that he does not know which is the harder to instruct—the mules or some new men at P. C.

The different companies, A., B. and C. have now been organized and have started company drill. Reports from the company commanders, Captain Woodside, Captain Ewing, and Captain Howell, are favorable. The new men have responded to their duties like true soldiers of the P. C. R. O. T. C. unit and each day sees progress both in military efficiency and ability.

The R. O. T. C., like the rest of the school, is elated over the fact that there are more men this year than in previous years. The battalion, formerly a mere skeleton, has now swelled to such an extent that one can hardly realize that it used to be simply a framework. A number of the new cadets have had previous military work at C. M. T. C. prep schools, etc., thereby making the work of teaching easier on the instructors.

Extra! Extra!!

"Shine" Lowry, alias Private John Walker, is now on trial for deserting the army.

The course of study now being pursued by the seniors is on the subject of courts-martial. In order to better bring out the actions and procedure of such a court a mock trial is being staged. "Shine" Lowry is the accused; the district attorney, or as known in military courts as judge advocate, "Turk" Osman; Jimmy Neely is the defense counsel.

The other day on passing Shine, who was engaged in constructing the new $1,000 walk" leading from the main building to the gym, a student asked him what he was doing. Shine replied in a very mournful voice that he was practicing breaking rocks, since he knew Lawyer Neely was not going to be able to get him out of his trouble.

Capt. Wysor is talking of putting on such a trial one night in the auditorium if this one turns out to be a success.

Attention of all cadets is called to the matter of absences. If a false report is turned in against you, take immediate action. Report to the military office and state your excuse for being absent or that there was a mistake. The authorities will make proper adjustments in each case.

OOFUS GOOFUS
THE OFFIS BOY

[illegible] name must be selected for this [illegible]mn. The rhymic and poetic quality of "Oofus Goofus" cannot be de[illegible], but the name is not truly representative of the author's intelligence the literary content of the work, fact which will readily be attested by the author's admirers on the [illegible]pus—all three of them.

[illegible]everal suggestions for a moniker [illegible]e been made, some fit to be printed some otherwise, but none seem to [illegible]l the requirements; and we are [illegible]g our readers to lend a hand in naming of this line or hooey. If [illegible] have a name, give it to the office or some member of the staff. The [illegible]y request is that the name be reputable enough for print (minus the [illegible]amation marks!).

[illegible]t has already been suggested that [illegible] column be omitted altogether, and [illegible] other irreverent suggestions will [illegible]tolerated..

The following was found in a weekly paper printed in this state: "The [illegible]y of —— arrived from Tampa, [illegible]re he died Friday night for burial." Just in the nick of time.

In the midst of our contemplation [illegible] the peculiar situations of Texar[illegible]a and Bristol, located in Texas-[illegible]ansas and Virginia-Tennessee, re[illegible]ctively, we are notified of an in[illegible]esting situation in the city of Mich[illegible]indo. It borders three states, and [illegible]uld be a law-breaker's paradise. A [illegible]flaw could skip blithely about in [illegible] three states of Indiana, Michigan [illegible] Illinois without going outside the [illegible]y limits and evade arrest for an in[illegible]finite period.

[illegible]And after writing the above we [illegible]ppened to look in an atlas and find [illegible]t Michillinda is located in Michi[illegible]n, near the shore of Lake Michigan, [illegible] least a hundred miles from Illi[illegible]is and twice that distance from In[illegible]na. It is not a city, but a very small [illegible]age. But it makes a good story [illegible]yway; and it does take its name [illegible]m the three states.

Our nomination for the most contentious man in the world goes to [illegible] fellow we overheard in a clothing [illegible]re last week.

"I've lost a bet," he announced to [illegible] clerk, "and I want a nice soft hat."

The clerk showed him the softest in the store.

"But haven't you something a little [illegible]re tender?" he asked, pleadingly, "[illegible]ve got to eat it."

Dean Brown is a great lover of cats. [illegible]e have it on very good authority [illegible]at oftentimes he gets on all fours [illegible]d impersonates the mad feline that [illegible]s with us at chapel the other morn[illegible].

But in chapel that morning he did [illegible]t seem so attracted to pussy. He [illegible] not pull up his skirts, but he did [illegible]t his feet up on the seat and other[illegible]se act with great feminity, except [illegible]at he did not scream aloud.

The office cat is yawning and I [illegible]ve just smoked my last cigarette. [illegible]is column of bull is not yet full, [illegible]nd—Oh, my! how poetic we are becoming.

The fire in the fireplace grows dim.
Some one across the hall snores, I wish I was him.
For the ninety-sixth time
I can't find words to rhyme,
But I'll have to go on writing
Even tho it is quite griping.
The office cat yowls,
The night wind howls,
Some hound yaps,
The typewriter taps,
And Oofus, the office boy Wishes to goodness he had never started this thing in the first place.

LIBRARY NOTES

Two books added to the shelves during the week have been reviewed in The Blue Stocking this fall: Pearl Buck's "The Good Earth," the story of a Chinese farmer and his struggles; and Charles Morgan's "The Fountain," a novel pivoting on a love affair of a British officer interned in Holland during the World war.

Other books added during the week include: Dubose, "Memoirs of John Leighton Wilson; Gardiner, "History of England from the Accession of James I to the Outbreak of the Civil War, 1603-1642," 10 v.; Moise, "Biography of Isaac Harby, With an Account of the Reformed Society of Israelites of Charleston, S. Stokes Elected Players' Head

Professor of English At University Named President of Town Theatre Group. Graduate of P. C. and Rhodes Scholar.

(From The Carolinian)

J. [illegible] M. Stokes, professor of English at the University, was recently elected president of the Players' club of the Columbia Town theatre at the first meeting of the organization for the year.

Professor Stokes is well known in Columbia for his stage ability. University students remember his work last year in "The Ivory Husband," the first production of the Palmetto Players [illegible] the year. He also appeared last year in "Hedda Gabler" and "The Windsors' Fan," Town theatre productions.

Professor Stokes came to the University two years ago. He graduated from Presbyterian college and from there went to Oxford University, England, where he was a Rhodes scholar. Last summer he returned to England and there did research work.

The Players' club is connected with the Town theatre and all those who have taken part in a production of the theatre are eligible for membership. The group is of a supposedly purely social character but in the past it has had to do some work to supplement the regular work of the theatre. This year, however, it is planned for it to return to its original purpose.

Mr. Stokes graduated from P. C. with the class of 1925. During his four years here he was one of the most popular and influential leaders of the campus. He was editor of the Parnassus in 1925.

Members of the club have been cooperating with the other musical organizations of the city in leading the music for the city-wide revival services. Twelve members are in the choir each night. Yesterday a double quartet made up of H. J. Montgomery, W. J. McCutcheon, J. O. Woods, L. A. McCall, H. S. Odom, M. L. McDonald, [illegible] and G. H. Montgomery, sang two special numbers at Duncan's Creek Presbyterian church, where Dr. McSween was preaching. Dr. Huntley accompanied the boys. A picnic dinner was served on the church grounds after the morning worship, the occasion being their annual homecoming day.

Last night the double quartet accompanied Dr. McSween to Whitmire, where he conducted a union service.

Members of the club will be appearing at various times in the choirs of the city. This will greatly aid the club in its training.

J. O. Woods is president of the club this year, and L. A. McCall is manager.

WALKS ON CAMPUS BEING REPAIRED

nasium to the Administration building. This walk is perhaps the most frequented unpaved one on the campus. The crew has been working on it for the past few days, and reports have it that the new walk will be ready for traffic by next Saturday. A curb has already been built on one side, and in the next few days that on the other side will be finished. Plans call for a cinder and dirt mixture in the space between the two curbs.

Through the kindness of J. Gary Martin, local contractor, who loaned his concrete mixer, the work was speeded up many times.

Other walks to receive similar treatment are: From Spencer hall to the gym and Administration building, from Smyth hall to the Administration building, and probably the "short-cut" from Spencer hall to Calhoun street. These curbed walks will greatly improve the appearance of the grounds, as it will tend to eliminate many of the paths being made across grassy spots, and will straighten out some of the crooked walk-ways now in existence.

ALUMNI NEWS

The Rev. Harry K. Holland, class of 1926, and a graduate of Union Theological seminary, has accepted a call to the pastorate of Plaza Presbyterian church, Charlotte, N. C. He will assume his duties there on November 15.

Next Saturday is home coming. The alumni are being invited by the college to attend the football game between Wofford and P. C. on Johnson field, and to come early enough for dinner. One of the greatest crowds ever to be present at a home coming is expected, and it is hoped that every former P. C. man who can will be here.

Resolution Supported Looking To Change of Name of College. E. T. Wilson Named President For the Ensuing Year.

At 1:45 Saturday, after spending a lightful hour in the refectory at the ecial alumni luncheon, the old grades of Presbyterian college gathered in the auditorium for their annual siness meeting. These meetings are ld each year just preceding the me-coming football game, but never s such an interesting meeting been ld. Outstanding business was administered to in the meeting Saturday. The most interesting resolution ceiving the hearty support of the dy was the motion that a new name chosen for the college. Death Claims S. W. Klutz

The many friends of S. W. Klutz, of the class of '32, were shocked to learn of his sudden and unexpected death on last Tuesday, October 25. "Sambo" was well-known and popular among students while here, although he remained for only two years (1928-30). He was sometimes affectionately dubbed "Grantland Rice" by students. He distinguished himself while here as a journalist, being an especially proficient sports writer. He was a member of The Blue Stocking staff in '28, '29, and '30, also a special correspondent for several newspapers in the South..

Funeral services were conducted Wednesday at his home in Chester.

To Honor Pledges Friday Evening

First Inter-Fraternity Dance of Season To Be Held After Newberry Game This Week-End.

Final arrangements are being completed for the first big social event to be sponsored by the new Pan-Hellenic council. The annual pledge dance is to take place in Copeland hall from ten until two o'clock next Friday night, November 4th. Since the ruling by the South Carolina synod on dancing in the gymnasium has not been voted on by the trustees, all dances will still take place in Copeland hall.

"The Band Supreme," Ted Metzger and has Campus Owls, from Cleveland, Ohio, will furnish the music for the dance. Last week the orchestra made a fine impression at two engagements at Carolina. Wednesday night they played for the first Inter-College Club Cotillion—a procurance of the Carolina-Clemson game. Thursday evening they played for the first German club dance of the year. Both engagements proved to be great successes.

The pledge dance will take place Friday night, after the P. C.-Newberry varsity game, which is to be played in Newberry. Chaperones have not been announced as yet. All arrangements are in charge of the Pan-Hellenic council, under the leadership of J. O. Woods, as president. He is the representative from the Kappa Alpha fraternity. Other members of the council are: C. W. Adams, Pi Kappa Phi, vice-president; John E. Osman, Pi Kappa Alpha, secretary-treasurer; C. B. Elliott, Alpha Lambda Tau; J. F. Davis, Alpha Kappa Pi; and R. W. Rampey, Beta Kappa.

HOSE DISPLAY FINE OFFENSE

Bolick Starts Fireworks With Beautiful 70-Yard Run for Touchdown. Line and Backfield Cooperate To Put Up the Best Performance of 1932 Season. Great Home-Coming Assemblage Sees Game.

Reaching the best form they have shown this season, the Presbyterian Blue Stockings battered the Wofford Terriers for their first win in the state thus far, and with the spectacular run of Harry Bolick as a starter, crossed the goal line of the visitors three times to the delight of a home-coming crowd of 3,000 people. The Blue Hose outplayed their opponents in every division of play, gaining a victory by the score of 19-0 after a clean, hard-fought game.

There were approximately 200 Lander college girls present for the occasion and they added much to the color of the game. For the first half they occupied the Wofford stands, changing over to the P. C. side at the half.

The initial score of the Presbyterians came in the second quarter when Harry Bolick crashed over guard, shaking off four Wofford tacklers, and raced 70 yards from the line of scrimmage for a touchdown. It was a beautiful run, with the line opening a fine hole, and Harry doing remarkable work almost alone to shake off the opposition tacklers.

The Presbyterian line was outcharging the Wofford men, splitting their derense open, and breaking up their offensive drives before they were well started. Reeder, Mills, and Tolbert were especially good on defense.

Opening the second half, the Blue Stocking line held deep in Wofford territory, and Boulknight was forced to punt. Perrin returned the ball to the Wofford 30-yard line. The Blue Hose offensive functioned beautifully, with Perrin dashing off tackle for 10 yards and Bolick adding 11. Perrin passed to Barrett, who crossed the goal line for the remaining eight yards and a second touchdown.

The Terriers at this part of the game made a desperate effort to dig in and prevent another score. They were partially successful, forcing the Blue Stockings to punt out twice when their offensive failed to click. However, in short order, after Perrin had returned a good punt to Wofford's 45-yard line, the Hosemen made another threat count for a score. Perrin, in the course of a few plays, completed two passes for long gains, one to Pinson and another to Copeland, putting the ball on the five-yard line. Parson drew a penalty when he fell to one knee and then attempted to run, but the Presbyterians were not minding little things like five-yard penalties, as was evidenced by Copeland's successful catch on the five-yard marker. Bolick went thundering over the same guard, carrying all in his wake of destruction, for another touchdown.

Wofford was not oddly weak on offense and defense. They had several golden opportunities during the first quarter to score, but each time were unable to put over the final punch. They blocked one of Adams' punts early in the game, but could do nothing in four straight thrusts [illegible] Augusta [illegible]

Revival Services Come To Close

Ten-Day Series, Led By McQuilkin, Terminates Sunday Evening. Large Crowds Attend.

The evangelistic services which have been going on in the Thornwell chapel for the past ten days, came to a close with an impressive session Sunday night. Rev. R. C. McQuilkin preached his final sermon before an audience that thronged the building. Such crowds have been present each evening during the series, and large crowds also heard the morning lectures. All the churches of the city have been uniting their efforts to make these meetings a success, and although the work of the Lord cannot be materially measured, results show that the community has been greatly benefited and uplifted.

Mr. McQuilkin appeared before the Ministerial club at Presbyterian college at their weekly meeting in the college chapel at 1:30 Sunday afternoon, and made an outstanding impression upon all who had the pleasure of hearing him.

At head of the Columbia Bible college, Mr. McQuilkin has received national, and even international note as a Bible teacher. Students of the Bible come from all parts of the world to hear the lectures of this outstanding man. Each week the Sunday School Times, of Philadelphia, contains an explanation by Mr. McQuilkin of the Sunday school lesson.

Along the line of religious meetings, The Blue Stocking would like to announce that Dr. William M. Anderson, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church of Dallas, Texas, is opening a meeting in Spartanburg. Dr. Anderson taught the Bible hour and delivered the inspirational addresses at the Young People's conference here the past summer.

BLUE KEY BIDS FACULTY MEN

Dr. Jones and Coach Johnson Invited To Become Members At Session Held Tuesday. Attendance Rules Laid Down.

At the regular bi-monthly meeting of Blue Key fraternity, held Tuesday night, October 26, at the Mary Musgrove tea room, many items of business were attended to.

First among these was the issuing of bids to two members of the faculty, Dr. F. D. Jones and Coach Walter A. Johnson. These new members will be sworn in during chapel hour in the near future, in the presence of the student body, according to the custom of the fraternity. The addition of these two names to the roll of Blue Key increases the faculty membership to five. The other members from the faculty are Dr. McSween, Dean Brown and Capt. R. E. Wysor. According to a ruling of the fraternity, only one more member of the faculty may be taken into this chapter, as the limit for faculty membership is six.

Blue Key soon will make a survey of all campus organizations, with a view to helping any staggering or inactive body to become active again. The survey will be made by H. H. Ferguson, president of the student body, and B. W. Covington. It will also find out from each organization the qualifications for membership, and at a meeting of the student body these qualifications will be read, so that any member of the student body will know just what he needs to do to make any honorary organization.

It was decided to place a penalty on faculty members as well as students who belong to this organization for absences from the regular meetings. It is known that faculty members cannot always attend, and the rule is made with this fact in mind. However, it was decided that it should be possible for faculty members to attend at least one meeting every two months. In the event they do not attend this [illegible] they are to be automatically

Photographic Work Is Well Advanced

Editor Collis H. Lord reports that he is very highly pleased with the cooperation he is receiving in the photographic work for the 1933 PaCaSaC. All the student body sittings have been completed, and most of the proofs have been returned. The pictures of the football players have been taken, and Mr. Nichols, the photographer, was seen busily taking shots of the game Saturday for the athletic section.

The photographic work on the year's annual has progressed much faster than ever before. Last year it took five months to complete the student body sittings, so the cooperation of the men is an outstanding factor in the speediness of the work. The efforts of Mr. Nichol appears to meet with the approval of all concerned, and he is to be congratulated upon the fine quality of his work which, according to the present outlook, will [illegible] to be the best in the PaCaSaC in many years.

Group pictures will be taken in the near future, and the help of every member of the student body is [illegible]

"REMAINING TO CHAPELS"—ANSWERED

In the last issue of this paper carried an article concerning the P. C. Chapels. I humbly submit this article in defense of the present form of Chapel Worship.

I shall not attempt to show that the present form of Chapel Worship is not worth while. Many students may frankly admit that they attend Chapel for material wealth? We [illegible] material wealth. We [illegible] Holy Word. [illegible] Holy Word is from it is God speaking to man. If the fellows stare at each other (why it would be more [illegible] others mug is a good one), and baffle their feet in awkward boredom—whose fault is it? It is the man's fault who is doing the shuffling. If our men are so sacrilegious and irreverent, speak to them and ask them to respect Sacred Services. This is the only logical solution of the so-called boredom problem. (I do not think such a problem exist.). However, if such is the case and, after having this called to their attention the men who are guilty of such should not keep any individual from entering into the worship. And remember that man's Great Guide-book teaches that we reap what we sow. Therefore these men who are irreverent will reap tares in the final harvest.

Why not consider this question: "Just what is the purpose of the Chapel Worship?" In the early morning, at the beginning of a new day, we draw aside for meditation and prayer, and to offer thanksgiving to our Great Benefactor for life and ask for guidance through the new day. As I see it, this is the purpose for Chapel services, and why shouldn't a message be brought to the student body of any college from the Bible each day?

We only have fifteen minutes for this service each morning, and at least five of this fifteen minutes is taken for announcements. Who, then, has the audacity to say that this brief ten minute period should be taken from the Lord and given over to some historical or scientific discourse. We talk about Columbus, Ticonderoga or J. E. B. Stuart, a short talk on the life and accomplishments of these men will not give a fellow the worshipful attitude demanded; neither will it give him Faith and courage for a new day's work.

Who knows but that the few remarks made in chapel each morning on Biblical standards of conduct and et al—might touch some heart and bring it to the Master. I would not dare profane the names of the great men of history, but these men mean nothing—not even two Mexican coppers—when Christ and His Teachings can be studied and expounded for even ten mintues. The very idea of a secular or historical chapel programme (and it most certainly must be called a program, as it cannot be named worship) is preposterous. Some one might even interpret the idea as sacrilegious.

The Chapel Service is God's Service; and no individual can substitute the secular for the Holy. If we cannot enter into the spirit of worship we should search ourselves for there is something wrong within; it needs a doctor, and the Only One that heals is the Great Physician. And remember that the Lord said: "Know ye that the Lord he is God: it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves: we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture. Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him and bless his name."—Ps. 100:3-4.

"Who therefore can say that our chapel is not worth two Mexican pennies."

—MacLean.

HOGS OR GENTLEMEN?

Do we feed gentlemen or hogs in the dining hall? Ask almost any of the waiters and they will tell you that there are from one to three men at each table who should really be fed in a pig-sty, rather than at a table in a dining hall where gentlemen are supposed to eat.

Look around for yourself. You can see some man—or should I call him a hog? — snatching for the best piece of meat, and hiding it under a napkin before all the men have arrived at his table. You will see one pouring out all the cream for the whole table into his glass, and drinking it. You will see a big scramble for any extra dishes that happen to be on the table, in the event that there are not enough present to fill all the places. You will see, when a waiter brings a dish of [illegible] something special to the table, about ten pairs of hands reaching for it. One [illegible] might not want to let go, and [illegible] in the scramble, half of the choice [illegible] morsels may be spilled on the floor. I ask you again, do gentlemen act like this? Is it not more nearly the conduct of a hungry hog?

This year, the food is better than it has been in about five years, at least. It is apparently even more plentiful the [illegible] than ever. No one on the campus seems to be going hungry. You even hear men say occasionally that they ate too much dinner. The food is most certainly as well prepared as ever. Certainly one piece of meat, or any other dish, is prepared as well as another piece on the same dish. Then why should some of the men act as they do, making themselves conspicuous to everyone at the table, and perhaps in the whole dining hall?

Is it a lack of home training that makes men do these things? I would not like to think so. Most men know how to act like the gentlemen they are supposed to be, as is shown by the fact that when there are visitors in the dining hall, they behave like the gentlemen that the visitors think them.

I am not trying to insinuate that every man who eats in Judd hall is a hog. Certainly not. Most of the men here in school are about what outsiders think us— gentlemen. But these men who do not snatch and grab for everything that comes to the table occasionally have to suffer because of the greediness of the one or two at that table who do not remember the training that their mothers tried so hard to give them. They have to sit back and wait for the second, or even third plate of food before they get a bite to eat. Sometimes they are late getting to a meal. There is absolutely nothing left for them, while you can see lying on the plate of another man enough for both, but which will be only pushed aside.

There can be quite a bit done to correct this condition. The men who are guilty, if they only took time to think things through, would probably be ashamed, and slow down. The men at the tables who get less to eat than they would like could do much to control the hog or hogs at their table. A frown at such conduct will often stop it, for no one likes to be frowned at for doing anything. A laugh will only tend to make him worse, and perhaps to create another hog at the same table.

If this condition, which has grown worse each year, should suddenly stop, wastage would be cut to a minimum, be increased a hundred per cent, food would be more plentiful as a result of the saving, and no one would mind a visitor suddenly stepping in on us. For we would still be known throughout the land as gentle-men.

'ROSH LOSE TO CLEMSON CUBS

igbe Again Pulls 'Strong-Man' Act By Racing 70 Yards for Touchdown From Kick-Off As P. C. Yearlings Are Outscored In Questionable Contest.

The Presbyterian freshmen went wn in glorious defeat before the usts of a savage Tiger and under e eyes of a blind referee and headesman. Outplaying the Clemson bs all during the first half, they led the beginning of the second half, -12. But the Clemson tirade of fists, d the extreme partiality of the adlinesman allowed the Cubs to re one touchdown during the secd half, to win by the score of 19-13. However, the Presbyterians won evything but the game. It was the anest, hardest fighting team the shmen have had, and the manner which they conducted themselves, th all odds against them, deserves e greatest commendation.

Clemson scored in the opening mines by two passes, Hinson to Shore. the first play of the game Hinson ssed 55 yards to the 15-yard line, d then, after hitting the line unccessfully, the same pair completed pass across the goal line.

It was only a little later that Quarrman, for P. C., passed 15 yards Higbe, who ran the remaining 20 rds for a touchdown. In the second arter, this same Higbe received a nt from Clemson on his on 30-yard e and raced 70 yards for touchdown, ith Forehand clipping the only man his way just as he made an attempt tackle the runner. Higbe played a reat game, and was a threat every inute of the contest.

Clemson scored in the closing minces of the half, with Vincent doing e greater part of the ball toting. he second half gave Clemson the ame, but it must be said that the resbyterians were playing football ery minute. At times the powerful rusts of the Clemson bulls were too reat, and the P. C. team was forced yield, but more often it was the oldingand slugging of the Cubs that partial referee and head linesman fused to see. These factors, at least, ccounted for the final score of the lemson yearlings, and denied Higbe e glory of scoring three touchouchdowns.

It was as fine an exhibition of portsmanship and of gentlemanly beavior as any Presbyterian team has ver displayed. Our only regret is that his loss takes away from the Socks

We just can't get this story off our inds. We read it in an economics extbook.

It seems that a dispute arose be- tween two railroads in one of our Western states concerning a certain junction. The dispute was carried to the state legislature; and that body of able and wise men, after much deliberation and wrangling among themselves, incorporated the following masterpiece of the lawmaker's art into the laws of the state: "A train upon approaching said junction from any direction shall come to a complete stop before crossing the junction. (Now comes the catch). If two trains approach the junction at the same time, both shall come to a complete stop and neither shall proceed until the other has passed by."

Rather idiotic, but one should not expect too much of a state legislature —or a textbook in economics.

Wofford defeated High Point 34-0, P. C. defeated the same team 39-0. That means that P. C. is at least five points better than Wofford.

But look at this. P. C. won over Lenoir-Rhyne 9-0, and Wofford beat Lenoir-Rhyne 16-0. According to that the Terriers are seven points better than P. C.

By the time this gets into print the Terrier-Blue Hose battle will be history and we will know exactly how the two teams stack up. But the moral still remains: Never pay any attention to comparative scores.

In 1930, when the Blue Stockings defeated Wake Forest 13-0, a Deacon supporter figured out by comparative scores that the Deacons were one touchdown better than Army, and therefore were world champions since the Army won the World war. This should give P. C. some sort of international football rating.

We certainly sympathize with the "quartet" which holds forth in Spencer almost every afternoon just before supper. Their rendition of the Mills Brothers' theme song brought tears to our eyes. It reminds one so much of the noise made by the office cat when she had hemorrhoids.

I shall never forget the look on that poor cat's face as long as I live.

We shot the cat, but a similar treatment of the songbirds might be called murder.

WITH CLIVE IN INDIA

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the noted artist, Karl Godwin ... inspired by the fierce and brilliant assault by Clive and a handful of followers, outnumbered 20 to 1 by savage hordes of bloodthirsty natives, at the Battle of Plassey—the birth of the British Indian Empire —as described in the famous Henty book, "With Clive in India."

—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes

They are not present in Luckies . . . the mildest cigarette you ever smoked

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

"It's toasted"
That package of mild Luckies

"If a man write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mousetrap than his neighbor, tho he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door."—RALPH WALDO EMERSON.
Does not this explain the world-wide acceptance and approval of Lucky Strike?

President Charles K. Douglas, of Seneca, presided over the meeting, and E. T. Wilson acted as secretary, in the absence of Coach H. L. Eichelberger, who was busy with the team. The vacancy on the board of trustees, caused by the expiration of the term of Rev. M. C. Dendy, was filled by the unanimous re-election of Mr. Dendy for another three-year term.

An interesting report on the standing of P. C. in regard to equipment per student was given. In the South, among Presbyterian men's colleges, the following is interesting: Southwestern university at Memphis, has $800 worth of equipment per student; Presbyterian college stands second with $250 per student; David[illegible] College $1,000; and Hampden-Sidney, $1,500 per student.

dropped from the roll of the fraternity.

A fine was discussed for an attendance drive for the Erskine-P. C. football game, to be played on Johnson field, November 19. Dr. McSween is anxious to have a large attendance at this game, and discussed plans for sending members of Blue Key to the various Piedmont towns and cities throughout the state to sell tickets to the game. However, nothing definite was done. It is hoped that a satisfactory plan can be worked out before the game.

A motion was made to constitute as a part of the qualifications for membership in Blue Key that a man should be a member of the Y. M. C. A. during the college year in which he is elected. However, it was decided that the new system should remain as it is at present, even though lower men may be elected to the fraternity next year.

The time for the election of new members, including rising juniors and seniors, is Tuesday following

G. Bell, of University, To Be Here Thursday for Session of Local Body. Will Advise Men On Selection of Vocation.

J. G. Bell, general secretary of Y. C. A. work at the University of th Carolina, will be in charge of "Y" program Thursday night, No[illegible]ber 8.

On the fifth page of this paper is article in regard to the classes in [illegible]ational guidance which the "Y" is [illegible]ring for its programs during No[illegible]ber. In connection with these pro[illegible]ms, the Y. M. C. A. has succeeded [illegible]getting Mr. Bell to take charge of program Thursday at 7 o'clock, in college auditorium.

This is not a regular Y. M. C. A. [illegible]gram, but is gotten up to help [illegible]ry man on the campus. Mr. Bell is [illegible]ognized as an authority on voca[illegible]nal guidance.

It is not the plan to have Mr. Bell [illegible]ke a speech on the general topic of M. C. A. work. It has been made [illegible]ch more personal. There has been [illegible]t in his hands a list of questions [illegible]ich students have asked about [illegible]osing a life work. He will answer [illegible]se questions. There also will be opportunity for asking questions [illegible]ring the program. Mr. Bell is an [illegible]eresting and instructive speaker. [illegible] is brought here to be of practical [illegible]lp to every man on the campus, and [illegible] behooves the students to take ad[illegible]ntage of the opportunity of hearing [illegible]n.

At the meeting of the Y. M. C. A. last Thursday night a bibliography material in the library on vocation-guidance was given to each person esent. This bibliography includes oks and periodicals. Any one wish[illegible]g to get one of these can do so rough those in charge of this pro[illegible]am.

Students Hear Dr. Anderson

Last Wednesday Dr. McSween, with [illegible]o car loads of students motored [illegible]er to Spartanburg for Dr. William [illegible]. Anderson's evening service. Dr. [illegible]nderson, noted Presbyterian minis[illegible]r from Dallas, Texas, was conducting a series of meetings in the First Presbyterian church of that city which had lasted all week. After the service the delegation met Dr. Anderson and asked him to come to P. C. and hold a group of services. Dr. Anderson stated that this trip was completely filled, but that later in the term he would return to this section and spend some time on the campus.

Dr. Anderson was at P. C. for the senior young people's conference last June, and is widely known and loved by many in this part of the country. He is recognized as one of the greatest speakers in the United States.

While in Spartanburg he held two services a day, and all of the sessions were a great success. His morning services were broadcast from radio station WSPA, and have been enjoyed by P. C. students who have been fortunate enough to hear them.

Members of the Y. M. C. A. cabinet and other interested students went with Dr. McSween. They were: B. E. MacLean, Freeman Parker, Claude Pepper, Norton Dendy, Collis Land, Robert Lyon, L. A. McCall, and Allen Guerard.

Blue Key Sponsors Sale Of Tickets

Leadership Fraternity Behind Intensive Effort for P. C.-Erskine Football Game.

Plans were completed for the sponsoring of the sale of 2,000 tickets to the Erskine-Presbyterian football game on November 18 by the local chapter of Blue Key fraternity this week.

The proposition was offered to the student body in its meeting Wednesday morning and was adopted almost unanimously.

Plans are for every student to secure tickets from the business manager of the college, and sell as many as possible, both in Clinton and in the cities and towns throughout the state. Prizes are offered for the student selling the largest number of tickets in Clinton and for the student selling the largest number outside of Clinton. The prize in each case is five dollars. Many students are hoping to cop one of these prizes.

This game was moved up from Saturday, Nov. 19, to Friday, the 18th, and is the only game to be played in the state on this date. It is hoped that at least 2,000 tickets will be sold in the campaign. All admissions will be one dollar. It was announced that no complimentary tickets will be given to any one, and the customary reductions for high school and other college students will not be granted. This is being done in an attempt to make the athletic budget for the year balance.

As football gate receipts carry the burden of the expenses for all other major sports here, it is extremely necessary that these gate receipts more than take care of the expenses of the football team during the season, and that a surplus remain for the expenses of the other sports. Due to the decrease in attendance at football games throughout the country, all schools have suffered in the last two or three years.

It is hoped that the students, directed by the Blue Key chapter, will be able to more than put over its quota of 2,000 tickets for this game, and that there will be a large crowd in attendance. This will be the last home game of the season.

LANDER GIRLS WITNESS GAME

Come Over for Wofford-Presbyterian Contest. Writers Wonders Why Ball-Carrier Tries To Crash Through the Line When There Is So Much Space On Either End.

(From the Greenwood Index-Journal)

The following article was written by a spectator, who has not witnessed a football game for twenty years and who is not writing from the sport editor's point of view, but is merely giving impressions, supplemented by remarks made by an enthusiastic and well-versed "fan."

It is a tradition with some that if everything works out just right in preparing for an evtnt, whether it be great or small, then it is meant for that to happen; therefore, Lander's trip to Clinton on Saturday afternoon to the home coming game played between Wofford and P. C., was surely meant to be.

We Protest

As members of the freshman class we wish to go on record as being rightfully indignant at the attitude taken by the author of the article about the P. C.-Clemson game of Friday, October 28, which appeared in last week's issue of The Blue Stocking. There can be no question that the attitude taken by the author, whoever he is, is definitely against P. C. tradition and spirit. P. C. men don't alibi, and they don't want others to alibi for them. A game was well-fought and lost to a stronger team. Let it rest there. To sow seeds of ill-feeling and malice by glaring phrases and unrighteous wrath is alien to the spirit of P. C. The reaction of others to this article can scarcely be favorable. They must of a necessity form the opinion that the team is "grousing" over a lost game — and that is distinctly what they are not doing. They can stand defeat; but it hurts to see a man in their own institution fling false accusations in the face of worthy rivals.

Famous Magician To Appear Here

Kingsbury and Company Will Give Entertainment Thursday Evening. Blue Key Sponsors.

The members of the student body, as well as the people of Clinton, are to have the pleasure of seeing a famous magician, sponsored by the local chapter of Blue Key, national leadership fraternity of the college.

Next Thursday evening the Kingsbury company will present at the Florida Street school auditorium what will probably be the most mystifying performance ever seen here.

This company comes with a very high recommendation having appeared on every large chautauqua system in this country and offers an unusual exhibition of Oriental magic and mental telepathy. Mr. Kingsbury will first be seen as Kay Ling Bel, Chinese wonder worker, presenting the mysteries of the royal Chinese court magicians. This characterization is very much out of the ordinary and is an elaborate display of Oriental sorcery.

Kingsbury then proves his versatility as a mystery entertainer by a bewildering exhibition of so-called psychic phenomena. Assisted by Esmeralda Kingsbury, he presents a complete spirit seance on the platform. Surrounded by a group of prominent citizens, he demonstrates the fraudulent methods employed by mediums, and performs these with such cleverness as to mystify even the incredulous. The program is brought to a fitting climax with a marvelous demonstration of mental telepathy, "The Girl With the Radio Mind."

Admission for the entertainment will be: School students 15c, college students 25c, adults 35c.

The company has just finished an engagement at Erskine college which was a huge success. It was sponsored there by "The Merion," college paper. All were greatly pleased with the performance.

McGeachy Speaks Here Thursday

Georgia Pastor To Address Presbyterian Students On Subject of Disarmament.

On Thursday, November 17, the students of Presbyterian college will hear the next speaker of the year's program of outside speakers. Rev. D. P. McGeachy, D.D., noted speaker and lecturer. He will speak on disarmament.

Hon. J. J. McSwain, congressman from the Fourth South Carolina district, spoke to the students several weeks ago on the subject of military preparedness, bringing out the need for a sane policy of national defense.

Dr. McGeachy is an avowed pacifist, and will bring the other side of the question to his hearers. Since the two addresses come so close together, much interest will be aroused as to which is the better of the plans.

Dr. McGeachy is pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Decatur, Ga., and is widely known as an ardent peace worker. He is serving on the boards of several peace organizations throughout the country.

The last of the outside speakers scheduled to come here, A. W. Hamilton, of Charlotte, N. C., speaker on world relations, was at the last minute detained and was unable to appear before the student body. Those who heard him last year hope that he will find it convenient to come here at some later date.

After Dr. McGeachy, the next speaker will be Hon. R. Beverly Herbert, of Columbia, member of the state legislature. In the last race for governor of the state, Mr. Herbert made a splendid showing, and perhaps knows more about the tax situation in South Carolina than any other man. It is on the subject of taxation that he is to address the students at Presbyterian college.

The assembly on Nov. 17 will be at the regular time for special chapels—11:45. The battalion will form on the front walk, as is the custom. Classes will begin at the 8:45 bell.

Fraternities Add Several Members

Within the next week or ten days, several men who have shown more or less talent in literary and journalistic lines will be initiated into fraternities.

At the meeting Tuesday night several men who have recently received bids to Sigma Upsilon, literary fraternity, will be initiated. This fraternity is headed by J. C. McCaskill, who has been prominent in the production of all the publications here for the last three years.

On November 15, seven new men will be inducted into membership of Gamma Sigma, journalistic fraternity,

CELEBRATION HELD FRIDAY

Entertainment Honors Freshman Pledges To Six Fraternities. Many Alumni On Hand and "Good Time Had By All."

The annual Pan-Hellenic pledge dance Friday night was a great success. The affair was held in honor of the 46 freshmen who have pledged the six fraternities on the campus. It was held in Copeland hall, from 10 to 2:30. Ted Metzer and his Campus Owls, from Ohio, furnished music for the occasion. The orchestra recently has been playing in Florida and came up from Jacksonville Friday and arrived only a few hours before the dance. The interpretation of "Goofus" and the skit along with it was one of the most popular numbers of the evening.

The dance was sponsored by the Pan-Hellenic council, which is made up of one man from each fraternity on the campus. All fraternity men, through the council, were behind the dance. The council is a body whose purpose is to enable the fraternities to have some medium through which they can all work together. It is the council that issues orders in regard to pledging and other general matters pertaining to the fraternities as a whole. J. O. Woods is president of the organization.

Copeland hall was appropriately decorated for the occasion in Pan-Hellenic colors.

The hall was crowded with couples. In addition to the young ladies from Clinton, Laurens, and other cities in the immediate vicinity, there were girls from many of the schools nearby. The pleasure of the occasion was greatly heightened by the return of many of the fraternity men who have graduated in recent years. There were also many non-fraternity men present who helped to make the dance a success.

Others present were Professor and Mrs. Grafton, Professor Lothery, and W. L. Jones, librarian. Several ladies from Clinton acted as chaperones.

This dance is the first of several outstanding social events which are sponsored throughout the year by the [illegible] fraternities on the campus. Among other social events of the year are the Pan-Hellenic dances and banquet, the junior-senior celebration, the formal dances held by the several fraternities, and the finals. These events come at different times of the year, thereby keeping alive at all times the social life of the school.

All concerned with the dance Friday night were entirely satisfied with the results, and it was quite evident that the pledges, in whose honor it was [illegible]

EDITORIALS

"GENTLEMEN"

In the last issue of The Blue Stocking there appeared an article entitled "Hogs or Gentlemen." We feel that this article has done a great injustice to the students at P. C. We also feel that the writer of this editorial must have been the "hog" who was not getting enough to eat since he did not sign his name to the article. It appears also that this great piece of work was written by a waiter.

It is true that at supper or breakfast, there is no excuse for a thing of this kind, but if we wait at dinner for the second or third helpings from some of those who wait on us I assure you that it will only be a short time before we will have thirteen demerits for being late for afternoon classes. I would hate to think that the author thought that all of the boys at P. C. were hogs, because if he did it would be only a short time before he would be a the"pen."

When the bell rings for meals and the Grace is asked it is time to eat. If there is nothing left for those who straggle in late, it will certainly teach the ... to be on time at the next meal. I feel sure that the one who wrote this article forgot to realize that two of his meals each day comes before the "Hog" has so called) get into the dining hall.

... I can't see a remedy for this situation, that the waiters be a little more prompt, and wait until they get through serving the student body before they go to their table and stand around to help—their plates. I ask you who are the "Hogs"?

It is with deepest sympathy that I took it upon myself to write this editorial, but I felt that the students at P. C. were of the highest type of gentlemen and that this article was a direct insult to the whole student body. I feel sure that from now on the co-operation of both parties will solve the situation and will also be greatly appreciated. I sincerely hope that the author will entitle his next article, "GENTLEMEN AT P. C. ARE OF THE HIGHEST TYPE."

—One of the "Hogs."

MEDIOCRITY—THE ENEMY OF THE SOUTH

In the October number of "The American Scholar," Phi Beta Kappa publication, there appeared an address which was made by Edwin R. Embree, president of the Rosenwald Fund, before the Tennessee College Association. As Cato of old used to explain in the Roman Senate day after day, "Carthage must be destroyed!", Embree is traveling throughout the Southern states crying, "Mediocrity must be destroyed in the South!" In this article I wish to bring to the students of Presbyterian College the substance of the address:

"Carthage was the enemy of Rome. Mediocrity is the enemy of the South. It is pressing at our doors. Its pall overhangs our progress and threatens our very life. But like the Romans of old, most of us do not realize it. Many of that quaint species, 'professional Southerners,' delight to insist that the South is supreme, always has been, and always will be; that it has no dangers—least of all the dangers of mediocrity, they say, 'and by the definition aristocracy — the realm of the best—cannot be mediocre.'

"The South has a romantic heritage and the possibility of a glorious future. By every objective test that can be applied the South is far below the other sections of the country in those items that make up a civilized state.

"In material wealth every one knows that the South is at a disadvantage. In crime and disease its record is worse than the national average. But worst of all, the same is true of those factors that concern culture and things of the mind—the realm in which we have hoped and pretended that the South was maintaining her unique position.

"For two generations the South has been suffering from a process of natural selection which has drained off many of its ablest and most ambitious men to careers in the North and West. There is no lack of capable men born in the South, but to a shocknig extent the men of ability and ambition emigrate to other parts of the country. Their notable achievements add to the eminence of these sections, but give nothing to the prosperity, distinction, and enrichment of life of the South where they were born. The volume, 'Who's Who' shows a shocking difference between distinguished men born in the South, and the small number who are making their careers there today.

"The South has no lack of numbers of universities. Wise leadership and strategy would concentrate resources and brains now dissipated over a hundred mediocre colleges, would bring in outside wealth, which has always flowed freely to centers of distinction, regardless of sectional lines, and make possible a few institutions of supreme excellence.

"If the South is to regain intellectual leadership, the university must point the way. The best brains of the South and a fair share of able men from other sections must be given an opportunity to study here and to carry on intellectual careers of distinction."

To a College Boy or Something

Hazel Ann Dunbar

I cannot leave you, he tearfully cried,
I'd never forget you, however I tried,
Why is this dull world so cruel to me?
Why I should leave you I never can see,
My nine o'clock classes all come way too soon,
My dear, I could linger with you until noon.
And thrusting from covers a tired young head,
With three deep long sighs, bids farewell to bed.

Recollect that trifles make perfection,
And that perfection is no trifle.

Michael Angelo.

Great minds have purposes, others have wishes. Little minds are tamed and subdued by misfortunes; but great minds rise above them.—Washington Irving.

The courage we desire and prize is not the courage to die decently, but to live manfully.—Carlyle.

Bewilderment

If you know not what course to take
In some entanglement,
When all your toil appears to make
More hopeless your intent,
For Guidance pray.

Should zeal for God exhausted seem
By dark discouragement,
When all more difficult you deem
The task to which you bent,
Turn not away.

And when you find that God has heard
Of your bewilderment,
And given answer through his Word,
And grace sufficient sent,
Praise God each day.

—J. M. Kailin.

Justice is the only worship.
Love is the only priest.
Ignorance is the only slavery.
Happiness is the only only good.
The time to be happy is now.
The place to be happy is here.
The way to be happy is to Make other people happy.

—R. G. Ingersoll.

The nearest approach to happiness
Is a sense of duty done well.
Duty is a stern mistress, but duty
Is a splendid companion.

A man asked to define the essential characteristic of a gentleman — using the term in its widest sense — would presumbaly reply: "The will to put himself in the place of others; the horror of forcing others into positions from which he would himself recoil; the power to do what seems to him to be right, without considering what others may say or think."

—John Galsworthy.

Test Yourself

Are You—

Forgetful enough to forgive an injury?
Lovable enough to find goodness in others?
Proud enough to stand praise without vanity?
Courageous enough to do right, regardless of censure or ridicule?
Truthful enough to make your word absolutely dependable?
Educated enough to appreciate the wonders and beauties of this earth?
Broadminded enough to feel admiration, but never jealousy, for the one who outstrips you in the race?

Have You—

Brains enough to estimate true qualifications instead of surface veneer?
Character enough to admit the fault when you know that you have been cowardly?
Intelligence enough to look for right motives, but not to be prejudiced entirely by actions?
Christ-like enough to "forget those things which are behind," and to make these virtues thine own?

LIBRARY NOTES

Circulation for the month of October averaged 36 per day. This is below the usual average circulation for October. Literature instead of fiction took the lead for the month for the largest circulation in any class. More than 200 books from the 800's were taken from the library, while fiction dropped to second place with a total of 155.

Twenty-seven volumes were added to the library during the week. Most of the new accessions were items to fill in gaps in the collection and of little interest to the casual reader. However, the "History of Architecture" by Kimball and Edgell, published by Harper's, is a good survey of the subject and is profusely illustrated.

One interesting new item in the library is a song written for the George Washington Bicentennial commission by George M. Cohan, entitled "The Father of the Land We Love," commemorating the 200th anniversary of the birth of Washington. It is illustrated by a reproduction of a painting donated by James Montgomery Flagg.

The following books are mong those added: Bogardus, "Fundamentals of Social Psychology; La Fontaine's Fables; Cov, "The Crusades; "Gardiner, "The Thirty Years' War"; Washington Irving, "Life and Voyages of Christopher Columbus," "Spanish Paners," "Adventures of Captain Bonneville," and "Wolfert's Roost"; P. M. Irving's "Life and Letter of Washington Irving"; Creighton, "Age of Elizabeth"; Stubbs, "Early Plantagenets"; and Young, "Analytical Concordance to the Bible."

Other books added during the week include: A volume of collected pamphlets by Thomas Smith Grimke, most of them printed about 1830-33, and here bound in one volume. Gr... a famous South Carolinian ... former of his day. Sermons, ... liam G. Neville, one of the ... presidents of P. C. "The R... World Peace," by Oscar New... gift of the author. INDIANS AND BLUE STOCKINGS PLAY TO NO DECISION FRIDAY

Thrilling Game In Newberry Results In 7-7 Score. Intercepted Pass and 60-Yard Run Brings Reds' Counter. Drive Down the Field Takes Ball Over Goal For Presbyterians.

Newberry college, on Friday afternoon, succeeded in throwing a bomb to the hopes of Presbyterian college for victory, and in a game filled with the most startling breaks, succeeded in holding the Blue Stockings to a 7-7 tie.

In a battle that was alternately lifted in advantage from one to the other, Newberry first scored on a 60-yard run by Ingram after he intercepted a pass, and then in the final quarter Presbyterian drove over the tying score. While the Blue Hose gained effectively in mid-field, the Indian line was next to impregnable near the goal line, and Clary's punting enabled the Newberry men to keep their goal line threatened except for two drives on the part of the Blue Hose.

In the early part of the game, Ingram took a punt on his own 10-yard line and dashed to the Presbyterian 40-yard line before finally being brought down. However, the Blue Hose held for four downs with a loss to Newberry of one yard, and succeeded in running three straight first downs, but were finally stopped.

In the second period Presbyterian was thrown on the defensive, with Smelco getting away on one very threatening run, stopped only by Barrett. Newberry, a little later, passed over the goal line missing a chance to score. Perrin had gotten off a bad punt for 20 yards, giving the ball to the Indians on their 26-yard line. After this pass, as if all would work against the Blue Hose, Bolick fumbled, but again Newberry was forced to yield after four downs.

Opening the third quarter with a spirit that was not to be withstood, the Presbyterians marched down the field almost to the goal line. Perrin opened with a 50-yard return of the kick-off. Bolick gained seven yards through the line, and then Barrett went around left end for 10 more. Perrin, on the next play, passed to Pinson, gaining 20 yards. Again the Blue Stockings drove through for a first down, but within the final five-yard line four thrusts at the center of the line failed to put the ball across. Clary punted out of danger. P. C. again launched an offensive, but Ingram intercepted a pass from Perrin, snatching it almost from Pinson's hands, and dashed 60 yards for a score.

With the score 7-0 against them, the Presbyterians were unable to penetrate the defense set up by Newberry. Not until the fourth quarter were they able to come again within scoring distance. After several exchanges of punts, Presbyterian held, forcing Clary to punt. Reeder broke through the Newberry line and blocked the punt, trying to pick up the ball to run. However, the ball eluded him and Pinson recovered. Perrin broke off tackle for eight yards, and another of six. After two plays had failed to any considerable yardage, Perrin went over guard to the three-yard line, and Clary added another first down. Bolick was given three tries and went over on the last attempt. Copeland's placement was perfect, to tie the score.

With both teams battling hard for the breaks, Perrin returned a punt to the Newberry 35-yard line, and then passed. Smelco, the power in the Indian offense, leaped into the air and intercepted it, ruining the Presbyterian chances to score. On the next play Newberry completed a 30-yard pass, but the game ended before they were able to take advantage of this turn.

To pick one outstanding player in the Presbyterian line, Searcy Elliott played a brilliant game. Ewing played one of the best games at tackle in his entire career, and Reeder made several attempts at blocking punts, his one successful try being responsible for P. C.'s only score.

Newberry presented a strong defense, and were able, with Ingram, to take advantage of one of their many breaks, an intercepted pass for a score. Presbyterian missed one great chance by inches, when the Newberry line proved to be a stone wall. Inspired by their home-coming day, the Indians were giving their very best.

Presbyterian made 10 first downs to Newberry's five, but counting Ingram's touchdown run, and one good run by Smelco, the yardage gained was more nearly equal.

BLUE HOSE PLAY CITADEL FRIDAY

Next To Last Game of Season To Be Staged In Charleston Armistice Day.

The Blue Stockings invade foreign territory for the last time this season Friday afternoon, when they meet The Citadel in Charleston. This game, originally announced for November 12, has been changed to November 11, Armistice day.

Suffering some chagrin from their 7-7 tie with Newberry on last Friday, Presbyterian will attempt to remove all doubt in the minds of football enthusiasts by trimming the Cadets in decisive fashion.

It is hoped that training conditions will be more favorable this week than last, when the boys were allowed only three days in which to get in condition. This is the final road game of the year, the only other game of the season being the Erskine-Presbyterian clash here on the following Friday.

Elliott Refuses Call Of Surgeon's Knife

Searcy Elliott deserves especial mention for his work last week. On Monday and Tuesday it was rumored that he would probably have to undergo an operation and, indeed, to any chance observed, his condition appeared very serious.

But imagine ye ed's chagrin when, on asking if Searcy had been taken to the hospital, he learned that he had been in uniform on Wednesday. And there was no question of his presence in the Newberry game Friday. He was in every play, and played one of the most outstanding games of his career. But one wonders if it was his love for football that made him recuperate so hurriedly last week.

FRESHMEN TRIP NEWBERRY MEN

P. C. Yearlings Chalk Up Victory Over Papooses, 20 To 0. Higbe Again Takes Kick for Touchdown.

Led by the seemingly unstoppable Higbe in the backfield, and Correl, Horn and McClary in the line, the Blue Socks swept to victory over the Papooses of Newberry college by the score of 20 to 0. The game was played on Johnson field at Presbyterian college.

To look at the teams on paper, they were about evenly matched, with the visitors holding a slight edge in weight. The Popooses, at the opening of the game, drove up and down the field but were unable to score on the Presbyterian yearlings, who were still smarting over the sting of a six-point defeat at the hands of the Clemson frosh last week.

Then, after taking the ball over, the P. C. freshmen drove down the field to about the 25-yard line. Here Wilbanks threw a pass to Higbe, who cuaght it in the clear and went for a touchdown, which was called back and put down as incomplete because Mixen had touched the ball before Higbe caught it.

This put an end to the scoring until Higbe broke loose in the second quarter and went across for a touchdown. Wilbanks place-kicked the extra point.

In the middle of the third quarter Higbe again scored on a 15-yard pass from Wilbanks, who again made the extra point by a place-kick.

As the game neared the close, Higbe took a Newberry punt on his 45-yard line and went 55 yards for another score. The try for the extra point was wide.

This last touchdown brought Higbe's total to nine in three games, which is good for any man. It seemed for a while that he wasn't going to pull his usual stunt of running back a punt for a score. But the habit was too strong and he finally broke away. With as nice a piece of running and interference as has been seen on Johnson field in a long time, he went across for a touchdown. The whole team gave Higbe and Denny splendid interference which enabled them to get away for long gains consistently. Good blocking seems to be one of the features of Coach McMillian's freshman team.

Quarterman, regular backfield man, was out of the game with a bad knee which may keep him out for the rest of the season. Wilbanks took over his job of kicking and gave an excellent performance. Once in the first half he stood on his own 45-yard line and kicked one out on the 3-yard line.

Newberry has some excellent freshman performers, though they were unable to cope with the efforts of Higbe & Co.

Score by periods:

Blue Key Behind Sale Of Tickets

The athletic association has announced a plan, sponsored by the Blue Key fraternity, to boost the gate receipts for this year. A drive has been put on to raise $2,000 for the Erskine game here on November 18. Students have been given tickets to sell, and campaigns will be waged in all nearby cities, as well as in Clinton.

A special call is being sent out to all alumni to support the school and athletic association in this effort.

Wilbanks Named Frosh Captain

Rex Wilbanks, better known as Dick, was elected captain of the Presbyterian freshman football team Tuesday afternoon. Wilbanks, who is one of Thornwell's products, plays quarterback on the team and does a good job of it. He is a triple threat man, punting, passing and running equally as well, and rightly deserves the honor given him by his teammates.

WHO'S WHO ON THE P. C. CAMPUS

It is the purpose of this column to bring before the student body, their leaders, and in that way to inspire more men to seek to attain the heights of leadership. Each week, two men are to be reviewed.

ADAMS BARNWELL

CARL W. ADAMS

Carl W. ("George") Adams is another of those boys from Charleston, S. C. He was born there Dec. 31, 1910.

When asked what was his earliest childhood ambition, he replied, "To be an electrical engineer."

One can see from his philosophy of life that he puts life on a very high plane. Here is his idea of what is required to get the real joy in life:

"Complete enjoyment of life is derived from the beautiful and artistic things in life. An appreciation of the beauty is essential. A complete understanding of the great masters of the various arts enables one to grasp mentally the finer things of life. Mere sensual enjoyment is as nothing. It must be coupled with an understanding of the finer intellectual affairs."

Naturally does "George" have a wonderful philosophy, but for his life work he has "hitched his wagon to a star." It is ambition to be a great writer. He says that gigantic intellectual genius holds a great appeal to him.

Like many other Christian men on the campus, Adams feels that the greatest day of his life was when he realized the vital relationship between his Maker and himself and how necessary this companionship is to real, complete happiness.

He thinks the student body at P. C. is a splendid group taken individually and collectively."

During his four years at P. C. he has been: Vice-president of the freshman class; president of the junior class; president of the Block "P" club; vice-president of the Pan-Hellenic council; members of the football, basketball and baseball teams, being baseball captain-elect for '33; corporal, lieutenant, sergeant-major, and major, successively in the R. O. T. C. unit; and member of Blue Key, the leadership fraternity of Presbyterian college.

CHARLES BRYSON BARNWELL

Charles Bryson ("Bud") Barnwell was born in York, South Carolina, on December 16, 1912. He still is a resident of the city of his birth.

His earliest childhood ambition was to be a soldier of fortune. It was his desire to go out into the world and march forth to conquer new worlds. Later his goal changed. It became the uppermost desire of his life to become a success in the business world, a "big business man." He says that this goal has remained and still is the goal for his life.

His philosophy of life, with Thomas Carlyle, is: "It is not to taste things sweet, but to do noble and true things and vindicate himself under God's heavens a God-made man, that the poorest son of Adam dimly longs. Show him the way of doing that, the dullest day-drudge kindles into a hero. They wrong man greatly who say he is to be seduced by ease. Difficulty, abnegation, martyrdom, death, are the allurements that act on the heart of man. Kindle the inner, genial life of him, you have a flame that burns up all lower considerations."

When asked what was the greatest day of his life, he gives the answer that we woud expect "Bud" Barnwell to give, "When Christ came into my life." His ambition shows him the Christian gentleman we know him to be. He says, "My ambition is to live the life of an honest, Christian business man and to aid in the establishing of God's kingdom here on earth by helping the unfortunate ones to know Christ."

He believes that the faculty and student body are the finest in the world and is proud to be associated with them.

"Bud's" life on the campus has been quite varied. He is a member of the Kappa Alpha social fraternity, the Blue Key, and Gamma Sigma. He is captain and adjutant in the R. O. T. C. unit, a member of The Blue Stocking staff, and an associate editor of the Pat-Sac.

We believe "Bud" is the man to achieve his ambition. He has shown by his life on the campus that he is conscientious in his ambition.

OOFUS GOOFUS
THE OFFIS BOY

While listening to the verbal monosyllabities which are always liberated in dormitory bull sessions, I am reminded of the tales which Uncle Ben used to tell us when he was in a boastful mood. The most impressive to me was the story of the fast-growing cucumber vine.

Uncle Ben secured some prize cucumber seed from a neighbor and planted it in the richest part of his farm, the land which the year before had borne the mammoth tomatoes. He was just planting the third hill when he heard a slight cracking noise behind him; and looking around he perceived that the cucumbers in the first hill were just breaking the ground. By the time the fourth hill was planted the vine on the first hill was five feet long and in bloom. On looking up from the planting of the fifth hill, Uncle Ben found the cucumber vine growing toward him and he had to dodge quickly and make for the house in order to escape the angry vegetable. He ran at top speed, but was so closely pursued that he did not have time to open the back door. He dashed wildly around the house three times, still closely followed by the rapidly growing vine. On the third round he made a break for the door, and succeeded in opening it but could not close it before a cucumber the size of a pickle barrel knocked him sprawling and the greedy limbs of the vine entwined him tightly. He reached into his pocket for a knife with which to fight the choking tentacles, but found his pockets filled with cucumber pickles, and the knife so rusted with disuse that it could not be opened.

Uncle Ben always ended the story at this point, and I do not know to this day how he escaped death. That he did emerge from the incident alive is evident because he told the story himself; but when any of the children at his knee were so irreverent as to ask him how he escaped, Uncle Ben always cleared his throat, looked at his watch, and decided that it was time for all good children to be in bed.

After the Wofford game last Saturday a supporter of the team said to Coach Johnson, "The boys kinda clicked today, didn't they, Coach?"

"Yeah, they kinda looked pretty good," said Coach.

At the Thornwell-Clinton game last week Annie Lee Jackson could not understand why the boys fought so much for just one little football. She wanted to know why they did not use two balls, so each team could have one.

In the Frosh-Clemson game, after C.'s second touchdown, a squat, big-nosed Tiger player with an Indian circuit (an avenue of fur right down the middle) glared at Wilbanks, frosh quarter, and said, "Well, I'm a monk—if you score again today."
According to Wilbanks, twenty more touchdowns could not have made the Celemsonite uglier.

"Doctor" Pepper takes the cake for orderliness. He walked into a one-thirty class at exactly two-twenty-five the other day. He was probably delayed in getting his two o'clock nip. He takes them at ten-two-and-four.

Something must be done about these courses labeled "crip" which are not that. Several men carrying twenty hours work, of which four hours are supposed to be "crips," have been noticed staggering under the load.

Bothwell Graham III was first offered the part taken by G. Barron in the mock court martial last week, but he refused, saying that the knew nothing at all about the part, having never seen one of the animals.

Gonzales played it rather well.

At the astronomy night class last week, "Wee" Wyman remarked to Professor Lothery, "If we had a camera we would have some movie stars, couldn't we, professor?"

Is he a punster? I don't know.

During the same class Ben Covington was a disturbing element with his continual wise cracking. The professor was compelled to call him down in severe fashion.

"Covington," he threatened, "if you don't shut up I am going to knock your block off."

"Then I could see lots of constellations, couldn't I?" replied the insufferable Mr. Covington, as he dodged the celestial globe hurled by Mr. Lothery.

As we go to press Dolly Milling's picture is still missing.

The latest name suggested for this space filler is "Campus Scandal." Now, I ask you, what is scandalous about this column?

Another suggested improvement was that the author run his picture at the head of the column. Blushing with conceit, I found a suitable cut, and the editor refused to print it. Can you beat that for meanness?

Editor's Note:—On second thought, we have decided to print the picture. The above is a good likeness.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

The Y. M. C. A. programs for November should be of interest to every man on the campus. Although there are many men in the student body who have decided on their life work, there are more who should find vocational guidance programs of the greatest interest. Such programs are to be conducted by H. H. Ferguson and W. M. Frampton during the coming month at the regular weekly meetings of the Y. M. C. A. It is not the plan to have a cut and dried outline for these programs. They are to be very informal so that they may be of the greatest benefit to the largest number. Not only the regular members of the "Y" but anyone else who wishes to come is most cordially invited to do so. It is suggested that everyone bring a note book. Much credit is due both Frampton and Ferguson for the work they have put on preparing the programs.

Practically everyone who is actively enrolled in the Y. M. C. A. now has a real part in some phase of the work. Those men who are just starting out for the first time are doing the more routine work and those who have had experience are working out the details. The different and interesting programs which the "Y" has had this year speak for these men and their conscientious work.

Dramatic Club To Give Play

Greenwood Organizations Sponsor Appearance Friday. Grafton Leads Activities.

The dramatic club of Presbyterian college, dormant for several years, comes to life this week with a production of Anthony E. Wills' three-act comedy, "Blundering Billy," Friday night, in Greenwood. The club has not yet organized for the year, but plans to do so after performances in Greenwood and in Clinton.

In "Blundering Billy," the organization offers a light play, full of complicatoins that are packed with real humor. The part of Billy Butler, who retains the sympathy of the audience in spite of his multiple misfortunes, is ably filled by Hart Odom, who will be remembered for his performance in "Attorney for the Defense," given last November. Georgia Bee Blakely, in the feminine leading role, together with Frank Guess, Walker Combs, and Annie Lee Jackson, are also repeaters from last year's popular and successful play. Newcomers to the cast are, Annabel Kennedy, of Thornwell; A. M. Tommins, a sophomore, and H. M. Wilson, New York freshman, all of whom show great promise.

The performance in Greenwood this week is sponsored jointly by Green-

Ticket Sale Effort Still Going On Leadership Body Works for Erskine Game. Seeks To Sell Two Thousand Tickets.

The drive to sell two thousand tickets for the Erskine-P. C. game Friday has been going on for a week. The Blue Key fraternity is sponsoring the movement with the hearty cooperation of the student body.

The goal is to sell two thousand tickets, but if one thousand are sold the student body will receive a holiday the day after the Erskine game. Five hundred tickets ought to be sold in the city of Clinton alone. There is a movement on foot, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, to get all the merchants to close their stores next Friday afternoon during the hours of the game, to give all employees an opportunity to see the contest.

The Blue Key fraternity is offering a prize of five dollars to the student who sells the most tickets in Clinton and another five dollar prize to the student selling the most tickets outside of Clinton.

As yet, Mr. Hunter reports that only 150 tickets have been drawn from the business manager's office. If the sale of tickets does not pick up materially in the next few days the student body will not get the promised holiday. Unless the Erskine game is a financial success, part of the athletic program for this year will have to be dropped. This is the last game of the season and it promises to be a good one. The Blue Key hopes that the student body will cooperate with them in order that they might attain their goal.

Johnson, MacLean Join Blue Key Frat

Following the fraternity's custom in initiating new members, Coach W. A. Johnson and B. E. MacLean were initiated into Blue Key at the regular chapel period last Wednesday before the entire student body. The oath was administered by President John McSween, who is a member of the chapter. Dr. F. D. Jones also received a bid and will be initiated at a later date if he so desires.

Blue Key is a national leadership group, which aims to stimulate outstanding activity among college students and faculties.

No man has ever meant as much to an institution, nor worked as hard for a school as Coach Johnson, and the entire student body extends its congratulations to him.

Mr. MacLean entered P. C. from Presbyterian Junior college, and has been a campus-wide favorite. As president of the Y. M. C. A. he has done a great work, and done it well. On the campus publications his work has been outstanding.

Journalistic Frat Meets Tuesday

Gamma Sigma, honorary journalistic fraternity, will hold its regular meeting in Dr. Spencer's classroom Tuesday night at seven o'clock. At this time the men who were recently offered bids to this organization will be initiated. This ceremony was to have taken place two weeks ago, but had to be delayed because of other activities.

The local unit of Gamma Sigma is Alpha chapter, the fraternity having been founded here at P. C. in 1929. Several chapters have been installed in other colleges and universities since that time, and it is hoped that the organization will continue its progress toward fame. B. W. Covington, Jr., is president of the group.

Sigma Upsilon Initiation Not Held

The regular bi-monthly meeting of Sigma Upsilon was not held last Tuesday because of outside conflicts. The new men who recently received bids were to have been initiated at that time, but because of the interruptions it was decided to postpone the meeting until this week.

Sigma Upsilon is a national honorary fraternity which has its main purpore in the literary field. The local chapter, Iris, was founded in 1926, and has been an active part of the campus life since that time. J. C. McCaskill is president of the chapter..

Kingsberg Duo Gives Good Show

Program of Magic, Sponsored By Blue Key, Pleases. Mental Telepathy Is Feature.

The program put on by the Kingsberg company, famous magicians, in the Florida Street school auditorium Thursday evening was greatly enjoyed by all who attended. The appearance of the magicion was sponsored by the Presbyterian college chapter of Blue Key, national leadership fraternity, and a large crowd witnessed the performance.

Mr. Kingsberg was first seen as Kay Ling Bel, Chinese wonder worker. The stage was beautiful and mysterious in its oriental atmosphere. His tricks with cards greatly attracted the audience.

During the second act, Mr. Kingsberg appeared merely as a magician, and lived up to his reputation. The "magic hand" completely bewildered Messrs. Smith, Lynn, Osman, and MacLean, as well as the audience. It was by far the most outstanding act of the evening.

Assisted by Esmoreida Kingsberg, he completed his performance with an exhibition of mental telepathy. Any article presented by the audience was named by the blind-folded lady. When Mr. Kingsberg placed his hand on Johnnie Rhodes' head she instantly replied, "Some sort of a nut."

Dr. D. P. McGeachy Speaks Thursday

Peace Advocate To Address Student Body. R. B. Herbert's Coming Announced.

As was announced in last week's issue of The Blue Stocking, Dr. D. P. McGeachy, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Decatur, Ga., will speak at a special chapel service on Thursday morning, Nov. 17. The assembly will be held at 8:45.

Dr. McGeachy, who is an avowed pacifist, and quite an outstanding figure in peace circles, will bring to the student body a message on peace, without the stress of national defense. Hon. J. J. McSwain, representative in congress from the Fourth South Carolina district, spoke to the students some weeks ago on the need of a sane policy of national defense. Dr. McGeachy is to present the other side of the question.

On a later date, Hon. R. Beverly Herbert, of Columbia, is to speak before the students on the subject of "Taxes." Mr. Herbert was a candidate for governor of South Carolina several years ago, and is now a member of the legislature from Richland county.

McSween Speaks On Armistice Day

Dr. John McSween, Senator E. D. Smith, and Congressman A. H. Gasque were the speakers at the Armistice day celebration in Florence last Friday.

Following the exercizes in Florence, Dr. McSween went to Charleston for the P. C.-Citadel game in the afternoon.

The celebration was sponsored by the Florence American Legion post, and other organizations of the city.

Dr. McSween left Clinton Thursday afternoon, spending the night in Timmonsville, his former home.

BELL SPEAKS AT 'Y' SESSION

Secretary of University Group Addresses Presbyterian College Students On "Vocational Guidance."

R. G. Bell, executive secretary of Y. M. C. A. work at the University of South Carolina, spoke Wednesday night in the college chapel on "Vocational Guidance." The talk was interesting and helpful to the students who heard him.

Mr. Bell mentioned the fact that he had visited P. C. quite a few times and was pleased to have another opportunity to speak to the students of the college.

In looking back over his own life, the speaker recalled the incidents connected with the choosing of his own life's work. After finishing high school, he was given the opportunity of entering business with his father, going into some other work in the city, or attending college. He chose the latter. He went to college for three years and at the end of that time had come no nearer deciding what he wanted as a vocation than at the time of his graduation from high school. In April of his senior year he heard a man describe Y. M. C. A. work in glowing terms. Then and there he decided that this was his calling.

Mr. Bell does not believe this an ideal way to choose one's life work. He says that among the many things which must be taken into consideration before entering any vocation, the first is knowing one's self. A man must look into his own life and size up his mental equipment and also his personality. There are creative minds and technical minds; there are personalities which are very pleasing to the people of the world; and there are personalities which should be kept more in the background.

In the second place, know the job. Find out what must actually be done in an average day's work. Be sure you know how much education is actually needed. Make certain that there is chance for advancement, and finally take in consideration the mental and physical hazards.

In the third place, take into consideration your own attitude toward the job. Is it what you want to do? Will it keep up your interest throughout your life?

There are five different ways in which men look at work. There are many men who look upon work as mere drudgery. Most of us look at it as a means of livelihood. There are few who look upon it as a calling. Still a smaller number look upon it as a means of helping God create. The ideal man looks upon it as worship.

Class Issues Begin On November 28

The editors for the class issues of The Blue Stocking are to be selected in the next few days. Every year, just before the Christmas holidays, each class is given an opportunity to edit one issue of the paper. In this way material for the next year's staff is selected.

The first issue will be the junior issue, Nov. 28, followed by the sophomore on Dec. 5, and the freshman on Dec. 12.

The editors of these issues will be selected from the respective classes at a staff meeting in the near future. Each editor will have the privilege of choosing his own staff.

THE MULE THAT BEAT THE ELEPHANT

The little old jackass for just about two years has been lagging behind and giving the lead to the big circus elephant. There comes a time when a third just completely wears out. It took that elephant a dozen years to break under the load. But when the harness finally gave way — what a breach! He crumbled from the snout to the tip of that little tail.

Both animals started their cross country race last summer from Chicago. The elephant was heavily loaded with prosperity, high tariffs, resubmission—and he kept pricking his ears for what around the corner was good times. That poor ole animal ran in circles from the time he left Chicago until the eighth of November — and never got around that corner! The little donkey stood in the rear, donned with a brown derby, with a smile from ear to ear—and suggested a little beer or some goodly wine would help the big fellow make the bend. And of course he laughed—when the elephant would only sup some polluted water. Well—these many corners during the last twelve years, with the defiled water got the best of the old fellow—the corners made him so drunk he couldn't stand and he water for years had been poisoning his whole system. The fast, west coast and came with the gusts that swept down from the North, and from the South, out of the West and from the East on November 8th. The great, striking limb in the strength of its might, was too much; the mule fellow trembled in every bone, let out one big pitiful yell and yielded up the race.

But what about that poor, undernourished, jockeyless little donkey who for so many years had been rambling in the wilderness of doubt and uncertainty. He found a dude from the city and a cowboy from the Southwest who finally decided to take him in and use the currycomb, feed him some dynamite, fling on a double saddle and ride him also out to Chicago. The little fellow, with his two jockeys, loaded up with provisions for a long, hard journey. There was a little wine, some beer, a balanced budget, some descriptions of a lower tariff, and a great big guidebook entitled: "Frankie's Way Out." Quite a load for such a little beast—why, in fact, the elephant grinned.

The dude yelled, "Let's go!" and the cowboy gave the spur and away they went for the East and Maine. Of course this wasn't the first stage, for the race really began away up north in Maine where Uncle Sam joins His Majesty. Here they made a round-about-face and headed South, the little fellow with his head stretched out and his tail in the air made for his adopted state of Georgia. As he passed through Northern cities his only cry was: "We've got the beer!" and when he hit Dixie he plowed the cotton and made the grain. He paused for a moment with the Crackers, and was gone again, for to see "Californie and Hollywood." Here, as well as on that lap up the Northern Pacific, he had a solution that would cure any ills and bring normal wealth. The final circle came in the lone pine state—here he was given a "curkle bur" and headed for Old Biltmore in the Empire domain. In he came about midnight of the 8th—after crossing hill, dale and plain. He seemed just as fresh and sedate as when he left Chicago away back in July. He raced up Wall street with a terrible speed; hit Broadway and slackened speed—and finally came to a stop at old Biltmore, where Porter Jim caught the bridle and tied him up. The jackass turned to his riders, winked an eye, doffed his hat and said: "Frankie, I've done my best and now it's up to you. Nancy, fix my stable; give me a bail of repeal and wake me on March 4th." Hee, Haw!!!

This little beast outstripped the elephant—by not less, and maybe more, than ten million votes. Some think it strange that such a little fellow could make such a race. Why, that's simple; ask a hard one. It was sheer personality, and the load he carried. And when he stalks forth on March 4th for the final lap down to the Congressional City, it will be the legislative stable for four long years. And as he travels through Elephantine Penn., he is going to wonder what's the feed for these four long years. Shall it be breadlines, insolvent banks, unemployment and cheap cotton, with rotten booze? Frankie, you and Nancy must provide the shelter and feed—what shall it be? Fix us up, give us cheap gas with accessories—but forget the booze.

—MacLean.

LAWS — DO WE KNOW AND HONOR THEM?

Law is a very unliked and disagreeable word to some people, but we must remember that it is the symbol of the success of our nation. Law is the key to every successful life. But with the mention of this little three-lettered word, we say, "What law?" Laws are numerous — our statute books are filled with them, books numbering thousands of pages. We should at least know the laws that apply to the average citizen, and more particularly those that we as students observe.

May we pause for a moment and say that on this campus today lives the most law-abiding student that the writer knows. Oh yes, of course many instances could be pointed out to us where some student has been guilty of committing a wrong or, in other words, breaking a law. Why not say, then, as a whole this student body is law abiding and a well organized group. Home-coming had its temptations, but the majority of our men refused to yield, even though these temptations were strong; and the tempter was persistent. These men "stayed clear" because they knew right from wrong — and had courage enough to stand for the right.

Why not ask ourselves another question? Do we, as young people, today realize that tomorrow the responsibility of our elders will be placed on us? If we do we should acquaint ourselves with the laws of the land—so that our government, which has stood through so many battles, will then be even stronger because we will know how to handle the situations—because we know the law; its past, its present, and the future must be reckoned by the laws of the past. These the little fellow, with his two statute books of the nation, the state and the municipality are for the benefit of human society. The individual must do his part in observing these laws. Individuals make a state, states make a nation, and nations make a world.

The law-givers are representatives of the people — and when a law is broken the crime immediately can be traced to the individual.

Again, let's bring this matter home. Why do the P. C. men honor and respect the college regulations (these are just other names for laws)? The old adage says, "You can look at a fellow, observe his habits—and come to a conclusion as to what type of home he came from." This is all very true —and we hold that in most cases the proverb is true. Then we conclude again, that the majority of our men come from homes where there are law-abiding parents.

The laws of the athletic field are good examples of testing the determination and will of a student. The Blue Stockings are known throughout the South for their clean, honest, and hard-fighting teams. This recalls another priceless proverb: "Train up a child in the way that he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Life is queer, and it is filled with complexity. There is good and evil in every life. These two factors battle within the man. Which shall be victorious? This will determine the character and the position that the man will have in human society. If we disregard the laws that are maintained for us—we shall be punished. If we obey our laws — laws that we have made, laws that we have passed upon—we shall be respected; we shall be honored. We shall be selected for advice and counsel. Certainly it is better to gaze out upon the world as a free man—who would like to talk to his friends (if he had them) from behind bars? The man who succeeds is the law abiding man; how many such fellows do we have on our campus? "Law-breakers are always caught — and when caught, punished."

—J. E. R.

WAR DEBTS

At the next session of Congress, one of the most, if not the most, important questions the Democrats will have to decide, will be the war debts question. Yesterday — Friday — notes were received by the Administration from both England and France regarding the consideration of this problem.

The Democratic Congress is pledged, among other things, to refuse cancellation. We are in agreement with that issue. However, there are certain considerations which make it impossible to demand payment in cash of the debts by the countries of England and France. Both, if it were absolutely essential, as a matter of life or death, could meet the payments, seriously undermining their economic stability. But, to allow them to crawl from under these obligations would not only be a great sacrifice on the part of the United States, but would be uncalled for and unnecessary.

There comes this to our attention, showing that England and France are not as unable to meet their obligations as they would have it appear. Both countries received vast colonial territory from Germany as the result of the World war, and these, it cannot be denied have been valuable. If the suggestion were made openly, that they cede some of these to the United States, France would immediately back track, and England would attempt more diplomatically to avoid it. But it is one way the United States has of getting this debt of bringing the two countries to a position where they must meet their obligations, besides adding greatly to the power of the United States as well as to the wealth of this nation. —J. W. C.

True contentment depends not upon what we have; a tub was large enough for Diogenes, but a world was too little for Alexander. —C. C. Colton.

We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs,
He most lives who thinks most, feels the noblest,
Acts the best.

Keep your mind on the great and splendid thing you would like to do; and you will find yourself seizing upon the opportunities that are required for the fulfillment of your desire.

Blessed are they who have the gift of making friends, for it is one of God's best gifts.

It involves many things, but above all, the power of going out of oneself, and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another.

LUE STOCKINGS SWAMP CADETS IN CHARLESTON esbyterians Rise To Heights In Winning Game They Were Doped To Lose.

olick Proves Hero

arleston Boy Scores Three of Team's Markers As Line Prepares the Way.

Staging the most sensational upset the season, the Presbyterians armed into Charleston, and crushed Citadel Bulldogs under their powful attack, by the score of 27-0. All resources of Citadel were used to ve off the lion-like lashes of the e Stockings. After two quarters d been played without a score, the es that had so far held, gave way, d in roared the Blue wave, inundatg all opposition.

Harry Bolick, crushing halfback, reed to Charleston and set the town its ears with his performance of ring three touchdowns in one quarCopeland, last year's all-state end, me up with the ball after a wild amble for a fumbled punt by Jengs for the other tally.

The entire P. C. team appeared inred from the opening whistle to the t, and held Citadel to only two first ns, while they ran wild for 165 rds and 27 points. Reeder, sophore guard, added another blocked nt to his record, to put himself in spotlight for front position in the te at guard.

The score was the worst ever run against Citadel by the Blue Hose, d in view of performances this year both teams, it came as a terrific ock to thousands, and a delightful rprise to upwards of other thousds who support P. C.

The game went scoreless until the ird quarter when Presbyterian took vantage of Jennings' fumble and peland fell on it over the goal line r the first score. After that it was Presbyterian. With Bolick pounding away off the tackles, after poor tadel kicking, the Bulldogs cracked the fourth period.

Presbyterian's first score came hen Jennings, star Citadel quarterck, touched Sims' punt on the onerd line. It rolled over the goal line d three P. C. players pounced on it. peland came up with the ball and as credited with the touchdown. He ace-kicked the extra point.

Later Quarterman got off a short unt out of bounds on Citadel's 24rd line and from there Bolick led a . C. march to a touchdown early in e final quarter. He went over from e one-yard line. Copeland's placeick was wide.

Shortly after the kick-off Reeder roke through and blocked Quarterman's kick and Ewing of P. C. recovred it on Citadel's 16-yard line. On e first play Bolick broke through ght tackle for a touchdown. Copeand made good the extra try.

Citadel received the kick-off and ried a pass deep in its territory. It as juggled by Faulkner, Cadet halfack, and Copeland grabbed it, runing ten yards to Citadel's 10-yard ark. In two plays Bolick rammed it ver. Copeland kicked the extra point.

Perrin did great work returning punts, averaging 25 yards on each return, and forcing Citadel to be satisfied with 20-yard punts if they went out of bounds rather than 40- or 50-yard punts if they fell into Perrin's grasp.

P. C. gained 163 yards from scrimmage, five on passes, and made seven first downs. Citadel made two first downs in 56 yards from rushing and 16 yards on passes. Larkin Jennings was bottled up most of the game, but made a 33-yard sprint from scrimmage in the third period for the day's longest run.

COPELAND - END

PINSON - END

Above are pictured J. B. Copeland and F. B. Pinson, the best pair of wing guards in the state, bar none. They look like all-state to us.

DRIPPINGS OF THE WEEK-END

The performance of the Presbyterians against the Citadel was so startling, and upset so much dope, that few of the sports writers in the state have recovered sufficiently to say anything about it.

It was a week-end of upsets, to be sure, but with Clemson's defeat, and the sorry performance of Carolina against Furman, so eye-witnesses say, it seems we should have drawn some mention.

However, here is one, vainly endeavoring to live up to a name so gratefully bestowed by would-be friends who seem to break into columns no other way, who cannot overlook this brilliant feat. Indeed, it would be difficult, after swooning half a dozen times when the report came in, and after having perhaps a gross of hemorrhages when a conflicting report came us, to pass this by unmentioned.

We have no sympathy for or interest in those who blame the result on Citadel. Bolick was a ram—more, a raging bull — who could see nothing but red in his home town, and with Pinson and Copeland giving marvelous performances at end, and Elliott doing a great deal of tackling, and with "Puddin" Reeder ripping through the Citadel line one time and making his own impregnable when necessary, and finally breaking up a punt (if you're breathless reading this, think how this scribe must be writing it), Citadel did not have a chance to do anythng of her own. Jennings was bottled up. He was unable to get started on punt returns, while Perrin came back again and again for 20 to 25-yard returns.

Needless to say, Presbyterian was in the best form it has been in this season. Bolick now stands within three points of high scorer in the state, and with one more game, that with Erskine, he should be able to gain the title.

Reeder deserves a place among football honorables. His third blocked punt puts him in a class all by himself on the P. C. squad, and this, together with other sterling qualities as a guard, puts him in line for all-state one of these years.

Not a few on this campus are overjoyed by Auburn's virtual clinching of the Southern conference championship. There seems to be some sentiment on the part of some, but on the part of the majority it is because they thought they would from the first. It is easy to explain then, why Presbyterian has been given so little notice this week-end. Too often this season, which, we must admit, has been erratic, the Blue Hose have risen from a very mediocre performance to upset the dope of the experts, so—well, the least said about these miscalculations, the better off all will be.

But we serve warning to all in the state, that it will be an upset when the Blue Stockings are defeated next season. We plan on great things. We may be flying under other initials than P. C, but the Blue Stockings are out to command attention, and they will do it.

The Furman victory came as a surprise to many in the state, but it should not have been such an upset. Most of the scribes based their judgment on Carolina's best. Too often this season the University's team has shown to advantage only under the most fortunate circumstances, while the Furman eleven has been consistently a hard-fighting, steady team. They have been well trained, and their line knows no superior in the state, to be conservative.

R. O. T. C. FOOTBALL NOW TAKES STAGE

Beginning Monday morning at drill, football teams of the various companies were organized. The annual R. O. T. C. football season is under way.

It is never known before the season opens what kind of a team each company will have. No one dares at this date to predict. It is understood, from the military department, that arrangements for the games will be made immediately following the Erskine game.

Coming down to locals, for the moment, the originators of squiff ball are somewhat disappointed over the fact that the game was not substituted for the annual R. O. T. C. football. It can only be added Captain Wysor is a better judge than the originators of "Squiff." You, of course, have heard of the Squiff brothers, P. and B. Squiff.

Carl Weimer was sympathizing with a Carolina man who got 12 points and lost. Think of the Citadel guy who got 21 points from that school-spirited Presbyterian alumnus. Is there no balm in Gilead? Not in Charleston, at least, I repeat, sir.

All-State Pick Next Week

The sports staff, with assistants, next week will publish its choice for the all-state teams. Two teams will be selected by The Blue Stocking, so as to give better consideration to the many men in the state who have played exceptionally well.

Besides this, the department is to try to get Coach Johnson to pick an all-state, and this will appear in next week's issue. Not all of the games in the state will have been played, but since next issue is probably the last appearance of the sports page for some time, the staff is taking this opportunity to present it.

War Is Inevitable

By John E. Osman

We like to think of our nation as a peaceful and peace-loving republic, A young nation with attendant growing pains, expanding rapidly, both economically and politically, quick to resent apparent encroachments, lacking [illegible] in international relations to [illegible] explain and condone [illegible] people we are irritatingly loud at [illegible] our intentions and aspirations, [illegible] to other peoples. A nation in [illegible] with tremendous and dynamic [illegible] vigor which has had to have an outlet; war has been that outlet. All history teaches us that those nations lacking in vigor or energy have been [illegible] and unproductive.

The Athens of ancient history was a great productive community and at the same time the most war-like known to history. The Renaissance period was even more so perhaps.

We, as a nation, are probably unsurpassed in productive genius and energy, while our past history tends to prove that that element which brings out the best in us also produces war and a love for war. What is that element?

I conceive of war as being the means by which youth hopes to express its individuality. War is the best medium.

The youth of such a nation as China trying to express their individuality would cause a tremendous upheaval. Some day they will do that thing.

As long as we read of the deeds of Alexander, Caesar, Hannibal, Judas Maccabeus, Napoleon, and the chronicles of the heroic in the great panorama of history we shall want war.

Let us think seriously a moment.

Where is the reverence for those heroes of yesterday who fought on the bloody fields of Europe? We have forgotten them, even as we of today will go to war, die and be forgotten. We can't all conquer a world or die at Thermopolae, but we have that glamorous thing, the bloody red dragon of war.

Speaking of love, it is a fact that all our major wars began in the month of April, so that the saying, "In the springtime a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love," might be changed to read, "In the springtime a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of war," and probably, after all, the stars have something to do with those "impulses."

War is inevitable, and as a militarist, I believe in being ready. The causes are an indelible trait of all youth. We will have war; that is as certain as death.

I present to you these evident facts.

Militarism has not been dethroned, can never be dethroned. Nations are arming again. Old hates are reviving. Old fears have come back. That is an inevitable state of being, no peace pacts give a sense of security, there is no trust in men's souls, only a fear and a jealousy that sweep all other sentiments before them.

Youth, to whom war is only known by what it reads in books or sees at the cinema, is not afraid of its grim adventures. The tragedies of war seem unreal, its lure is very real, it is the greatest of all adventures. It is the path to glory.

Remember the words of Wolfe before Quebec, "The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

The world's leaders are playing with fire still smouldering in the passions of that underworld which is the brutality of human nature. Peace is not yet.

The armistice of 1918 is still only an armistice.

Mars, war lord of the world sits laughing on his throne; the puny efforts of unconvinced, jealous statesmen, and cowardly pacifists to end war amuse him.

He knows that youth, with its unquenchable lust for glory, will soon give him a new entertainment, a new drama of war, a stupendous show, down here on this stage we call the world.

I don't know whether it is comedy or tragedy.

It is a certainty that you and all your friends will have a part in this show. Let us all prepare our parts and play them like men.

Even as the Hebrews thrust their babies into the flaming, red hot arms of Molock, so does youth thrust itself into the jaws of hell.

General Order

1. The following credit will be given members of the Basic Couse who, through effort and efficiency, win and retain advanced ratings in the corps:

(a) To those students made corporals five additional points will be added to their semester grade.

(b) To those students made first class privates three additional points will be added to their semester grade.

2. To earn the above credit the student must hold the rating at the close of the semester and must have held the rating for at least one month.

Uniform inspection will be held at the regular hour on Tuesday, Nov. 15. In order to get a high mark on the uniform it is necessary to have a neat uniform and shiny brass. However, I do find that some think the best way is simply just to wink at the inspecting officer; this does not prove to be effective and will not throughout the rest of the school term.

The band and the R. O. T. C. unit presented a very colorful picture Friday morning in the parade, in spite of the fact that the weather had immediate signs of rain throughout the entire length of the program.

The senior class has now changed from court martials to military history in their classroom activites. The study of milatary law and court martials proved interesting not only to the senior class but also to the entire student body. "Shine" Lowry, alias Private John Walker, asked Captain Wysor the other day if he might not play the part of George Washington or Robert E. Lee, since he was experienced in the arts of a hero. For some reason or other (according to "hearsay evidence") it looks as if Lowry will have to employ "Lawyer Neely" to aid him again, because Captain's views could not parallel Shine's.

The juniors are on the march! Every day they can be seen trudging wearily along the dusty roads with sketching boards and cases strung over their shoulders "seeking to make ends meet." The life of a soldier encounters numerous hardships but, according to the juniors, this particular phase seems to outdistance all others. Now is the time for the juniors to sing that comforting little song, "You're in the army now."

A very inspiring and ambitious young freshman was seeking a pivot point the other day so that his squad might better execute the movement.

A call for members of the rifle team will be made next week. All those men wishing to participate will please take notice and be ready to try-out if they so desire.

FRESHMEN LOSE PRACTICE GAME

The freshmen gave a poor performance last Thursday afternoon in allowing Thornwell orphanage to defeat them in a practice game, 7 to 6. In putting over their touchdown, Thornwell completed pass after pass, to completely baffle the Blue Socks.

After scoring seven points in the first half by the pass route, Thornwell gave way before the drives of the Freshmen who, in the second half, marched down the field for a touchdown, but missed the try for the extra point. However, with a one-point lead, Thornwell again began passing and were amazingly successful, until one of them fell into the hands of a freshman. The game ended soon afterwards.

The Presbyterian first year men, who won from Newberry and Erskine frosh, and gave Clemson a scare, looked good only once, on their touchdown drive. This was not as perfect as it might have been, but it must be borne in mind that the Socks were minus Higbe and Quarterman. As it was, Denny was forced to do the marching almost single handed, although Wilbanks played an exceptionally good game.

I will tell you how he done it, I then in December sum uv u can up to Lake Thomas, break the ice, I git rich in yore spare time, yore re rib, spare time or what have

This fisherman wuz pore. He also born of pore but honest parents, had a hooked nose — not that it kes enny difference, but those are facts. He took one fishing hook one earthworm and fished eight rs a day for 10 daze. At the end that time he had caught 50 fishes, he felt perty good over the ones had kaught the last three daze. He n't feel so good over the ones he kaught the first seven daze beise some of them had been out of ter for a week and—well, you know w fish are.

Anyway, he had 15 fishes left to at 2c, but cud not sell them beise it wuz on Friday and the law of ply and demand did not wurk in home town on Fridays. So he fishwith no hook the next 10 days and kaught 100 fishes. As usual, he ed thirty fishes and sold them at per. He got only ½ price because sold this batch on Thursday when law of supply and demand was go full force, and the law of dimining vendibility had set it, since it z the second Thursday in nth. Besides, he had rubbed off the les and almost pinched there heads in catching them barehanded, so y wuz delivered in very bad con ion.

Our fisherman saw this didn't ount to much because the wurk z not geting him nowhere. So he ught 5 hooks and five lines and ten rms. (He was about to begin large le production). This cost him $1.75. fished for ten days with this apratus and hooked 242 fishes. If he d kept his past record he would ve had 250. In other words he had panded his business beyond the int of marginal vendability where no longer pade to expand, so he ade a change.

He hired 10 men at a nickel a day fish for him (and also to fish fer e fishes). Each man kaught five hes a day, which brought 2 c each 15c per man. Then our captain of dustry (formerly fisherman) pocked the difference between 15c and 5c fer his profit, except that the cost of the fishing accoutrements must come out, leaving the captain a profit of 6c per day per man or 60c for one man for ten daze or a salary of $6.00 per week. Out of this he oughta save $8 a monthe, and his amount at 8% for 100 years will equal to, maybe, $754. This will be enough to buy a funeral befitting a captain of industry, unless his heirs get it before the funeral bills are paid.

"Now, I have endeavored to bring to u a practical method uv how to git rich in a century. You are no doubt somewhat bewildered at my reasonin and figurin, but so was I when I furst hurd the story. It is juwst one uv the great economic problems that we men have to figure out for ourselves. Sometimes these problems are hard to understand, but you can see their possibilities.

The banana are a great remarkable fruit. He are constructed in the same architectural style as the honorable sausage. Difference being, skin of sausage are habitually consumed, while it are not advisable to eat rapping of banana.

Perhaps are also intrissing the following differences between the two objects. Banana are held aloft while consuming, sausage are usually left in reclining position. Banana are first green in culler, then gradual turn yellowish. Sausage start out with indefinite culler (resemble terrier cotta) and retain same hue indefinitely. Sausage depend for creation upon human being or stuffing machine, while banana are pristine product of honorable mother nature. Both article resemble the other in that neither have pit or colonel of any kind.

In case of sausage both conclusions are attached to other sausages. Honorable banana, on opposite hand, are joined on one end of the stem, other termination are entirely loose.

FinFally, banana are strictly member of the vagitable kingdom, while affiliation of sausage are often undecided.

THE FALL OF TICONDEROGA

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by F. C. Yohn...inspired by that horror-filled dawn when the bloodthirsty savages fell on Ethan Allan's gallant "Green Mountain Boys" of Fort Ticonderoga fame. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

The banana are a great remarkable fruit. He are constructed in the same architectural style as the honorable sausage. Difference being, skin of sausage are habitually consumed, while it are not advisable to eat rapping of banana.

Perhaps are also intrissing the following differences between the two objects. Banana are held aloft while consuming, sausage are usually left in reclining position. Banana are first green in culler, then gradual turn yellowish. Sausage start out with indefinite culler (resemble terrier cotta) and retain same hue indefinitely. Sausage depend for creation upon human being or stuffing machine, while banana are pristine product of honorable mother nature. Both article resemble the other in that neither have pit or colonel of any kind.

In case of sausage both conclusions are attached to other sausages. Honorable banana, on opposite hand, are joined on one end of the stem, other termination are entirely loose.

FinFally, banana are strictly member of the vagitable kingdom, while affiliation of sausage are often undecided.

Recompense

Who never wept knows laughter but a jest,
Who never failed, no victory has sought,
Who never suffered never lived his best,
Who never doubted never really thought;
Who never feared real courage has not shown,
Who never faltered lacks a real intent,
Whose soul was never troubled has not known
The sweetness and the peace of real content.

The men who try to do something and fail
Are infinitely better than those who try to Do nothing and succeed.

Every day takes us somewhere either forward or backward, either up or down.

One evil day may poison a lifetime. One day of definite, determined decision can be the beginning of a new and noble career.

Life is a grindstone, and whether it grinds a man down or polishes him up depends on stuff that he is made of.

THE FALL OF TICONDEROGA

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by F. C. Yohn...inspired by that horror-filled dawn when the bloodthirsty savages fell on Ethan Allan's gallant "Green Mountain Boys" of Fort Ticonderoga fame. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

Haven't You Heard?

The first act of the Order of the Red Dragons will be to tar and feather "Scoop" Combs.

Pluto Ross, Presbyterian sports scribe for The Greenville News, attended a football practice last Wednesday afternoon. Pluto's prophecies have proved amazingly accurate so far.

Henceforth and forever more Benjamin Wilson Covington, Jr., is to be know as the "Honorable Cov." This is a mandate from the Democratic national headquarters, coming as a reward for his untiring efforts on behalf of the party nominee. Cov and Franklin Delano certainly came through with a bang.

Nell Crymes has a tea party for his sophomore friends every Saturday evening in his apartment in Spencer hall. All sophomores are cordially invited to be present. A special invitation is extended to "Puddin" Reeder.

A telegram was recently brought to the O. D.'s office for "Swede" Johnson. After looking through the file and finding no one that could possibly be of that nationality, the O. D. asked Coach Johnson if he had ever gotten telegrams like that, and the head coach fairly beamed. "Sure," he said. "Greta call me that in high school, never called me anything else for years." The moral of this story is that all people that come from Milwaukee don't talk like Charlie Goins.

We wish to nominate Freeman Parker for the Jacobs trophy this year. His blocking is superb. As a tackle, he takes out his own end almost every other play—just to fool the opposition, of course, and keep them guessing.

Today's crossword puzzle contains a three-letter word describing the 90-yard dasher who puts bread crumbs in his milk to distinguish it from Iron-head's. The answer is "Pug."

Speaking of Blessed Events (that is, we are reminded by Lee Tracy that such things don't just happen), "Scoop" Combs is expecting to give birth to an idea some time in the near future. He has been threatening us with ugly rumors to that effect for some time.

And while we are dishing out dirt in the new Tracy manner, we are reminded that Puddin Reeder almost had a calf when someone stepped on his pet corn in football practice. And, my dear, did you notice Puddin's new football equipment? It's all the rage now. With his new shin guards Puddin looks like a big league baseball catcher.

We hear that Jesse Tolbert took his nickname, "Iron-head," so seriously that he is wearing a suit of genuine King Arthur armor under his football uniform, just to match his name.

It is rumored that Dr. Jones will soon be succeeded as professor of philosophy by the versatile Milo Adams. Mr. Adams came into prominence last week when a few morsels of wisdom that fell from his muttering lips were translated into English (from the original Charlestonian) by an interviewer who gave those favored few who read The Blue Stocking an intimate sketch of Mr. Adams' life. Mr. Adams, aside from his moments of deep thought, takes time to participate on the Varsity Dance team.

The midnight ride of Paul Revere doesn't compare with the one taken Monday night by Dynamic Lindsay and Puddin Reeder. But Paul's horse wouldn't break down between here and Goldville.

Did you notice that Chip Grafton announced that the tryouts for the play would be held in the LARGE rest room of the gym, with Mrs. Brown selecting the cast? Hart Odom was selected as the big shot.

'Tis also rumored that Mrs. Brown is carefully raising a small Euphorbia Sempervieus that was given to her by the Dean.

In closing, we remind you that "Scoop" Combs is a very, very jealous man.

And also that N. G. (Gabby) Barron got to play in the Citadel game. That should add another string to his service letter this year.

wood high school and the athletic association of Lander college. It will be the first out-of-town engagement for the local actors since a performance at Converse college in the fall of 1929. If all goes well and further engagements in Greenwood seem probable from time to time, the financial problem of the dramatic club, long a troublesome one, will virtually be solved. The play is to be given in the Tuesday, Nov. 22, the admission fifteen cents for college students.

There has been some agitation among students and faculty members for a faculty play, but nothing definite has emerged from the discussion. Such a play might arouse interest unparalleled proportions in the college and in surrounding communities. At any rate, a faculty play, indicating faculty interest in dramatics at Clinton, would encourage the club and be of immeasurable assistance.

Professor Grafton, who is director of the play, has indicated that the chief difficulty in the past has been the shortage of funds. If revenue from "Hardering Billy" is sufficient to warrant the production of higher-priced royalty plays, the student body and the people of Clinton may expect a finished and varied program during the winter and spring.

PEACE IS THEME OF M'GEACHY

Georgia Minister Addresses Student Body. Preparedness Encourages War, He Says.

Dr. D. P. McGeachy, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Decatur, Ga., spoke at a special chapel service on Thursday, Nov. 17.

The speaker, who is called by some a pacifist, made an address on peace some weeks ago Hon. John J. Mewain, representative of the Fourth South Carolina district, spoke on the need of a strong policy of national defense. Dr. McGeachy spoke on the other side of the question.

In his preliminary remarks Dr. McGeachy said, "As I know many of you will not agree with me on some things I am going to say, I will make one statement which I know you all will like. That statement is: I think P. C. is a great school, and it also has a great president." At this he was applauded vociferously by his audience.

Beginning his speech, he said he wished it made plain that, although he is against war, he is not a pacifist in the strict sense. He said that he disagreed mainly with the doctrine of preparedness as advanced by some statesmen.

According to Dr. McGeachy, preparedness only encourages war. He pointed out Germany as a good example of the fallacy of the position taken by some that preparedness prevents war. Germany was the best prepared nation in the world; yet she was defeated in the Great War. If we build up a large army and navy it will only encourage us to wage war when opportunity arrives. When a country builds up a great war machine it invariably gives in to the urge to try it out and, sooner or later, that nation will be given a favorable opportunity. If we have another war it will mean ruin to the youth of our country.

Not only does preparedness encourage war; it is costly to the people. Great Britain spends annually 68 per cent of her total budget in paying for past wars and preparing for the next one. Already the United States is burdened with debt on account of the last war. If we make any substantial

Plans Go Forward On Blue Key Meet

Plans for the state-wide Blue Key convention which is to be held here beginning December 1, are rapidly taking shape. As was announced in The Blue Stocking several weeks ago, the convention is to be made up of delegations from the Clemson, Wofford and Carolina chapters of the fraternity.

Preparation is also being made for a banquet during the convention, at which time it was hoped that Governor Ibra C. Blackwood and General Charles P. Summerall, president of The Citadel, would makes addresses. Due to a recent operation, General Summerall will not be able to attend. It is still hoped that Governor Blackwood may find it convenient to be present.

The first business session will be held Friday morning, and the proceedings will continue until Saturday noon, at which time adjournment will be in order, after deciding upon the time and place of the next meeting.

F. B. Pinson, president of the local chapter, Ben W. Covington, Jr., and John E. Osman are making plans for the entertainment of the guests.

Staff Chooses Class Editors

Every year each class edits one issue of The Blue Stocking, with a staff taken entirely from that class. The purpose of these special editions is to select capable men for future staffs. At a meeting of The Blue Stocking staff on Monday morning the different editors were elected. They are: T. H. Wingate, junior; L. A. McCall, sophomore; C. R. Johnson, freshman.

Wingate comes to P. C. from Charlotte, N. C. During his three years on the campus he has made many friends, and gained prominence in various activities. Wingate possesses a marked literary talent, and it is his original mind that creates for us each week "Odin Godis, the Offis Boy." He is a member of Gamma Sigma journalistic fraternity, Sigma Upsilon literary fraternity, The Collegian and The Blue Stocking staffs.

McCall, who hails from Florence, S. C., has proved his journalistic ability through his outstanding work for The Blue Stocknig. He rose in one year to assistant editor. He has been editing the issues of The Blue Stocking this year during the absence of Editor Covington on the football trips, and has made a good job of it. He is a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha, national social fraternity; Gamma Sigma pledge, journalistic fraternity; The Collegian staff, Pan-Sat staff, and is manager of the glee club this year.

Johnson is from Columbus, Ga., and

A MESSAGE ..from.. THE PRESIDENT

One of the marvels of the Divine [illegible] is that no two living things are exactly alike. Each living thing has a personality or individuality, all its own.

Presbyterian College possesses a personality which [illegible] with pride. It is the daughter of the [illegible] Church. It is a spirit and character and personality about "P. C." which is not only distinctive but distinguished.

A College is not merely brick and stone and timber but these items are important as one of the contributing factors in the pride with which the Alumni and students say "I am the son of Alma Mater."

Presbyterian College is one of the best equipped small colleges in the South, having an investment per student in plant and material equipment of $2,500.00. In this we take pardonable pride, especially as included in the above is the most complete Gymnasium and Swimming Pool in the country and the most comfortable and commodious Dormitories to be found on any campus anywhere.

"P. C." is self-limited in its student body to 500 selected men. This insures every man a chance for self-expression and individual development and a "family spirit" which cannot be excelled because everybody on the campus is a personal friend of everybody else.

Choosing a college is one of the most important and vital decisions a young man ever made and should challenge the most searching investigation on the part of parents and prospective students. Presbyterian College welcomes this and is willing to put its student body, faculty and [illegible] for purposes of comparison in the type of personality of the institution and the product of the machinery of college life on its campus.

Librarian Joins Benedict Ranks

The Blue Stocking staff announces with great regret the awful tragedy which befell the Presbyterian college librarian last Thursday evening while at the Florida Street school, and extend to him our heart-felt sympathy. We also extend to him our best wishes for a bon voyage on the sea of married life.

Before a full audience, Willard L. Lowe was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to "Miss" Ruth Blake. The affair was most beautiful and impressive, and brought tears to many of the spectators time and time again. The tragic fall of the groom when he climbed into a chair to kiss the bride possession was the only occurrence to mar the solemn occasion.

Maum John H. Harris, who was married with honors as he gave the little girl to the waiting hands of the groom. But Maum John's hands were kept busy with the needs of the three children he was nursing.

Madam L. A. McCall's solo, "Silver Threads Among the Gold," made more beautiful by the striking appearance of the Madam, was a riot of laughter.

Needless to say, folks, all this took place in the "Womanless Wedding" Thursday evening.

Herbert Not To Come Tomorrow

Due to unforseen circumstances arising, Hon. R. Beverly Herbert, of Columbia, will not be able to address the student body tomorrow morning.

As was announced in The Blue Stocking for several weeks, Mr. Herbert was to speak at a special chapel service on the subject of "Taxes." He is considered an authority on taxation in South Carolina..

WADE TALKS AT STUDENT MEET

Clinton Lawyer Tells Y. M. C. A. Gathering About Choice of Profession As Life Work.

In the second program on vocational guidance at "Y" meetings R. W. Wade, Clinton attorney, spoke on law as a profession.

W. M. Frampton, in introducing the speaker, stated that the talks on vocational guidance were intended to show how character, capacity, and capital must be considered in choosing one's life work.

Mr. Wade prefaced his remarks by pointing out how important a factor time is, in addition to the three "C's," character, capacity and capital. In general, the one who succeeds anywhere is the one who uses every minute to best advantage.

He defined law as the accumulated experience of the human race applied to present conditions. It is not abstract justice, but is a set of rulings which have been found to work to the best advantage in a majority of instances.

Law is not an easy profession, nor a highly paid one, Mr. Wade said. Most lawyers earn not over $200 a year the first three years and the average man in the field of law makes no more than the average doctor, teacher, merchant, or engineer. Financial problems and the strain are so acute that fifty per cent of the graduates of law school are out of the game in ten years.

Don't expect it to be a crip course, either, admonished Mr. Wade. To succeed, one must be a good mixer and have an infinite capacity for hard, detailed work.

The road is not easy, continued Mr. Wade, but it is filled with compensation—interesting cross-sections of human nature, amusing situations, endless variety, helping those who need it, all these make it intensely fascinating, worth all the hours of hard work it takes.

Don't be deterred by the prospects of hard work, said Mr. Wade in conclusion, or the probability of scanty income, or the likelihood of failure. If you feel the urge, go ahead.

State Press Body To Meet Dec. 14

Representatives of The Blue Stocking and The Collegian staffs are planning to attend the South Carolina College Press association meeting which will convene December 14 at Furman university and Greenville Womans college, Greenville. The sessions will last for two days.

Last year the association held its meeting in Columbia, being the guest of the University and Columbia college. Definite plans for the two-day program, contest entries, and judges will not be decided until next week, it has been announced by authorities at Furman.

In the program for last year, which lasted for two days under the presidency of W. I. Lathan of Carolina, were included round table discussions, lectures, a tea and a banquet. Representatives from all college newspapers and magazines of the state were in attendance. The Carolina newspaper and magazine both won first place last year.

The delegates from the P. C. publications have not yet been selected, but the editors of both The Blue Stocking and The Collegian are expected to attend.

COLLEGE LIFE

There comes a time in every man's life when he must "break away" from school mates, shoulder responsibility and face the world. It makes a fellow sad to think that his college days are near an end. Just for a moment let's contemplate—think back for four short years, and see just what these years have meant to us. We came as freshmen, some of us from the city with experience; others green from the country (such as the writer). This heterogenous group of young men come together on the college campus—there is something that they have in common, they are all new, the change is a new experience. For some moments they are puzzled as to which way to turn; this, however, lasts only for a moment—for 'ere long some upperclassman has him in charge. The freshman is showed around, he is made acquainted with the place. The older men help in the new adjustments, and in a day or two the fellow is made to feel at home. Now he has had his first real experience of college life. He feels that he is going to like the place; and generally there is a "frat reception"—where all new men meet the faculty, and the other members of the student body—from this time on for four years; there is never a moment that college life don't enjoyed to the fullest.

I certainly remember my first impression, and the introduction into college life. I was only another green man from the country, seeking advanced education; and as I look back over four years I can really appreciate every moment of the glorious days, and yet just can't appreciate the friendships, the kind that are lasting, until you look out into the future and realize that in just a few months Alma Mater will bid you farewell.

Those enchanted varsity football games—can't remember the team that we played for the state championship—but I remember the ... that we played for—the state championship—but I remember the ... that we played for—the state championship—but I remember the ... that we played for—increase in our military budget the tax burden will be unbearable.

As to his stand on the question of compulsory military training in colleges, Dr. McGeachy does not believe that students in a Christian college should be forced to take military training. He cited the statement of Robert E. Lee, the famous Confederate commander. General Lee was once asked why he did not institute military training at the college, now Washington and Lee university, of which he was president shortly after the Civil war. The great man answered, "I do not believe military training is best in preparing a young man for citizenship."

Dr. McGeachy said that the much-mentioned training in obedience which military training affords is really blind obedience. The officers give orders and the men have no choice but to obey. They get no chance to learn how to think for themselves. Consequently, instead of making an individual out of a man, it really makes him loose his individuality.

Besides, forcing students in our Christian schools to take the military courses tends to make war seem glorious to them. They see the pleasant side of it and not the horrors of it. Marching to the music of the band, and with colors flying, war seems a fine, stirring thing. But, when they get into the mud, disease, and filth of the trenches, they find out too late that they were wrong.

In closing his speech, Dr. McGeachy vividly portrayed war in all its horror, and said in fervently hoped our country would never again become involved in an armed conflict. He characterized war as a "big and expensive way of settling disputes between countries," and said, "Only when nations are completely disarmed will we have real peace."

Gamma Sigma To Initiate New Men

At the regular meeting of Gamma Sigma on Tuesday night, Nov. 22, seven new men will be initiated into membership. These men are: J. E. Osman, C. B. Barnwell, B. E. MacLean, seniors; T. L. Shinnick and T. H. Wingate, juniors, and L. A. McCall, sophomore.

These men are requested to be in Dr. Spencer's class room immediately after supper Tuesday night, according to Ben W. Covington, president of the organization, so that the initiations may be completed in as short a time as possible.

Gamma Sigma was organized on the campus as a journalistic fraternity, and has now spread to several other colleges in the Southeast. Its aim is to promote the production of high class newspaper material in the student publications. It is rated high among the honorary fraternities of the campus, and is a goal for any new man to work for.

Chesterfields are Milder—

Chesterfields Taste Better

As smokers become more experienced, they demand milder cigarettes. Chesterfields are milder. Their mildness is just as much a feature as the beauty of their package.

The tobaccos are mild to begin with. Patient ageing and curing make them milder still. And Chesterfields contain just the right amount of Turkish—not too much—carefully blended and cross-blended with ripe, sweet Domestic tobaccos.

Chesterfields are milder. They taste better. That's why "They Satisfy."

PROPOSED CHANGE OF COLLEGE NAME DRAWS MUCH COMMENT

Resolution Adopted At Alumni Meeting Brings Forth Comment From Clinton Members of Association. Majority Favors Change If Suitable Name Can Be Found.

Concerning the resolutions passed at the annual meeting of the Presbyterian College Alumni association, October 29, relative to changing the name of the college, The Blue Stocking conducted a survey among the graduates and friends of the college in the city of Clinton to ascertain the general opinion held on this question. A majority of the men interviewed, which included these alumni now connected with the college and a few other prominent ex-students, were in favor of a change. One man did not feel that the name should be changed because of the traditions and memories which have grown up around the present name and the initials "P. C." All seniors interviewed seemed to think that a change in name would be desirable and of benefit to the college. At the fall meeting of the alumni association a resolution was passed favoring a move that the name, "Presbyterian College," be changed to another more suitable name; and a committee was appointed to consider the matter and make suggestions for a change. The board of trustees has gone on record as favoring a change, and will consider the matter when in at its regular meeting in February.

The problem now confronting those who favor the change is name is to find an acceptable name to replace the present one. The opinion seems to be that a name should be selected which would allow the retention of the present initials, "P. C., which have grown to become more of a symbol of the institution than the longer name. Names that have been suggested are "Plumer College," "Poinsett College" "Palmetto College." Plumer is the middle name of Dr. William Plumer Jacobs, who founded the college; Poinsett is a name famous in South Carolina history; and the Palmetto is symbolic of the state of South Carolina.

The opinion in the student body is divided.One half is in favor of the Students To Attend I. R. C. Convention

Osman and Graham To Be Accompanied By W. L. Jones To Winthrop Meeting.

At a recent meeting of the local chapter of the International Relations club it was decided to send J. E. Osman and B. Graham to the joint meeting of all the Southern chapters of I. R. C., to be held at Winthrop college on December 3. W. L. Jones, an alumnus member of the organization, will accompany the boys.

The meeting to be held at Winthrop will be conducted solely by the students. Although several professors may be present, they will take no active part in the meeting. At the meeting practically all the I. R. C. chapters in the South will be represented.

The subjects that will be discussed are, "Germany's Right To Equalization of Arms" and "The Lytton Report On the Manchurian Situation." The meeting will be divided into three parts. One session will come in the morning, another in the afternoon, and at six o'clock a banquet will be given by the Winthrop organization.

The district convention of the I. R. C. was held last year in February at Rollins college, Florida. Representatives from Presbyterian college at the convention were: R. H. Gillespie, D. M. McNaull, G. Barron, and J. N. Dendy. Dean M. W. Brown accompanied the delegation as faculty adviser.

The next meeting of the local club will be held Friday night, with Osman and Graham leading the program. The subjects under consideration will be the same as those to be used at the convention at Winthrop.

Football Players Given Holidays

Those football men who met at least 75 per cent of the practices this fall enjoyed holidays Friday and Saturday after the Thanksgiving holiday. These holidays have been granted each fall for the past several years to members of the varsity squad who attend practice threefourths of the time.

NEW HEAD OF ALUMNI BODY SEEKS INTEREST OF MEMBERS

Fellow Alumnus:

We want to revive the interest of those who call P. C. Alma Mater, when we were there, we called the best of colleges. And we were it. Today it is bigger and better, have more reason to be proud of than when we were students. But rest on the part of many of us ing. Why is this? Lack of information is back of it, we believe.

For this reason we are sending this y of The Blue Stocking, and we urging that you subscribe to it week. Although the subscription e is $1.50, the staff has kindly sented to cooperate with the association and send The Blue Stocking members at a reduction. Send your ck for $2.00 to H. L. Eichelberger, retary and treasurer of the association, today. $1.00 will pay your association dues, and $1.00 will pay a ar's subscription to The Blue Stock.

The following action was taken by association at its recent meeting:

1. Alumni year dues and subscription to The Blue Stocking will run from Homecoming day to Homecoming day.

2. The new president was authorized to appoint an Alumni Committee consisting of two men, with the president and secretary-treasurer of the association as ex-officio members.

3. Alumni are urged to organize in city, county or sectional chapters. The president of the association will furnish you with names and addresses of alumni in your section upon request.

4. The association endorsed the suggestion made by President McSween that the college be given a real "name." He reported that there is a movement on foot in the student body to petition the trustees to this effect.

Say, fellows, let's get together. Only through organized effort can we do the most for our school. Let "Ike" beat them on! Come on! Let's go!!

Yours for backing P. C.

E. T. (Gene) WILSON,
President Alumni Ass'n.

Message To the Alumni

More and more it is impressed upon us in our service for Presbyterian College that the future of the institution lies largely in the hands of the Alumni.

The College can render the largest possible service only when there is select material to work with. The loyalty of Alumni in "selling the College" brings this material. Another thing that goes to make the College is the loyalty of its constituency and the loyalty of the Alumni has a very direct bearing on the loyalty of the constituency.

The meeting of the Alumni Association this year was largely attended by a fine group of men. It is our sincere hope that the plan projected there for the organization of Alumni Associations in the various sections where this group is represented may be carried through successful end.

The Alumni are the best advertisement for an institution. May we express the sincere hope that every Alumnus of Presbyterian College will keep the College in his heart always.

Sincerely yours,
JOHN M. SWEEN,
President.

Rifle Men Begin Season's Practice

Ten Places On Team Yet To Be Filled. Many Matches Already Have Been Arranged.

Practice for this year's rifle team began last Monday at drill period. Candidates for the team who did not make letters in this sport last year will fire an elimination round to select the ten men who will fill the vacancies made last spring by graduation. Those men who made letters last year will not be required to fire in the elimination match.

According to Sergeant Young, about 60 matches have already been scheduled for this season. Other matches are yet to be heard from.

Actual firing of matches will begin immediately after the Christmas holidays. The new members of the team will be selected before the holidays begin, so that no delay will be experienced in starting the firing of the matches.

Several shoulder-to-shoulder matches are planned for the coming season. Matches will be arranged with Citadel and Clemson, who were met last winter; and it is rumored that a triangular meet between P. C., Wofford, and Davidson will be held in Charlotte some time in the spring. This report has not been corroborated by the military authorities, however.

The number trying for places on the team is the largest that has reported for practice in some years. Beside the numerous marksmen in the sophomore class, there are several candidates from the junior and senior classes. Ten men will be selected to make out a 15-man team. These 15 men will fire all matches, and the ten high scores will be counted in each match. The ten high scorers for the entire season will be awarded block "P" letters and marksmanship medals.

SUPERLATIVE CONTEST CREATES INTEREST AMONG STUDENTS

Seniors Almost Make Clean Sweep of Places, Winning 21 Out of 24. Wysor Is Again Selected As Most Popular Professor. Miss Blakely Is Most Popular Co-ed.

In the superlative contest held last week members of the fourth year class walked away with 21 of the 24 "mosts." Juniors annexed three of the places, including the title "most popular coed," which was won by Miss Georgia B. Blakely by a large majority. The other titles going to juniors were, "best journalist" and "wittiest." Captain R. E. Wysor was again elected the "most popular professor." All other offices went to men now on the last lap of their college careers.

This marks the first time that a [illegible] has been nominated as P. C.'s [illegible] contest.

The [illegible] was [illegible] for the [illegible] "most courteous." The latter finally ended in a three-way tie, with W. M. Thompson, Clarke Pepper, and Bo[illegible] having the honor.

As the final votes were tabulated Ferguson gradually [illegible] a sizeable lead which finally gave him the title.

The juniors, other than Miss Blakely, who won [illegible] were J. W. Combs, Jr., and T. H. Wingate. Combs was selected the "best journalist," and Wingate was named "wittiest" in close contests in which "Turk" Osman and [illegible] Patterson were contestants.

Dramatic Club In Local Debut

First Performance of Season Is Staged Tuesday Night. Grafton Is Director of Group.

The P. C. Dramatic club opened its home season Tuesday night, Nov. 22, at the Florida Street School auditorium before a small but enthusiastic audience.

The play, "Blundering Billy," was excellently presented. All the parts were well carried out and the play as a whole was entertaining and amusing.

At the last moment, Frank Guess, who had the part of Ezra Tuttle, was prevented by circumstances from taking any part in the production. The part was taken by Professor Grafton, who performed admirably well in spite of the short time he had taken for rehearsal. Professor Grafton also directed the production.

The cast of characters was as follows:

Woyo San, a Japanese girl—Annie Lee Jackson.

Sing Toy, a Chinese servant—Alman M. Tommins.

Ezra Tuttle, a rich mine owner—Chip Grafton.

Dorothy Tuttle, Ezra's daughter—Georgia B. Blakely.

Billy Butler, always in trouble—Hart Odom.

Clarissa Burnham, a guest at the Strathmore"—Annabel Kennedy.

Lieutenant Griswold, from the Presidio Reservation—J. Walker Combs.

Hank Dibble, an old salt—H. M. Wilson, Jr.

The entertainment between the acts was supplied by Frank Little and the P. C. musicians. Little also tap-danced and the orchestra played during the intermissions.

McDonald Writes New Pep Song

The new pep song which was played for the first time by the band at the Erskine game was written by one of the students, M. J. McDonald.

"Shorty" McDonald as he is known on the campus, comes to us from Presbyterian Junior college, Maxton, N. C., and has in those few months at P. C. shown his ability as a musician in many ways. The latest of these is his composing the new pep song, which promises to be a decided hit.

The song is primarily a football song, although other words might be [illegible] for the other sports.

ALUMNI CHAPTERS

In five states there are a total of nineteen towns where eight or more old P. C. men have gathered. They form a good cross section of the leading citizens of the community. They are ministers, doctors, lawyers, teachers and business men, ranging in age from twenty-two to seventy. But they have this common interest: Presbyterian College. It is their school, the scene of their young manhood, full of memories and the source of much pride.

Those men like to get together and recall their college life and to discuss plans for the old school, wonder what kind of team it will have next year, what kind of students are going there now and the advancement of the school. They are intensely interested.

There is a movement on foot to form Alumni Chapters in those towns where P. C. men have settled. They should be formed. P. C. needs the support of its alumni and the alumni need the closer contact with each other that can be obtained in some form of organization based on good fellowship and common interest. Other schools have strong and active chapters that are doing an invaluable work. P. C. men are no less loyal. They have been hampered by the lack of a close knit organization impossible to maintain with only one or two meetings in Clinton each year.

P. C. has made men who can work together for her good. Let every one put his shoulder to the wheel and get some P. C. Alumni Chapters formed.

A NEW NAME?

We all are interested at the present time in making P. C. one of the best colleges in the South. We cannot accomplish this without the unified cooperation of all supporters. What can we do or say as a whole at the present time that will benefit the college?

There are many people in Georgia who look at me with bewilderment when I tell them I am from P. C. They want to know where and what kind of a ... I type it is. Many considers think this is a school for Presbyterians only, and that it is meant primarily for preparing a boy for the seminary. True, our school does send a certain percentage to the seminary, but the others go out into the world to be Christian business men. No, this is not a ... nary nor by school, as many outsiders suppose. It is a red-blooded Christian institution. Boys of all denominations come here, and some on our present roll are planning to be preachers of some other faith than Presbyterian.

What is the matter? Why all this misunderstanding? The boys whom the school could help the most are scared away by what? It seems that it is the name. What, you cry, is not the name which the institution now bears good enough? It is good enough for us, but it seems to be repugnant to the outsider and prospective student. The is ue is not what we shall name the college, for our supporters in South Carolina alone could find a name much more beautiful than the present one. We need a name which will be synonymous with our college here in Clinton. As it is now, people think of our college as being any one of several Presbyterian colleges in the South.

Did you know that several Presbyterian girls schools in this section do not bear their original denominational name? Queens and Chicora, before their merger, had this type of name. Flora Macdonald, in Red Springs, N. C., was formerly known as Southern Presbyterian College. These schools found it advisable to make a change. Why have the other denominations in South Carolina not adopted their church names for their colleges instead of a secular one? How far would Furman, Wofford and the rest have gotten had they had church names?

—A. M. T.

CAN WE TAKE IT?

(Much of the material in this editorial has been taken from an interesting little book entitled "College Life," by B. R. Briggs. If you are interested read the whole book—a matter of an hour).

To an American college the word of all words is "truth." "Veritas" is the motto of Harvard; "Lux et Veritas" the motto of Yale. A an institution of learning, a college must be a school of integrity. It can have no other justification. Yet in no respectable community are certain kinds of dishonesty more readily condoned than among college students.

When I speak of a college as believing in the truth, I mean first that its president and faculty must be honest and fearless; but I mean more than this. I mean also that a high standard of honor must be maintained by its undergraduates; for, far beyond the belief of most men, the standing of a college in the community and the effect of a college in the country depend on the personal character of the undergraduates. This personal character depends in a measure on the straightforwardness and the human quality of the teachers, but mostly on the moral fibre and training of the students.

Violation of college honor is most widely prevalent in written work. This type of honesty is hard to eradicate, because rooted in impalpable tradition, —that damaging tradition which exempts students from the ordinary rules of right living, and regards as venial, or even humorous, acts intrinsically allied to those of the impostor, the forger, and the thief. It is incredible that a youth of eighteen should not see the dishonesty of handing in as his own work, for his own credit, a piece of writing which he has copied from a newspaper or from a book, or from the writing of a fellow student, for which he has paid another man to write for him. Nobody who gets into college can be so stupid that he cannot see the lie involved. Yet we overlook it, excusing ourselves with the weak statement, "Every one else does it." However, the public sentiment of our colleges is becoming, year by year, cleaner and clearer-sighted. We are slowly realizing that a lie is a lie, whoever tells it; and a theft is a theft, whoever commits it.

Here at P. C. we are governed by an Honor System which covers many of our common interests and supposedly puts our college work on a fair and honest basis. The heart of our Honor System is contained in Article X of the constitution: "It shall be the duty of every student who observes cheating or fraud in any class, test, or examination to report same to the president of the Student Council. Or he may ... in his place in class, to ... or examination and give warning in the following words, 'I suspect cheating in this class'."

Looking back over the past we find that this warning, other than on the occasions when it is given by members of the Council itself, has seldom been given, even by those of us who condemn cheating and despise a man for taking any part in it. We thus unconsciously give our approval to the act.

Worst of all, on recalling those times when students, conscientious and highly imbued with a sense of honor, have attempted to uphold the honor system in regard to cheating, we find that they have in every case been severely criticised, or even ostracised, by their fellow students. We condemn a man for doing something we ourselves would like to have the required "intestinal fortitude" to do. We are courageous in the boxing ring and on the gridiron in physical combat but in moral stamina we seem to be lacking. We can't stand up under the scorn of the few who depend on "riding" to get by—those few who, rather than exercise their minds, compromise themselves in order to pass.

We may make touchdowns for our school, knock out our opponents, win debates, make good marks, but the greatest service we can render her is to join that large group which stands for the improvement of undergraduate morals and honor. The least we can do is not to condemn a man for doing something we ourselves have not the nerve to do.

Are we strong enough to stand for what we think is right? Can we endure the criticism of our fellow students for so doing? CAN WE TAKE IT?

"In order not to be criticised, do nothing, say nothing, be nothing."

—H. H. F.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

As an alumnus of Presbyterian College I am deeply interested in the agitation for a new name. It may be that a new name is desirable, but before the matter goes any further I should like to remind P. C. students and alumni of a few things which I believe should be taken into consideration.

At present the term "P. C." stands for a great deal in the state of South Carolina. About it there has gathered a connotation which defies analysis or interpretation—a sort of halo which you can't place your hands on. "P. C." stands for an undaunted spirit in a small college which larger institutions simply can't ignore or pass over; it stands for sportsmanship and clean athletics; for friendliness, both on and off the campus, with supporters and non-supporters alike. In that term are embodied the phantom figures of presidents and professors and coaches and athletes and students, living and dead, past and present. It brings to mind, in itself, a vision of the beautiful campus, a picture of Dr. Douglas and Dr. McSween, of Coach Johnson and Lonnie McMillian, of Dr. Spencer and "Hawk" Hunter, and a host of others which are too numerous to name. Athletically it brings up Shorty Pearce and Jack Wilson and Eichelberger and Charlie Wilson and Jimmy Stamps and Marion Kirven and Jimmy Green and Ross Lynn and all the rest of them—men who have made gridiron and track history in South Carolina. Can there be another name that will take over all this meaning and once more give it life?

It may be true that the name "Presbyterian College" fails to identify the institution outside of our immediate sector, but what name will do so? The only logical substitute at this time would be "Clinton College," and, although we owe the town of Clinton an incalculable debt, at the same time is it not true that almost every other state has its Clinton? Today in the North we say "Presbyterian College" and the reply is "Yes, but what is its name?" If we change it to Clinton College, won't they still say "Which Clinton?" Tennessee, North Carolina, and Mississippi, to name a few, have colleges in towns by the same name as our own home town of Clinton. How well will that name serve the purpose of identification?

If there should be another name, a name carrying with it sufficient reason for adoption, and carrying with it the spirit and personality of this very institution, then let us by all means consider it thoughtfully and seriously. But until some such outstanding name, with its outstanding reason, is offered, let us bide our time and glory in the tradition that is ours.

I am not against a change if it should really be of the kind that would identify and represent the spirit of the College, but I do ... change simply for the change would be a grave ... Should we not consider ... with the deepest seriousness ... a long period of prayer, ... ation?

Yours in the interests ... college to which both of us ... say "Alma Mater."

Something for pipe smokers to think about!

ABOUT 1864, farmers began to grow White Burley Tobacco. A few casks were taken to the St. Louis Fair in 1867 and sold for 58c a pound.

White Burley Tobacco is used to make Granger. It is the best pipe tobacco that grows.

You will notice the difference as soon as you light up your pipe of Granger. It burns slower, smokes cooler and never gums a pipe.

Bird's-Eye View Of Football Season

This past season, P. C.'s varsity football team carried on the spirit and fight for which her athletic teams are known. Although handicapped at the first of the year by sophomore linemen and backs, the team was soon whipped into shape by the deft hand of Coach Johnson, and at the end of the season became a smooth-working machine.

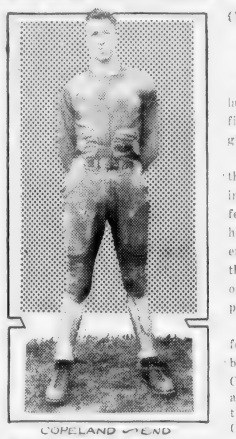
In the first game of the season the Alumnist band went down in defeat before a strong Clemson eleven. Inexperience proved their downfall; but the boys showed promise of better things before the end of the season.

The following week-end Lenoir-Rhyne's Bears stalked prey "among the Piedmont hills of old S. C." However, their heavy aggregation did not possess the necessary stuff to lick P. C. on her home soil. Presbyterian won, 7 to 0.

The Presbyterians have no alibi or excuse to offer for the severe trouncing handed them by the Golden Bears of Mercer on Oct. 8. The Hose were clearly outclassed in every department of the game. Mention must be made of the fact that, though hopelessly defeated, the Blue Hose had enough fight to rush through and break up the try for extra point after the final touchdown of the Bears. This bitter defeat was the turning point of the season. The team started "clicking." Within the next two weeks both High Point and Wofford were defeated by the smashing, charging, and battering of an improved Presbyterian eleven. This winning streak was momentarily halted the following week-end by the Newberry Indians. The game ended in a 7-7 tie. It was hard fought throughout and a fine exhibition of football was given by two good teams.

In the next game the Presbyterian Blue Wave rose to tidal heights by stamping The Citadel under a deluge of touchdowns. Picked to lose, the Hose invaded the haunt of the Bulldogs and upset all dope by a 27 to 0 victory. The inspired football played by the Blue Stockings that memorable day was a brand not often seen at The Citadel or elsewhere. They outplayed the Bulldogs throughout the game and deserve no limit of credit for a splendid performance.

P. C. continued this brilliant quality of football by winding up the season with a 14 to 0 victory over Erskine.



The following facts show that this has been a successful season: the team won five games, lost two, and tied one; it ranks second in the state standing, and second in the general standing for all the teams in the state; has scored 115 points to opponents' 7; the high scorer in the state is a member of P. C.'s backfield; and, after a poor start, the team developed steadily and wound up its season among the best.

R. O. T. C. Football Begins Tomorrow

Intra-mural football, the annual now staged by the R. O. T. C. after the regular football season ends, begins this week. "B" and "C" companies open the season with a game Tuesday afternoon, and later in the week, the Home Guards, boasting the strongest team in years, meet "A" company. The winners of these battles, meet for the battalion championship.

New rules are being inaugurated this season. No more scoreless games are to be played. The quarters will be ten minutes long, except the final one, which will last until the goal lines meet in mid-field, unless a score is made. In case the score is tied at the end of the game, an extra five-minute period will be played. For each extra period the goal lines will be shortened ten yards, until one or the other of the contestants can cross the opponents' goal

On All-State Team

COPELAND—END

For the second year in succession, J. B. Copeland, Presbyterian end, makes the South Carolina all-state eleven. J. B. was on the first string of the 1930 S. I. A. A. champions, and has continued for three years his great work begun in that year. Last year he made both all-state and all-S. I. A. A., and by his performance this season well deserves the honor again.

J. B. is a native of Clinton, but now makes his home in Spartanburg. He also stars in basketball and track. His selection on the 1932 all-state marks the close of a brilliant football career.

The Blue Stocking's All-State Pick

With the end of the South Carolina football season comes a wide range of opinions on the 1932 all-state selections. The Blue Stocking ventures a choice, simplifying an extremely difficult task by choosing two elevens, designating one as the first string, but admitting that several on the second team run a very, very close second.

Following are The Blue Stocking selections:

First Team

Copeland, P. C.	end
Dorn, Furman	tackle
Peden, Furman	guard
Shinn, Carolina	center
Heineman, Clemson	guard
Meers, Carolina	tackle
Wood, Furman	end

Bolick, P. C.	back
Woodward, Clemson	back
Griffin, Furman	back

Second Team

McCraw, Citadel	guard
Mitchell, Furman	center
Reeder, P. C.	guard
Johnson, Carolina	tackle
Pinson, P. C.	end
Jennings, Citadel	quarter

Frosh Lose Last Game Of Season

Citadel Plebes Take Presbyterian Freshmen Into Camp, 14 To 7, Thanksgiving Day.

The Presbyterian freshmen lost the last game of the season to The Citadel first year men, 14-7, in their Thanksgiving game in Charleston.

Starting off, the Blue Socks played their opponents off their feet, marching to the very goal line in the first few minutes of play. Failing to score, however, they drove down close to the end line again, finally breaking through at the beginning of the second quarter to score, Quarterman passing 20 yards to Higbe for a score.

The Blue Socks hit a streak of misfortune following the initial score, and before the first half had ended, the Citadel men had taken advantage of a fumbled punt to score. Ferguson ran the ball over for the first score for Citadel.

The final score of the game came when Quarterman's attempted punt was blocked close to the goal line. The Citadel freshmen drove the few yards to make the score 14-7.

Johnny Robinson played a fine game for the freshmen, showing up spectacularly in all divisions of play. The P. C. yearlings were greatly crippled by injuries, but their opponents were playing heads-up football, the kind that wins.

Denny was great at line plunging and played a fine defensive game. Mixon was put out of the game on the first play with a dislocated arm, greatly weakening the line. Horne's and Peterson's bad knee injuries reoccurred to weaken their respective positions. Mike Morgan shwed up well in his first start of the year, replacing Davis at guard.

This game ended the football season for Presbyterian college. The freshmen suffered several severe setbacks during the last part of the season, and lost to Wofford and Citadel, and earlier in the season, to Clemson. They defeated Erskine and Newberry.

Coach Johnson expects to have quite a great deal of material to whip into shape for his varsity next year from the sophomore class.

Bolick High Scorer In State For 1932

Columbia, Nov. 27.—Failure of Lyles Alley, of Furman, his nearest rival, to score in the Clemson game, has virtually assured Harry Bolick, hard-driving Presbyterian college back of individual scoring honors in South Carolina football this fall.

The Charleston boy, getting away to a late start, amassed a total of 54 points during the season. Alley and Jack Monroe, Wofford's quarterback, tied second with 42.

South Carolina has one more game to play, with Auburn, but Earl Clary, its leading scorer, would have to tally 26 points in that game to oust Bolick, which would be a near-miracle.

Basketball Takes Athletic Stage

Along with boxing, basketball gets off with a bang Monday. Although usually weak in this sport, the Blue Stockings show some well seasoned veterans as well as some fine new material.

Coach Lonnie McMillian has set Monday afternoon for the first practice. Charlie Barrett, Geachy Adams, Harry Nettles, and J. B. Copeland are members of last year's squad who are looked to to give the team its nucleus of experienced players. Last year's freshman class will add a great deal to the team, and Coach McMillian plans to give the school the best team in that sport it has had for some time.

DRIPPINGS OF THE WEEK-END

By Walker Combs, Jr.

Football is over, as far as 1932 is concerned. Searcy Elliott plans entering the movies, by virtue of his victory in the campus beauty contest; George Ewing thinks he will take a much needed rest; J. B. Copeland, bearing up under the strain of two years straight all-state is undecided; Charlie Barrett has one idea, to enjoy life—it is so short; Polo Pinson plans entering a circus, as champion weight-lifter of the Seven Seas and the Thousand Isles; Geachy Adams plans, so he is accused, to be the big shot in more than one woman's life, while his rival is off intoxicated with fame in Hollywood; Harry Lee Nettles thinks he could make several laughing records and retire. . . .

So it is with every senior class.

The annual fiasco staged by the R. O. T. C. every year immediately following the Thanksgiving season, is about to break. It opens Tuesday afternoon with the game between "B" and "C" companies, and ends in a week or so with the championship game to be played between the winner of this game and the game between "A" company and the Home Guards.

Pre-season predictions find the Home Guards the strongest of the elevens. They said so themselves, so you may take it for its face value. They are always the best team in practice, but by some chance they have never won a battalion championship. They plan to do mighty works this season.

South Carolina needs money. The people of the state refuse to be taxed further for the support of their state university. But now, that the authorities of the university seek to make the small sum of $2,500 by moving the Carolina-Auburn game to Birmingham, every one is up in arms. Rightly so, perhaps. The people of the state deserve one good game, and Auburn certainly could supply the needed fireworks. At any rate, the matter is not closed, and in case they finally decide to play in Columbia, all the schools in the state will have to close down for the day.

Boxing and basketball get off to a start this week. In boxing, Presbyterian is planning on the state championship. In basketball, the school never was the best, but they show signs of having a great little squad this year.

If you ever tried picking an all-state team you can sympathize with those ... charge of it ... Blue Stocking. And when it ... done on the basis of what was ... in the papers ... it probably ... as much pain ... get any idea of what really ... used ... the game.

Although our all-state team was chosen before the newspaper balloting was published, we have an advantage in publishing ours after the authoritative one. If any one disagrees—well, what does it matter?

Freshman boys, we notice, have broken training.

And now, with these last lines, we bid adieu until 1933. It isn't so far off, you know, and in the whole month elapsing between now and the next time copy is due for this column, a whole lot can happen, and a whole slough (slew, slue) of ideas can be born.

Blue Hose Expect Good Ring Team

The first call for the Presbyterian college boxers to report was issued last week by Coach Johnson. Uniforms will be issued Monday afternoon at the gym. Practice will start immediately thereafter.

The boxing team this year bids fair to be the best in several years. There are six letter men expected to be back with the squad. Several experienced sophomores, who trained under Coach Johnson last year, will also make strong bids for several of the classes.

The team this year is led by Jimmie Horton, a light-heavyweight.

Three of the lettermen will don the P. C. colors and the gloves for the last time for P. C. this season.

Leading contenders for places in the light-heavy and heavyweight classes are Horton, Sims and Bolick. Freeman Parker is, so far, the only veteran in the middleweights. All the lower weights will be hotly contested. In the lightweight class are McDuffie and McCaskill; the featherweight class includes Crouch and Corbett, and the bantamweight, Ferguson, Wyman and Seagle. Others are expected to join these as the season gets under way.

So far, three meets have been arranged:

Jan. 14—Carolina at Columbia.
Jan. 21—Citadel at Charleston.
Feb. 18—Clemson at Clemson.

ALUMNI CHAPTERS

In five states there are a total of nineteen towns where eight or more old P. C. men have gathered. They form a good cross section of the leading citizens of the community. They are ministers, doctors, lawyers, teachers and business men, ranging in age from twenty-two to seventy. But they have this common interest: Presbyterian College. It is their school, the scene of their young manhood, full of memories and the source of much pride.

Those men like to get together and recall their college life and to discuss plans for the old school, wonder what kind of team it will have next year, what kind of students are going there now and the advancement of the school. They are intensely interested.

There is a movement on foot to form Alumni Chapters in those towns where P. C. men have settled. They should be formed. P. C. needs the support of its alumni and the alumni need the closer contact with each other that can be obtained in some form of organization based on good fellowship and common interest. Other schools have strong and active chapters that are doing an invaluable work. P. C. men are no less loyal. They have been hampered by the lack of a close knit organization impossible to maintain with only one or two meetings in Clinton each year.

P. C. has made men who can work together for her good. Let every one put his shoulder to the wheel and get our P. C. Alumni Chapters formed.

A NEW NAME?

We all are interested at the present time in meaning P. C. one of the best colleges in the South. We cannot accomplish this without the united cooperation of all supporters. What can we do or say as a whole at the present time that will benefit the college?

There are many people in Georgia who look at me with bewilderment when I tell them I am from P. C. They want to know where and what kind of a college it is. Many outsiders think this is a school for Presbyterians only, and that it is meant primarily for preparing a boy for the seminary. True, our school does send a certain percentage to the seminary, but the others go out into the world to be Christian business men. No, this is not a purely parochial school, as many outsiders suppose. It is a red-blooded Christian institution. Boys of all denominations come here, and some on our present roll are planning to be preachers of some other faith than Presbyterian.

What is the matter? Why all this misunderstanding." The boys whom the school could help the most are scared away by what? It seems that it is the name. What, you cry, is not the name which the institution now bears good enough? It is good enough for us, but it seems to be repugnant to the outsider and prospective student. The issue is not what we shall name the college, for our supporters in South Carolina alone could find a name much more beautiful than the present one. We need a name which will be synonymous with our college here in Clinton. As it is now, people think of our college as being any one of several Presbyterian colleges in the South.

Did you know that several Presbyterian girls schools in this section do not bear their original denominational name? Queens and Chicora, before their merger, had this type of name. Flora Macdonald, in Red Springs, N. C., was formerly known as Southern Presbyterian College. These schools found it advisable to make a change. Why have the other denominations in South Carolina not adopted their church names for their colleges instead of a secular one? How far would Furman, Wofford and the rest have gotten had they had church names?

CAN WE TAKE IT?

(Much of the material in this editorial has been taken from an interesting little book entitled "College Life," by B. R. Briggs. If you are interested read the whole book—a matter of an hour).

To an American college the word of all words is "truth." "Veritas" is the motto of Harvard; "Lux et Veritas" the motto of Yale. A an institution of learning, a college must be a school of integrity. It can have no other justification. Yet in no respectable community are certain kinds of dishonesty more readily condoned than among college students.

When I speak of a college as believing in the truth, I mean first that its president and faculty must be honest and fearless; but I mean more than this. I mean also that a high standard of honor must be maintained by its undergraduates; for, far beyond the belief of most men, the standing of a college in the community and the effect of a college in the country depend on the personal character of the undergraduates. This personal character depends in a measure on the straightforwardness and the human quality of the teachers, but mostly on the moral fibre and training of the students.

Violation of college honor is most widely prevalent in written work. This type of honesty is hard to eradicate, because rooted in impalpable tradition, —that damaging tradition which exempts students from the ordinary rules of right living, and regards as venial, or even humorous, acts intrinsically allied to those of the impostor, the forger, and the thief. It is incredible that a youth of eighteen should not see the dishonesty of handing in as his own work, for his own credit, a piece of writing which he has copied from a newspaper or from a book, or from the writing of a fellow student, or which he has paid another man to write for him. Nobody who gets into college can be so stupid that he cannot see the lie involved. Yet we overlook it, excusing ourselves with the weak statement, "Every one else does it." However, the public sentiment of our colleges is becoming, year by year, clearer and clearer-sighted. We are slowly realizing that a lie is a lie, whoever tells it; and a theft is a theft, whoever commits it.

Here at P. C. we are governed by an Honor System which covers many of our common interests and supposedly puts our college work on a fair and honest basis. The heart of our Honor System is contained in Article X of the constitution: "It shall be the duty of every student who observes cheating or fraud in any class, test, or examination to report same to the president of the Student Council. Or he may rise in his place in class, test or examination and give warning in the following words. 'I suspect cheating in this class'."

Looking back over the past we find that this warning, other than on the occasions when it is given by members of the Council itself, has seldom been given, even by those of us who condemn cheating and despise a man for taking any part in it. We thus unconsciously give our approval to the act.

Worst of all, on recalling those times when students, conscientious and highly imbued with a sense of honor, have attempted to uphold the honor system in regard to cheating, we find that they have in every case been severely criticised, or even ostracised, by their fellow students. We condemn a man for doing something we ourselves would like to have the required "intestinal fortitude" to do. We are courageous in the boxing ring and on the gridiron in physical combat but in moral stamina we seem to be lacking. We can't stand up under the scorn of the few who depend on "riding" to get by — those few who, rather than exercise their minds, compromise themselves in order to pass.

We may make touchdowns for our school, knock out our opponents, win debates, make good marks, but the greatest service we can render her is to join that large group which stands for the improvement of undergraduate morals and honor. The least we can do is not to condemn a man for doing something we ourselves have not the nerve to do.

Are we strong enough to stand for what we think is right? Can we endure the criticism of our fellow students for so doing? CAN WE TAKE IT?

"In order not to be criticised, do nothing, say nothing, be nothing."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

As an alumnus of Presbyterian College I am deeply interested in the agitation for a new name. It may be that a new name is desirable, but before the matter goes any further I should like to remind P. C. students and alumni of a few things which I believe should be taken into consideration.

At present the term "P. C." stands for a great deal in the state of South Carolina. About it there has gathered a connotation which defies analysis or interpretation—a sort of halo which you can't place your hands on. "P. C." stands for an undaunted spirit in a small college which larger institutions simply can't ignore or pass over; it stands for sportsmanship and clean athletics; for friendliness, both on and off the campus, with supporters and non-supporters alike. In that term are embodied the phantom figures of presidents and professors and coaches and athletes and students, living and dead, past and present. It brings to mind, in itself, a picture of the beautiful campus, a picture of Dr. Douglas and Dr. M. Sweet, of Coach Johnson and Lonnie McMillian, of Dr. Spencer and "Hawk" Hunter, and a host of others which are too numerous to name. Athletically it brings up Shorty Pearce and Jack Wilson and Eichelberger and Charlie Wilson and Jimmy Stamps and Marion Kirven and Jimmy Green and Ross Lynn and all the rest of them — men who have made gridiron and track history in South Carolina. Can there be another name that will take over all this meaning and once more give it life?

It may be true that the name "Presbyterian College" fails to identify the institution outside of our immediate sector, but what name will do so? The only logical substitute at this time would be "Clinton College," and, although we owe the town of Clinton an incalculable debt, at the same time is it not true that almost every other state has its Clinton? Today in the North we say "Presbyterian College" and the reply is "Yes, but what is its name?" If we change it to Clinton College, won't they still say "Which Clinton?" Tennessee, North Carolina, and Mississippi, to name a few, have colleges in towns by the same name as our own home town of Clinton. How well will that name serve the purpose of identification?

If there should be another name, a name carrying with it sufficient reason for adoption, and carrying with it the spirit and personality of this very institution, then let us by all means consider it thoughtfully and seriously. But until some such outstanding name, with its outstanding reason, is offered, let us bide our time and glory in the tradition that is ours.

I am not against a change if it should really be of the kind that would identify and represent the spirit of the College. (as I do) change simply for the change would be a great. Should we not consider with the deepest seriousness a long period of prayer, ation?

Yours in the interests college to which both of say "Alma Mater."

Something for pipe smokers to think about!

ABOUT 1864, farmers began to grow White Burley Tobacco. A few casks were taken to the St. Louis Fair in 1867 and sold for 58c a pound.

White Burley Tobacco is used to make Granger. It is the best pipe tobacco that grows.

You will notice the difference as soon as you light up your pipe of Granger. It burns slower, smokes cooler and never gums a pipe.

Bird's-Eye View Of Football Season

This past season P. C.'s varsity football team carried on the spirit and fight for which her athletic teams are known. Although handicapped at the first of the year by sophomore linemen and backs, the team was soon whipped into shape by the deft hand of Coach Johnson, and at the end of the season became a smooth-working machine.

In the first game of the season the Alumnist band went down in defeat before a strong Clemson eleven. Inexperience proved their downfall; but the boys showed promise of better things before the end of the season.

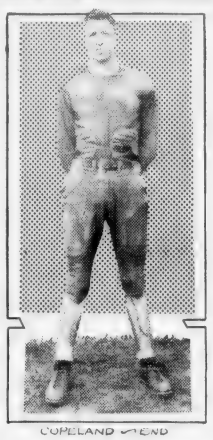
The following week-end Lenoir-Rhyne's Bears stalked prey "among the Piedmont hills of old S. C." However, their heavy aggregation did not possess the necessary stuff to lick P. C. on her home soil. Presbyterian won, 14 to 0.

The Presbyterians have no alibi or excuse to offer for the severe trouncing handed them by the Golden Bears of Mercer on Oct. 8. The Hose were early outclassed in every department of the game. Mention must be made of the fact that, though hopelessly defeated, the Blue Hose had enough fight to rush through and break up the try for extra point after the final touchdown of the Bears. This bitter defeat was the turning point of the season. The team started "clicking." Within the next two weeks both High Point and Wofford were defeated by the smashing, charging, and battering of an improved Presbyterian eleven.

This winning streak was momentarily halted the following week-end by the Newberry Indians. The game ended in a 7-7 tie. It was hard fought throughout and a fine exhibition of football was given by two good teams.

In the next game the Presbyterian Blue Wave rose to tidal heights by stamping The Citadel under a deluge of touchdowns. Picked to lose, the Hose invaded the haunt of the Bulldogs and upset all dope by a 27 to 0 victory. The inspired football played by the Blue Stockings that memorable day was a brand not often seen at The Citadel or elsewhere. They outplayed the Bulldogs throughout the game and reserve no limit of credit for a splendid performance.

P. C. continued this brilliant quality of football by winding up the season with a 14 to 0 victory over Erskine.



The following facts show that this year has been a successful season: the team won five games, lost two, and tied one; it ranks second in the state standing, and second in the general standing for all the teams in the state; it has scored 115 points to opponents' 7; the high scorer in the state is a member of P. C.'s backfield; and, after a poor start, the team developed steadily and wound up its season among the best.

R. O. T. C. Football Begins Tomorrow

Intra-mural football, the annual show staged by the R. O. T. C. after the regular football season ends, begins this week. "B" and "C" companies open the season with a game Tuesday afternoon, and later in the week, the Home Guards, boasting the youngest team in years, meet "A" company. The winners of these battles, meet for the battalion championship.

New rules are being inaugurated this season. No more scoreless games are to be played. The quarters will be ten minutes long, except the final one, which will last until the goal lines meet in mid-field, unless a score is made. In case the score is tied at the end of the game, an extra five-minute period will be played. For each extra period the goal lines will be shortened ten yards, until one or the other of the contestants can cross the opponents' goal.

On All-State Team

COPELAND — END

For the second year in succession, J. B. Copeland, Presbyterian end, makes the South Carolina all-state eleven. J. B. was on the first string of the 1930 S. I. A. A. champions, and has continued for three years his great work begun in that year. Last year he made both all-state and all-S. I. A. A., and by his performance this season well deserves the honor again.

J. B. is a native of Clinton, but now makes his home in Spartanburg. He also stars in basketball and track. His selection on the 1932 all-state marks the close of a brilliant football career.

The Blue Stocking's All-State Pick

With the end of the South Carolina football season comes a wide range of opinions on the 1932 all-state selections. The Blue Stocking ventures a choice, simplifying an extremely difficult task by choosing two elevens, designating one as the first string, but admitting that several on the second team run a very, very close second.

Following are The Blue Stocking selections:

First Team

Copeland, P. C.	end
Dorn, Furman	tackle
Peden, Furman	guard
Shinn, Carolina	center
Heineman, Clemson	guard
Meers, Carolina	tackle
Wood, Furman	end
Wolfe, Carolina	quarter
Bolick, P. C.	back
Woodward, Clemson	back
Griffin, Furman	back

Second Team

Patterson, Clemson	end
Nantz, Wofford	tackle
McCraw, Citadel	guard
Mitchell, Furman	center
Reeder, P. C.	guard
Johnson, Carolina	tackle
Pinson, P. C.	end
Jennings, Citadel	quarter
Smelco, Newberry	back
Clary, Carolina	back
Sims, P. C.	back

JOHNSON'S PICK

As one of the two coaches whose all-state was entered in the balloting this week, Coach Johnson also makes a selection for this eleven. His is as follows:

Wood, Furman	left end
Peden, Furman	left guard
Shinn, Carolina	center
Heineman, Clemson	right guard
Meers, Carolina	right tackle
Copeland, P. C.	right end
Jennings, Citadel	quarter
Bolick, P. C.	left half
Smelco, Newberry	right half
Griffin, Furman	fullback

Frosh Lose Last Game Of Season

Citadel Plebes Take Presbyterian Freshmen Into Camp, 14 To 7, Thanksgiving Day.

The Presbyterian freshmen lose the last game of the season to The Citadel first year men, 14-7, in their Thanksgiving game in Charleston.

Starting off, the Blue Socks played their opponents off their feet, marching to the very goal line in the first few minutes of play. Failing to score, however, they drove down close to the end line again, finally breaking through at the beginning of the second quarter to score, Quarterman passing 20 yards to Higbe for a score.

The Blue Socks hit a streak of misfortune following the initial score, and before the first half had ended, the Citadel men had taken advantage of a fumbled punt to score. Ferguson ran the ball over for the first score for Citadel.

The final score of the game came when Quarterman's attempted punt was blocked close to the goal line. The Citadel freshmen drove the few yards to make the score 14-7.

Johnny Robinson played a fine game for the freshmen, showing up spectacularly in all divisions of play. The P. C. yearlings were greatly crippled by injuries, but their opponents were playing heads up football, the kind that wins.

Denny was great at line plunging and played a fine defensive game. Mixon was put out of the game on the first play with a dislocated arm, greatly weakening the line. Horne's and Peterson's bad knee injuries recurred to weaken their respective positions. Mike Morgan showed up well in his first start of the year, replacing Davis at guard.

This game ended the football season for Presbyterian college. The freshmen suffered several severe setbacks during the last part of the season, and lost to Wofford and Citadel, and earlier in the season, to Clemson. They defeated Erskine and Newberry.

Coach Johnson expects to have quite a great deal of material to whip into shape for his varsity next year from the sophomore class.

Bolick High Scorer In State For 1932

Columbia, Nov. 27. Failure of Lyles Alley, of Furman, his nearest rival, to score in the Clemson game, has virtually assured Harry Bolick, hard-driving Presbyterian college back of individual scoring honors in South Carolina football this fall.

The Charleston boy, getting away to a late start, amassed a total of 51 points during the season. Alley and Jack Monroe, Wofford's quarterback, tied second with 42.

South Carolina has one more game to play, with Auburn, but Earl Clary, its leading scorer, would have to tally 36 points in that game to oust Bolick, which would be a near-miracle.

Basketball Takes Athletic Stage

Along with boxing, basketball gets off with a bang Monday. Although usually weak in this sport, the Blue Stockings show some well seasoned veterans as well as some fine new material.

Coach Lonnie McMillian has set Monday afternoon for the first practice. Charlie Barrett, Geachy Adams, Harry Nettles, and J. B. Last year's freshman class will add a great deal to the team, and Coach McMillian plans to give the school the best [illegible] that sport it has had [illegible] time.

Pre-season predictions find the Home Guards the strongest of the elevens. They said so themselves, so you may take it for its face value. They are always the best team in practice, but by some chance they have never won a battalion championship. They plan to do mighty works this season.

South Carolina needs money. The people of the state refuse to be taxed further for the support of their state university. But now, that the authorities of the university seek to make the small sum of $2,500 by moving the Carolina-Auburn game to Birmingham, every one is up in arms. Rightly so, perhaps. The people of the state deserve one good game, and Auburn certainly could supply the needed fireworks. At any rate, the matter is not closed, and in case they finally decide to play in Columbia, all the schools in the state will have to close down for the day.

Boxing and basketball get off to a start this week. In boxing, Presbyterian is planning on the state championship. In basketball, the school never was the best, but they show signs of having a great little squad this year.

If you ever tried picking an all-state team you can sympathize with those in charge of picking the one for The Blue Stocking. And when it came to [illegible] on the basis of what one "reads in the papers" it was [illegible]. You can hardly select a team enough papers to get any idea of what really [illegible] in the games.

Although our all-state team was chosen before the newspaper ballotting was published, we have an advantage in publishing ours after the ballotting is one. If any one disagrees—well, what does it matter?

Furman boys, we notice, have broken training.

And now, with those last lines, we bid adieu until 1933. It isn't so far off, you know, and in the whole month elapsing between now and the next time copy is due for this column, a whole lot can happen, and a whole slough (slew, slue) of ideas can be born.

Blue Hose Expect Good Ring Team

The first call for the Presbyterian college boxers to report was issued last week by Coach Johnson. Uniforms will be issued Monday afternoon at the gym. Practice will start immediately thereafter.

The boxing team this year bids fair to be the best in several years. There are six lettermen expected to be back with the squad. Several experienced sophomores, who trained under Coach Johnson last year, will also make strong bids for several of the classes.

The team this year is led by Jimmie Horton, a light-heavyweight.

Three of the lettermen will don the P. C. colors and the gloves for the last time for P. C. this season.

Leading contenders for places in the light-heavy and heavyweight classes are Horton, Sims and Bolick. Freeman Parker is, so far, the only veteran in the middleweights. All the lower weights will be hotly contested. In the lightweight class are McDuffie and McCaskill; the featherweight class includes Crouch and Corbett, and the bantamweight, Ferguson, Wyman and Seagle. Others are expected to join these as the season gets under way.

So far, three meets have been arranged:

Jan. 14—Carolina at Columbia.
Jan. 21—Citadel at Charleston.
Feb. 18—Clemson at Clemson.

THE FIRST FOOTBALL SEASON AT PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

[illegible] gives a resume of basketball for the Presbyterian College.

The season, as I remember it, has very few features. Thomas gained most of the ground and usually accounted [illegible] Hoyt Miller gained some ground. Thomas did most of the passing. I did most of the punting. Robert Woodson and I did most of the pass receiving. We didn't have a very good defensive team, nor did we have a good offensive team. We ran practically no interference, and aside from the individual ability of Red Thomas we didn't accomplish anything that year, except to start football. The only play in the season in which I had a part in the victory was the final Thanksgiving game at Charleston in which was a score standing 7 to 6 in favor of Charleston. I received a long pass from Thomas and scored a touchdown. It was the only game in which we were evenly matched with our competitors. The other college games we lost by an overwhelming score, and the balance of the games were nothing but high school and prep school games that we were expecting to win.

In the backfield, as I remember it, we had Red Thomas, Joe Belk, Ferdinand Jacobs, Al Brice, Buckner, Hoyt Miller and myself. In the line I had a fellow named Linton, Bill B.ll, Norton, George Little, and two or three others. On the ends we had a fellow named Stephenson, and Bob Woodson. We never did have, during the entire season, enough out to practice for a two team scrimmage.

In justice to the team, I should say, however, that we would probably have had a much stronger record had it not been for the fact that several of our most likely prospects for the team were declared ineligible at the last minute before the first game, and we never got over the crippled condition.

At that time Furman and Newberry were just starting with their first season, and while stronger than us, were weaker than the big teams. Had we played Clemson, Carolina, Citadel or Davidson that year we would have been annihilated.

We had no gymnasium, no field, no stand. We played in an old abandoned cotton field, located just east of what is now the Spencer Hall dormitory. The Wm. P. Jacobs Science hall had not at that time been built. The spectators stood around the field and took care of themselves as best they could.

Incidentally, the game we licked Charleston was the last football game the College of Charleston ever played. I remember distinctly they made a check, as manager, that night for $180.50. This represented their losses of the day. They guaranteed us $250 for the game. We cleared nearly $200 on the trip.

Yours sincerely,
WM. P. JACOBS.

PRESBYTERIAN GRADUATES SCATTERED ALL OVER WORLD

Graduates of Presbyterian college may be found in well over half the states in the United States, and in five foreign countries and the Dominion of Canada. More alumni now make their homes in the state of South Carolina than are found in all of the other states in the union. Georgia is second in number of alumni, and North Carolina is third. The state of Virginia comes fourth, followed by New York. Alabama and Florida come next.

Those former students found in foreign countries are distributed in Brazil, Africa, China, Japan, Cuba, and Hawaii. One alumnus is located in Canada.

Of the 16 men west of the Mississippi river who call P. C. their alma mater, four are located in the west coast states of California and Oregon. Three of these live in California. They are Dr. Herbert T. Brooks, Alhambra, Ca.; Dr. S. A. Brooks, Pasadena; and Joseph E. Hollis, San Diego. P. C.'s lone representative in Oregon is Lee Hale Griffith, of Eugene, Ore. The others who have settled in the Western states have selected Michigan, Illinois, Oklahoma and Arkansas as their homes. Four grads are found in Minnesota and Illinois, three in Oklahoma, and a [illegible] Arkansas.

A distinguished alumnus in Illinois is Dr. W. C. Austin of the Loyola University school of medicine. Other graduates in Illinois are W. J. Cherry and W. L. Plaxico, who are connected with an insurance firm in Oak Park, and A. O. Jackson, who is attending the University of Illinois.

Over 95 per cent of the alumni live east of the Mississippi river; 90 per cent live east of the Alleghaney mountains; and 80 per cent of the total number living in the United States are found in the Southern states of South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee and Virginia. Over 50 per cent of these reside in South Carolina.

Those graduates making their homes on foreign soil are, with but one exception, connected with the foreign mission work of the church. Lieutenant William Ruch Blakely, of the U. S. army, is stationed in Hawaii.

In Japan, Dr. Sam P. Fulton is president of a theological seminary, at Kobe. H. T. Bridgman and Mrs. Lewis H. Lancaster are doing mission work in China. In Canada, Rev. Kenneth McCaskill is preaching at McDonall's Corners, Ontario.

[illegible] Presbyterian college alumni [illegible] with the evangelical and medical missions in Brazil. They are Dr. G. W. Taylor, Rev. A. L. Davis, J. K. Johnston, William G. Neville and David L. (Big Boy) Williamson.

In the Belgian Congo of African we find Dr. J. W. Chapman, Dr. George R. Cousar and Rev. A. Hoyt Miller. Dr. Cousar has a brother, Dr. J. R. Cousar, also an alumnus of this institution, who is connected with the Children's hospital, Detroit, Michigan.

A complete list of states and foreign countries where P. C. alumni are located follows: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia, District of Columbia, Wisconsin, Arizona, Minnesota, Brazil, China, Africa, Japan, Hawaii, and Canada.

Many former students of Presbyterian college have settled in the larger towns. While it has been impossible to keep track of all ex-students, the addresses of almost all the graduates and about 300 non-graduate alumni have been verified. In a recent survey to determine what towns had enough alumni to establish alumni chapters, it was discovered that in 19 owns, located in five states, the alumni roll listed eight or more old P. C. students. They are:

Georgia: Atlanta 18, Decatur 11.
New York 9.
North Carolina: Charlotte 14.
South Carolina: Abbeville 8, Anderson 14, Charleston 15, Chester 11, Clinton 80, Columbia 41, Florence 9, Greenville 21, Laurens 12, Rock Hill 10, Seneca 12, Spartanburg 11, Sumter 15, Union 8.
Virginia: Richmond 11.

Newspaper Feature Tells Of Grafton

C. W. Grafton, popular English professor here, appeared in the "Strange As It Seems" feature conducted in daily papers throughout the country by John Hix. The Greenville News, issue of November 10, carried the feature. Grafton graduated from P. C. in 1928.

Under the drawing appeared this caption: " 'Chip' Grafton scored the winning point in two football games without playing in either of them." The explanation followed.

" 'Chip' Grafton won two football games for Presbyterian college, Clinton, S. C., in 1927, without playing in either one of them, under the old rule that a kick for extra point after touchdown was not a part of the playing time.

"In the Oglethorpe game, with the score 0-0 against P. C., the Blue Hose scored a touchdown, tying the score. Grafton was called from the bench to convert the winning point. Under the rule then prevailing, time was out while the attempt was made for the point; thus Grafton did not play while the game was in progress.

"The same circumstances arose in the Erskine game of the same year, and Grafton again kicked the winning point without taking part in the playing."

Presbyterian Is A 'Family' College

Presbyterian college is a family school. A browsing through the alumni records shows a great number of brothers, sisters, fathers and mothers. It is strikingly true in the present student body.

At a survey made Wednesday morning it was found that eleven pairs of brothers, one pair of sisters and three pairs of brother and sisters are now in school. It was also found that twenty men in the present student body have had older brothers at Presbyterian college. And, although more than half of the graduates have received their sheepskins since the class of 1920, four men had fathers who attended P. C., and four had mothers who graced the campus before the ban which was lifted last year had been placed on the fair sex.

P. C. Men's Names In "Who's Who"

Among prominent Presbyterian college alumni mentioned in the 1930-32 edition of "Who's Who in America" are Henry E. Davis, Dr. Ellis A. Fuller, Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, Dr. Samuel C. Byrd, Dr. William States Jacobs, and Dr. Charleston Darby Falkon.

Henry E. Davis graduated with the class of 1902. He studied law and is now United States district attorney in Florence, S. C.

Dr. Ellis A. Fuller received his B. A. degree from Presbyterian college in 1912. The honorary degree of doctor of divinity was conferred on him in 1924 by his alma mater. Dr. Fuller is now pastor of the First Baptist church of Atlanta, Ga.

In 1894, Thornwell Jacobs was awarded his B. A. degree from this institution. He is founder and president of Oglethorpe university, Ga. He has published several books, one of them being a "Life of Palmer Jacobs," founder [illegible]

Dr. Samuel C. Byrd [illegible] president of Chicora college, Columbia, and is now president of Queens-Chicora college, N. C. He is a graduate of 1889.

Dr. Charles Davis, [illegible] ty of the home mission [illegible] Southern Presbyterian [illegible] headquarters in Nashville, graduated in 1911.

Dr. William States Jacobs, formerly pastor of the largest Presbyterian church in the South, church at Houston, Texas.

RAMBLINGS OF AN OLD SOAK

By I. M. Inebriated

The other day I walked into a room [illegible] the campus and saw twelve bottles [illegible] whiskey sitting on the table. I knew [illegible] t would never do, so I proceeded [illegible] pour all of it out. I took the cork [illegible] of the first bottle and poured the [illegible] tents out of the window, with the [illegible] eption of one glass, which I drank, [illegible] then did the same for the second [illegible] tle, with the exception of one glass, [illegible] ch I drank. I pulled the cork from [illegible] third bottle and emptied all the [illegible] ze down the sink, but one glass I [illegible] nk.

[illegible] pulled the cork from the next sink [illegible] poured the bottle down the glass [illegible] n I drank some. Next I pulled the [illegible] tle from the cork, drank one sink [illegible] of it and threw the rest down the [illegible] s. I pulled the sink out of the next [illegible] k and poured the bottle down my [illegible] k. The following bottle I pulled out [illegible] my neck, poured the cork down the [illegible] k all but the drink I sunk. The next [illegible] s I pulled from my throat, poured [illegible] sink down the bottle and drank [illegible] cork.

[illegible] Well, I had 'em all empty, so I [illegible] died the house with one hand and [illegible] nted the bottles, which were twenty-four. I counted them when they [illegible] e around again, and got seventy-[illegible] r, so I quit counting bottles and [illegible] ted counting houses.

[illegible] finally I had all the houses and bot-[illegible] counted, so I proceeded to wash [illegible] bottles and wander back to my [illegible] n where I didst have a great time [illegible] ping the monkeys from swinging [illegible] the electric light wire.

[illegible] e other day whilst wandering [illegible] n the street, wrapt in thought and [illegible] eral coats, I met a rather seedy [illegible] vidual who stopped me and asked [illegible] e was on the road to Yuma, Ari-[illegible] s.

[illegible] Well," I replied, "you are on the [illegible] t track, but what takes you to [illegible] na?"

[illegible] My friend," he said, "it's a long [illegible] y, and I cry every time I tell it, [illegible] you have a kind face, so here [illegible] s."

[illegible] One day while poring through a [illegible] k (I learned book-poring from W. [illegible] Jones) I came across this article [illegible] tten by Prof. J. B. A. Van Dine) [illegible] which I have here a part. I will [illegible] l it to you.

[illegible] The most wonderful sight to ever [illegible] e the eye of man is a Whiffletit [illegible] in full flight. This strange bird, [illegible] so plentiful, is now almost ex-[illegible] t due to the fact that souvenir [illegible] ters have captured most of them. [illegible] Whiffletit is a most peculiar bird. [illegible] has two wings which look exactly [illegible] piano stools. The motive power is [illegible] nished by blowing through the big [illegible] ffler, which is on his breast. This [illegible] nge bird flies backwards on ac-[illegible] nt of he don't care where he's go-[illegible] but he is mightily interested in [illegible] wing where he has been. When [illegible] ng in here is these strange crea-[illegible] es create a most awe-inspiring [illegible] t flying along making a soft [illegible] ffling sound.

[illegible] Here the gent finished reading and [illegible] s to me, "What do you think of [illegible] t?"

[illegible] Well," I said, astounded, "I hard-[illegible] know."

[illegible] Then he whispered, "I am going to [illegible] zona and spend the rest of my life [illegible] ching people how to appreciate the [illegible] iffletit bird. They are the world's [illegible] t destroyers of radio crooners."

[illegible] There have been many heated dis-[illegible] sions on the campus these last few [illegible] 's concerning the sticks the seniors [illegible] carrying. Some say they are ma-[illegible] lans. Others say they must be [illegible] ries. Tch! Tch!

[illegible] In a sober moment I heard the following about Mr. John "Turk" Osman. [illegible] urk," while on duty as O. D., was [illegible] osted by a stranger who had been gazing admiringly at the Osman collection in the trophy case. The stranger says to our friend "Turk," "This Osman guy must be something on the track."

With this statement, Osman quite agreed, and orated at length, as only a man can do when he is talking about himself. As full of his subject as "Turk" generally is, Osman made quite a speech.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

BANKING OR TEACHING?

The regular Thursday night program of the Y. M. C. A. was postponed until Dec. 1, because of the Thanksgiving holiday. It is the hope of the program committee to continue the study of Vocational Guidance.

Dean Marshall W. Brown will speak to the organization on the profession of teaching, while a Clinton banker will speak on his profession. Last week R. W. Wade, Clinton lawyer, gave the students an insight into the profession of law. This was enjoyed by those students present at the meeting and it is hoped that the coming meeting will be attended by all students who expect to go into the field of teaching or banking.

These talks are not primarily inspirational addresses, but they are intended to tell the dark and light sides of the profession which the speaker represents. There will be an opportunity for students to obtain information about more vocational guidance literature. Any student who has a question to ask will find those in charge willing to render all help possible. It is believed, by a careful consideration of the profession which is attractive, the student will be better able to tell whether he likes that work and whether he will be of service in that field. In times like these students can't afford to go out into the world as misfits. So come and hear the "likes" and dislikes" of your choice profession. Thursday night right after supper might open up a new field of work for you.

Later announcements will be made about the remainder of the December programs. If the students will express the desire for the things they really want, perhaps the program committee can open up fields of greater service.

The Junior Class

Out of a class of 70 freshmen in 1930, only 31 of the original members are here now. Over half of the original class of '34 have dropped out for various reasons.

Since 1930, 13 names have been added to the class roll. The new students come from 12 different institutions of learning—five junior colleges and seven senior colleges. The junior colleges are: Bailey, Presbyterian Junior college, Wingate, Edisto academy; the senior colleges are: Carolina, Vanderbilt, Davidson, Citadel; the co-eds come to us from Erskine, Lander, Winthrop, and G. W. C.

In the original class of '34, there were five states represented. South Carolina led with 47 students, Georgia came second with 15, Alabama and North Carolina tied for third with three each, and Florida came fifth with two. This year there are only four states represented, with South Carolina still leading, with 30 "scholars," Georgia second with six, and North Carolina trailing a close third with five. Wisconsin has one lone representative.

Of the 12 in the class, there are 21 fraternity men and 17 non-fraternity men. No sororities have, as yet, been established at P. C.

The members of the class of '34 are going into many vocations. Thirteen are studying to be doctors; four are studying to be ministers; others are studying to be bankers, teachers, coaches, business men, lawyers, and newspaper men. And there are still others who are just studying.

EXCHANGE

The Harlem Hop

From New Jersey College for Women we get some dope on the latest dance hit, which seems to be taking that particular campus by storm. It originates from the song, "Underneath the Harlem Moon," and, according to them, includes quite a few strange motions.—Campus News, New Brunswick, N. J.

New Medical Building

Now under construction at Wake Forest college is the medical building donated by Dr. Johnston's family. The building is to be in old colonial style and will have all modern equipment and conveniences. The architect of the structure is William Henley Deitrick, B. A., class of 1916.—Old Gold and Black.

Fraternities a Question

At the University of Chattanooga, the University Echo is asking for opinions from the students concerning the matter of fraterities. As in other schools some seem to be for, some against fraternities. The Echo states that the reason for the squawk on frats is that the fraternity situation does need improvement.

Art and Tea Combined

Up at Park college they have combined art and tea for at least one time. They propose to institute a comprehensive course in art appreciation and history which, they say, should be invaluable to those who desire to make a pretense of refinement. They also hope that the interest in their last attendance was not in the tea alone.

Blonde, Brunette, or Red-Head

You may take your choice at Wesleyan, or so it seems. If you prefer blondes you should enjoy being at Wesleyan for statistics show 44 per cent to be blondes, according to The Watchtower, Wesleyan newspaper. However, those who are radical and have decided that they rather like brunettes would not be far amiss as there are 38 per cent at Wesleyan. To be complete, they have 23 red-heads, and they think that either brunette or blonde may be attractive. How about the red-heads?

Plan Anti-War Demonstration

Again from the Park Stylus, we notice that a New York meeting representing students from 60 colleges discussed on Thanksgiving day steps toward ousting the R. O. T. C. from all colleges. The meeting is backed by a score of national student organizations. Recent suspensions of students at the University of Maryland and the University of Missouri because of their refusal to enroll in the compulsory military training course was the leading factor in the decision to ho'd the nation-wide conference.

CHANGE OF NAME DRAWS COMMENT

... ; the other half believes that a ... would be detrimental to the ... that have grown up around "P. C." and is strongly opposed to any change.

Among the alumni interviewed, opinion was that the present name is too indefinite, and causes the college not to be as well known as it should be in the South. Almost every one of the persons who made statements cited instances of Presbyterian college being mistaken for some other school of a similar name or for Presbyterian college in general.

Among those making statements were Dr. R. L. Cain, professor of education at the college and graduate of the ... of 1910; A. H. Hunter, '18, business manager at the college; A. W. Brice, '16, an ardent supporter of P. C. teams; L. S. McMillian, track and basketball coach; and Dr. T. J. Peake, former student, rabid supporter and self-appointed physician of the football team.

A few of the statements follow:

Dr. Peake: "Presbyterian college is entirely too long a name for a school. Besides, there are many other schools that go by the same name. I think the name should be changed; however, no change should be made without a great deal of mighty careful consideration. I would not like to see it called 'Plumer' college, but think 'Palmetto' college would be all right."

Mr. Hunter: "The college should be given a name. It is certainly old enough to be named and a change in name would give added individuality to the school."

Dr. Coe: "The name should be changed in order to give the college a more definite title. In its present form it is often confused with other colleges. A good name suggested to me is 'Plumer' college. This would give recognition to Dr. William Plumer Jacobs, the founder, and at the same time retain the present initials, 'P. C.'"

Coach McMillian: "You never heard of a 'Baptist' college or 'Methodist' college, so why call a school just 'Presbyterian' college? Another name would help distinguish our college, in the public eye, from other Presbyterian colleges."

"Pick" Cornwell: "I think the name should be changed to give the college a name to distinguish it from other Presbyterian colleges and from other schools with the same name."

S. W. Sumerel, class of 1906: "I have no objection to a change if a suitable name can be found."

Mr. Brice: "This is a move that should have been made a long time ago. The college needs a more distinctive name."

YOU would be astonished too, if you could see this machine that turns out 750 Chesterfields a minute . . . and every one as near perfect as cigarettes can be made.

But please bear this in mind. It is what happens before the tobacco goes into this machine that matters most. Rolling and packaging are important, but not nearly as important as the selection, blending and treatment of the tobacco.

That's why we keep telling you about the tobaccos used in Chesterfields. They're fine, mild, and pure tobaccos. We tell you about ageing and curing the tobaccos . . . about blending and cross-blending them . . . because they are things that count.

Chesterfields are milder. They taste better. Prove it for yourself . . . Just try a package.

HENRY AND BROWN TALK

Local Bank President and Dean of College Address 'Y' On Choosing of Vocation.

Continuing the vocational guidance programs, the Presbyterian college Y. M. C. A. had as speakers Thursday night H. D. Henry, president of the Commercial bank of Clinton, and M. W. Brown, dean of the college. Mr. Henry spoke on banking as a life work, and Prof. Brown spoke on teaching as a profession.

Mr. Henry told of the different kinds of banks and what is behind them. He also explained how these banks show a profit from their operations. After telling of the workings of a bank, he spoke about the requirements of a boy who wants to enter banking. Mr. Henry put honesty first, and high above everything else. Next came mathematical knowledge. Personality, of course, said Mr. Henry, enters largely into the question. Mr. Henry said a banker also must have the desire to serve, a characteristic likely to be overlooked. A bank, continued Mr. Henry, is certainly a community proposition, and one of its most outstanding purposes must be to serve the community in which it is located.

Dean Brown spoke on the characteristics a man must have to be a successful teacher, in what subjects teachers are needed, and the paying side of the proposition. Among other things, the Dean said that a man who

Red Dragons Give First 'Blow-Out'

The order of The Red Dragons held its first entertainment Friday night in Copeland hall, with Luke Chaney and his orchestra furnishing music for the occasion.

This social order has recently been established on the campus, and this, their first function, lays a good foundation for a prosperous future. The group is made up of 50 of the social leaders of the campus.

The dance began at 10 and ended at 3 o'clock. The crowd attending was quite large and claims that the occasion was one of the most pleasing ever held by an organization at the college.

R. O. T. C. GAMES HOLDING STAGE

Company "C" and Home Guards Emerge Winners In Opening Contests. Play-Off Tuesday.

"B" Company vs "C" Company

Following in the footsteps of the championship team from "C" company of last year, the 1932 edition of "pigskin toters'" from "C" broke loose in a mighty fourth-quarter drive and pushed over a touchdown on the team from "B" company and defeated the said team by a 7 to 0 score.

As the game drew to a close and neither team had been able to push over a marker, Referee Adams took 20 yards off the length of the field and the winners, after several attempts, finally shook "Flash" Plowden loose on the five-yard line and he went over for the winning score.

The entire backfield of "C" performed in great style, with Plowden leading the attack. During the first part of the game, Seagle broke loose several times for good gains. Wilson, the 180-pound fullback, got going in the second half and plowed through the line for consistent gains. Whenever the extra one or two yards was needed to make a first down, he always supplied the power. Wyman called signals all afternoon and did a good job of it.

Both teams tried several passes, but neither had much success. "B" did complete one pretty pass in the third quarter for a good gain. "C" just couldn't work their passes, due to the watchfulness of McDuffie and Patton in "B's" backfield.

For the losers, McDuffie played a whale of a game. He was the only one on that team that could gain ground consistently. He played a good heads-up game.

In punting the two teams stood about even. Patton got off some beauties, but they were equaled by Plowden, who kicked one out on "B's" one-foot line.

The lines of the two teams were about equal, with "C" having a slight edge on rushing. Underwood played a good game at right end.

P. C. Men At Winthrop Meet

Bothwell Graham and John Osman were the principal speakers at the regular meeting of the International Relations club held last Friday night. They used the same subjects which they later used at the sectional meeting at Winthrop Saturday.

Messrs. Graham and Osman, and Prof. W. L. Jones represented Presbyterian college at the mock meeting of the League of Nations held at Rock Hill Saturday afternoon. The occasion was a joint meeting of the I. R. C. chapters in North and South Carolina. Among the schools represented were Davidson, Queens-Chicora, Limestone, Columbia Bible college, Wofford, and several others, in additions to Presbyterian. Mr. Graham represented Denmark in the League, and Mr. Osman Switzerland.

The sessions were interesting and educational, and the local group is planning to attempt such a performance here in the near future.

The delegates were entertained at a banquet Saturday night by the Winthrop group.

LITTLE NAMED FROSH HEAD

First Year Men Elect Class Officers At Meeting Held Monday Afternoon.

At a called meeting of the freshmen last Monday afternoon class officers for the year were elected. Only a small number of the class were present, but the elections were quite heated and close.

F. G. Little was elected president. He attended Oglethorpe university in Atlanta last year, and is a member of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity. Richard Potter is to be second-in-command, filling the office of vice-president. He is a pledge of the Beta Kappa fraternity. J. Preston Charles of Greenville, was elected secretary-treasurer. He is a pledge of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity and a member of The Blue Stocking staff. As the literary men of the class, Thomas Estes and Colin Hudson were elected poet and historian, respectively. Estes is a pledge of Pi Kappa Phi, and Hudson of Kappa Alpha.

Elections were in charge of Bill Clark, president of the sophomore class.

McSween Attends New Orleans Meet

The thirty-seventh annual meeting of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States has been in session in New Orleans for the past week. Presbyterian college was represented by the president, Dr. John McSween.

Last year the meeting was held in Montgomery, Ala., and was attended by Dr. McSween, Dean Brown, and Mrs. Brown. This year the Dean found his work here too pressing to permit his attending.

Presbyterian college has been a member of the association since 1923, and still remains a member in good standing. Queens-Chicora college, in Charlotte, supported jointly by the Presbyterian Synod of South Carolina and several presbyteries in North Carolina, was admitted to the association at the meeting last week, bringing the total college membership up to 189. The secondary school membership is a little over 1100.

Call Is Given For Basketball Work

Coach Lonnie McMillian sent out his first call for varsity basketball material Tuesday and about 20 men answered his summons. Among them were several regulars from last year's team and several new faces from last year's great freshman team.

Along with Captain Copeland, there was "Geachy" Adams, Harry Nettles, N. G. Barron, seniors; Dossey McFadden and Ross, juniors; and Harry Bolick, Frank Waldrop, Paul Yearout, Ralph Holcomb, D. W. Boggs, and Bill Clark, sophomores.

The practice comes each night at seven o'clock. So far Coach McMillian has been getting the boys' eyes on the basket. The squad will get down to real work next week. The first game will be played after Christmas, but there probably will be several practice games before then.

SESSION BEGINS NEXT FRIDAY

Student Representatives Come For Three-Day Conference. Many Speakers On Program.

The regular fall meeting of the South Carolina Student Y. M. C. A. will be held on the Presbyterian college campus next week, from Friday through Sunday, Dec. 9-11.

Each year the State Student Cabinet of the Y. M. C. A. holds a meeting at some college in the state. This year it is P. C.'s turn to be host. Delegates from all colleges in the state are to be present. The purpose of the meeting is to get representatives of the various Y. M. C. A.s to gather and discuss plans for bigger and better "Y" programs. Many addresses will be made, and a full program is expected.

Speakers have been selected who can best present the subject of the field in which they are best informed. Claude Nelson, the regional secretary in Atlanta, who is in close touch with the organization will speak on "Connections with National and State Associations."

P. B. Holtzendorff, of Clemson, where there is one of the best organizations in the state, is to speak on the organization of a local association.

Theo Vaughn, state boys' club leader, will speak on "The Training and Use of Future Leaders."

Roy Cooper, also of Clemson, is especially helpful in getting up programs. He is a leader in his field, and his talk will be on "Plans for Programs of Work."

Dean F. M. Bradley, of Carolina, will make a talk on faculty coopera-

Swimming Lessons To Be Offered

Through the efforts of Coach W. A. Johnson an instructor in swimming and life saving will be here Dec. 15-17. Ramone S. Eton, representative of the American Red Cross, is being sent here at that time to give swimming instruction and life saving tests to all who desire to take them. This will be a great help to all boys who desire to learn to swim and also to those who want to swim better.

The classes will be arranged when Mr. Eton gets here. It will be the first time in several years that an instructor has been here and it is hoped that advantage will be taken of the opportunity presented.

Gamma Sigma Initiation Held

The regular bi-monthly meeting of Gamma Sigma, honorary journalistic fraternity, was held in Dr. Spencer's classroom Tuesday evening at 7:15, at which time six new members were initiated.

The initiates were those men who have proved their journalistic ability on the college publications. John Osman, Barney MacLean and J. E. Burns of the senior class, T. H. Wingate and T. L. Shinnick of the junior class, and L. A. McCall of the sophomore were the initiates.

Mr. Osman is editor of The College Gian, college magazine, and is also [illegible] every time we hear some great speaker or read [illegible] declaiming that what America needs [illegible] to teach her present-day leadership. In the pulpits of the churches the ministers are discussing leadership. In the schools and colleges it is an outstanding subject of discussion. Everybody realizes the need of some future citizens [illegible] or [illegible] at some of the crucial [illegible] of a leader.

Last, [illegible] the knowledge of a loving Savior, and constant obedience to His commands, no man can lead. A leader must be a moral person. A man of doubtful morals is forever out of the [illegible]. A person committing acts against public accord can never even request respect from his fellowmen, much less submission.

Backbone must needs be an essential part of a leader, for without a spine of iron, no man can expect to guide.

And so, with this in mind, we look at those in the world today who are supposed to be leaders. Are they leaders? Do they [illegible] up to standard, or are they only grasping something of a mass? Look at our politicians; do they have backbones, or are they afraid of the voice of the mass and the sight of silver. Look at our big [illegible]. Are they leaders?

But woe to the yellow cur who sneaks around gossiping and spreading trouble — the man who has no backbone, but has a crooked mind. Take stock of yourself. Are you doing your best, and leading, or are you merely walking in front of a crowd?

MORE ABOUT "THE NAME"

For years there has been a movement on foot to change the name of the College from the indefinite "Presbyterian College" to one more specific and outstanding. The movement has come to the front several times, but a suitable name has not been found. The Alumni Association is cooperating with the Student Body in a drive to select a suitable name, but still no great progress is being made.

We all want the name changed, and feel that it would be for the best interest of the college. Yet we fail in every attempt to find an appropriate title. Names are coming in by the dozens, some good, some bad; but all failing to please everybody.

Perhaps the best suggestion yet submitted is the name "Douglas," in honor of the late president of the institution. Because of his foresight, and untiring efforts, P. C. is what it is today—one of the best equipped small schools in the whole country.

Another name receiving great acclamation is "Coligny," in honor of the Protestant leader in France, and who started one of the first colonies in South Carolina. Other names that are receiving notice are: "Poinsett," "Pickens," "Palmetto," and "Pinckney."

If we are to have a new name, we must combine our interests and select one in the near future suitable to the Student Body, in order to submit it to the Board of Trustees at their February meeting.

BOOK REVIEW

By Frank Guess

"SONS"

"Sons," which comes as a sequel to Pearl S. Buck's Pulitzer prize novel, is definitely not just another Chinese book. Even as "The Good Earth," it is a clear interpretation of life in the Orient and brings about a better understanding between the East and the West. Though one's interest is likely to wane before the finish it is a good piece of work, and is excellent proof that Mrs. Buck is an outstanding author.

The story begins where "The Good Earth" stopped. Wang Lung, the farmer who had risen to wealth, dies in the earthen house where he was born, surrounded by the fields and the good earth that he loved, and his great family of the town house mourned accordingly. But there was only one who wept and that was Pear Blossom, his young concubine. The rest of the book is about the lives of his three sons, Wang the Eldest, or the Landlord, is fat and he loves his food, and his women. He holds an easy hand on his family, and they work him, and gradually he sells his land — his inheritance — for money. Wang the Merchant is crafty and full of guile and all that he does is done sparingly, fearing lest he waste something. With all his money, his family is thrifty and they work. Wang the Tiger is a fierce and silent man, and he lives sternly, and simply, and alone. After years of fighting and gaining men, he finds out that after all he is merely a little war lord. His son fails him and his ideals are dashed. In the end he is a solitary figure, broken. About these three is the story woven, and the lives of their families are spun out before us.

There has been much discussion as to whether "Sons" is as good as its predecessor. It certainly has more action, but it lacks the depth of feeling and the gripping scenes of "The Good Earth." The characterization is excellent, but whatever Mrs. Buck might have done, I do not believe she could have created a character more tragically pathetic, and demanding more sympathy than Wang's first wife, O-lan.

Mrs. Buck's style is convincing and genuinely Chinese. There is beauty in its simplicity that is almost Biblical in style. It is the essence of the Oriental and the philosophy of those shrewd people.

The book is a remarkable description of human life [illegible]pressively.

The rifle team began its practice [illegible]st Monday under the guidance of [illegible]ieut. A. D. Ferguson, captain of the [illegible]am. A large number of men reported for practice, and a successful season is expected.

More than 60 matches have been arranged for the rifle team this year, including several shoulder-to-shoulder [illegible]atches with nearby schools.

The military department is attempting to make the armory more attractive to the students. The latest additions to the decorations are a very [illegible]d rifle and a pistol. The rifle is a [illegible] S. Springfield, breech-loading, [illegible]odel 1863, calibre .50. It was made [illegible] the Springfield arsenal for the use [illegible] the Union troops in the Civil war. The flintlock pistol is about a 1760 [illegible]odel, calibre .70, and is a muzzle [illegible]ader. It probably saw service in the [illegible]evolutionary war.

Many In Favor Of Name "Coligny"

Perhaps the best liked name yet submitted for Presbyterian college is that of the great French Huguenot leader of the sixteenth century, Coligny. It has been greatly discussed and, after learning the correct pronunciation, most students have taken [illegible]liking to it. The name is pronounced ko-len-ye).

Coligny lived during the time of Charles IX, and his mother was the great Catherine de'Medici, of the Florentine family. He met his death in a very striking manner during the Massacre of St. Bartholomew's day, because of his Huguenot leadership. After being stabbed by swords and daggers, he was thrown from the window of his room, dragged to the river and thrown in, later fished out, chain[illegible]. He is considered a father of South Caro[illegible]ed to a gallows, and burned. [illegible]lina, because of his work in establish[illegible]. No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

P. C. Delegation In Greenville

A delegation from the "Y" and the glee club of Presbyterian college conducted the young people's meeting and the evening worship at the First Presbyterian church in Greenville Sunday.

Barnwell, Barron, Frampton, Neely and Parker represented the Y. M. C. A., and Johnson McCutchen, McDonald, Burns, and J. H. Montgomery made up a quartet which rendered several selections. L. A. McCall sang a solo.

Twenty-seven men from the glee club had been selected to make the trip, but on account of the illness of Dr. Huntley and others, the trip was postponed. The club had worked hard on the program which it was to give, and it was with regret that the trip was called off.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

FROM THE COLLEGE ADMINISTRATION

To many people Christmas is a time of selfish pleasure. In contrast to this spirit many Puritans thought that at Christmas there should be little pleasure of any kind and in 1644 the English Puritans passed a Parliamentary Act that Christmas was to be a day of fast and that all shops should be kept open for business. These Puritans thought it sinful to decorate homes with holly leaves and to have big dinners with plum pudding and mince pie. To the thoughtful modern, however, Christmas is an anniversary of goodwill, the memorial of One who found life joyous, taught contentment in sacrificial service, sanctioned feasts, and emphasized all that is finest in happy human associations.

We wish for all P. C. students the joy that should be yours at this season and hope that cheerful recollections of unbroken friendships, good fellowship, and unselfish service may keep the spirit of Christmas in your hearts throughout the year.

MARSHALL BROWN,
Dean.

FROM THE FRESHMAN CLASS

In behalf of the freshman class, I wish to extend to the president, faculty and student body of Presbyterian college heartiest good wishes for the Christmas season and the coming year.

May each of us, when these holidays are over, be willing to come back to Presbyterian and make the year 1933 one of the most successful in the history of the institution.

Ministerial Club Has Weiner Roast

Thursday night the Ministerial club had a weiner roast at Dunlap's spring. The school bus was used for transportation. Professor and Mrs. Grafton were the chaperones for the occasion.

Those present were: Misses Georgia Bee Blakely, Irene Dillard, Mary Black, Annie Lee Jackson, and Chalmers McCutchen, Freeman Parker, Claude Pepper, Cecil Lawter, Ernest Arnold, Norton Dendy, Charlie Carson, Van Arnold, Narron, and J. L. Wilson.

Varsity Squad Is Entertained

Football Men Recipients of Courtesies. Sims Elected Captain of Group for 1933.

The varsity football team was entertained twice last week. Both times the team was royally treated.

Tuesday evening Dr. and Mrs. McSween entertained with a buffet supper. At this occasion twenty-one of the varsity men were awarded stars and letters. The following received stars: Lindsay, Elliott, Ewing, Capt. Pinson, Copeland, Sims, Barrett, Howell, Adams, and Nettles. Those receiving letters were: Reeder, Mills, Perrin, Bolick, Boggs, Waldrep, Tolbert, Harvin, and Hamer. Covington received his letter as manager.

After the awarding of letters, the team elected Bob Sims captain for 1933. Sims is from Rock Hill. He played practically all year as a blocking back, and in the Erskine game

Track Candidates Begin To Warm Up

McMillian Puts Boys Through Paces Three Days a Week. Intensive Work In Spring.

At the first call for varsity track men Monday, a large number of candidates reported to Coach McMillian. Practices are to be held only three times a week until February 1, and daily from then on.

The material this year is probably the best in the history of the school, and the team will be out to regain honors it lost last year.

Coach "Lonnie Mac" says he has some promising sophomores in the hurdles, where the team was woefully weak last year, and that he is trying to find a man to replace Gillespie in the mile run.

He also states that the mile relay team will be faster this year. If the team proves to be as good as is expected, it may enter in the Penn Relays at Philadelphia..

Captain Osman, who should perform even more brilliantly than last year, states: "I think that Coach McMillian is one of the best coaches in the country, and with the prospects we have, we should enjoy a most successful season."

Clark, who shows promise in the 440 and 880, is having some trouble with the ankle he hurt playing football, but it is hoped it will be all right by spring.

The outstanding men in each event are:

100 and 220 yard dashes: Woods, Yearout and McElrath.

440 and 880 yard runs: B. Graham, Clark and Osman.

COMPANY "C" WINS SERIES

Takes Deciding Game From the Home Guards, 6 to 0, In Annual R. O. T. C. Contests.

The annual Army and Home Guard championship football game proved that even an underdog can bite. The game was played Tuesday between Company "C" and the Home Guards, surviving teams in the R. O. T. C. football series staged annually by the military deparment of Presbyterian college. Company "C" won, 6-0.

The much touted Home Guards were played all over the field by the skilful quarterbacking of Plowden and the shiftiness of Seagle.

The first half was the high spot of the game. Plowden lost 10 yards on the first play after the kick-off but quickly regained it by tossing a 20-yard pass to Wilson, the fullback. The long, tall boy of "barber shop" fame stretched his massive arms toward the sky in an attempt to lay his dainty hands upon the whistling animal-hide, but to no avail. It went out of the end zone. After several plays by both teams, the "Lindseyites" punted to the Army's 40-yard line. "Lightning" Seagle got his hands on the ball and went for 55 yards before any one touched him. If he had not been riding a "Camel" he would have been going yet. But some people will indulge. The "cute little round boy," so some one told me, went off tackle for the score. The half ended at this point.

Among the celebrities at this classic were: Captain Wysor, head of the "fighting boys"; "Chip" Grafton, the

Frosh Superlative Contest Is Held

The freshman staff of The Blue Stocking held a superlative contest for the members of the freshman class last Thursday, and in that way learned just who is who in the class. Some of the results were very close, and some quite startling. A few were without any close opponents. The race for "ye ladies man" was wild, 21 mencing each other for this unique honor. Phil Adams' handsome countenance mopped up in the race for the "best looking," no face comparing. Edwin Andrews walked away with the "most studious," and Johnson led in the "most promising" and the "best journalist." The race for the "most courteous" was perhaps the most complex, but Belk finally emerged in the lead, with Little, Norment and Hudson coming in to tie for second place.

A complete list of the 18 positions and their results follow:

Hostess: First, P. M. Tiller; second, Otis Morgan and Neil Crymes.

Best looking: Phil Adams.

Most popular: First, Frank Little; second, Ralph Belk.

Most promising: Cliff Johnson.

Best all-round: First, Rex Wil-

WHY CHANGE IT?

There has been a good deal of discussion of late about changing the name of the College. It may seem out of place for a Freshman, a member of the institution for a scant two months, to speak, but there are a few things that should be said.

"P. C." has come to mean something in this state and to the fellows of this institution. If the move to change the name is successful P. C. will be plunged back into obscurity from which it will be a long hard fight, under its new name, to achieve the reputation that the college now holds as Presbyterian. All the P. C. spirit and traditions could not just be changed over to the newly named college. Such things cannot be transferred; they have to grow—and their growth is a matter of long years of alternate hopes and fears, of victories and defeats, and a long succession of classes and men giving their best part to raise their college to the place they think it should occupy.

A different name would cast an air of strangeness, of unfamiliarity over the campus. Regardless of what name is given, this will always be "P. C." to me, and it seems like usurping an old and venerable thing to attempt to bring in a new era by adding a new name. P. C. has stood the test of the years; its campus is worn and beaten by the feet of many classes; and the spirits of other generations brood over the place—why, then, attempt to put old wine in new bottles?

OUR GOAL IN '33

The old year is dying and in its place is coming another which bears the name '33. We wonder what this new member will be like. Man can not tell even though some of the philosophers and men with master minds are trying to advance solutions for the many problems which confront our nation today. They are no nearer a solution than when they started. People are heading and pondering over problems which seemingly can not be remedied by human means alone.

Now we come to the entrance of '33. Let everybody be on his feet and greet him with lusty shouts and cheers. He, in return for our warmth and cordiality, will give to each of us a clean, snow-white sheet of paper, on which is to be kept a record of our lives for the year of '33. Now comes the big chance which we have been looking forward to. During the year '32 we have hoped without ceasing for better days to come. The days are soon to be here for us, and the fact of whether they are better or worse rests entirely on our own shoulders.

Our new sheets of paper are pure white. They have no ugly scars and black splotches on them to mar their cleanliness and purity. If deeds of goodness and kindness rule our lives during '33 we will still have a clean, unsoiled sheet to hand to '34 when he comes to take the place of '33.

So let us resolve more than ever to make '33 a better year, both for our own selves and the other fellow. First of all, be honest—honest in the class room and honest in our daily lives. Man judges man by his fairness in business and by his honesty in daily life more than any other way. But especially does the writer lay stress on honesty in the class room. Stop for a moment, fellows, and think about the unfairness of a dishonest exam. The fellow who does the riding is cheating his own good name as well as the goodness of the other fellow. Many say that there is no particular wrong in cheating if you don't get caught. The writer disagrees with these fellows, public opinion disagrees, and God disagrees. Above all should we try to please Him. He has bought us with a terrible price—a price which none other would dare pay for lowly, sinful man, such as we are in comparison with God. He shows very clearly that He loves us. Should we not at least try to return a small portion of this love in doing our best to be honest and faithful in our daily lives?

So, fellows, let's keep the sheet cleaner by far than we have in '32, and strive to show '33 what a clean, upright, straightforward bunch we are.

Now we leave you with your thoughts, but before we go may we suggest this one thought to you: Above all things, do not resolve to have a cleaner sheet than before if you are not going to keep the resolution. In the opinion of the writer, a broken resolution is worse than none at all.

—J. E. R.

AM I THE SAME FELLOW AT HOME AND AT SCHOOL?

Let us as new men at this institution of learning pause a moment and ask of our individual selves this question: Are we the same here as we were under the protecting roof of home? Do we strive to uphold the high ideals and standards that our parents and sweethearts have upheld as the goal toward which we should strive. Only too often we humans go astray when we get out from under the roof of the old home. We seem to think as long as our mothers are not aware of the things we do that they are O. K. But not so—no matter where we are, no matter what we are doing, God is always looking down on us. From Him is nothing hidden.

Again let us consider the question: Am I the same here and at home? At home no doubt we were active in the church affairs and took part in the young people's programs. Now we do not have the minister and his wife, our parents and friends to be continually asking us to take parts which have been assigned to us. Here, we are on our own honor, and often the writer wonders if we remember our honor when Sunday comes.

But this is our own personal question—a question which each man should weigh in his own mind and heart. Are we A-1 men when placed on our honor? Are we fulfilling the desires and hopes of mother as she works and prays for us back yonder at home? Are we?—yes or no!

—J. E. R.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Any one who has ever thought very much about the matter will readily admit that there is a peculiar and unusual feeling within mortal minds during the Christmas season, which is not present at any other time of the year. We can't explain the cause of this feeling; but somehow the very atmosphere seems to contain an element which it never has at any other time. Even the dumb animals seem to know that something is out of the ordinary. At this time more than at any other men have something in common—the frame of mind. Young and old, weak and strong, all lay aside their loads of care and trouble and try to be happy. Also men's thoughts seem to turn to their fellowmen more than ever during this season. If a man ever has a kind thought or if he ever does a kind deed he will show it at this time. Public welfare societies, churches and other organizations of their kind try to lighten the load of their less fortunate fellowmen and try to give them a touch of this spirit which they would not enjoy otherwise. Also, men try to draw their friends just a little nearer to them than they have been and try to make themselves be a little dearer to their friends than they have ever been before.

But what causes these unusual feelings to come in mortal minds. There are possibly different factors which cause them to be present in different individuals; but what are the factors which prompt them in you? Is it the fact that at this time you can leave off your studies, return home and again be with those who are near and dear to you? Is it because your friendships seem to be a little warmer than they have been in the past? Is it because you join your friends in telling those well-known and inspiring tales of some previous Christmas? Are your spirits brightened by the singing of those sacred carols which are dear to us all? Are these outward joys the factors which ensourage you to have this unusual feeling at Christmas time?

Or are you inspired because you are celebrating the birth of that One whose presence is so necessary in your life, and do you have these indefinable feelings because you want to respect and honor Him? Do you do kind deeds and think kind thoughts during this season because He was the One who originated the custom and because He was the One who taught us to do likewise? If you do have this remarkable spirit governed by a true love and by a true respect for your Maker then, friend, you have caught the true meaning of Christmas. But if you only have those outward evidences of that spirit, you have failed miserably.

So, fellow students, this Christmas when we become aware that our minds and beings are governed by this unusual feeling, let's be sure that it has the proper thing behind it and rest assured that we will reap greater benefits from this season than we have ever reaped from any previous one.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

litor, The Blue Stocking:

I received my copy of the Alumni ue of The Blue Stocking and wish thank you most sincerely for sendg it to me. It was most enjoyable d revived many precious memories me.

I must say that I was particularly erested in the arguments and statents pro and con the proposal for a ange of name for the College. It s with even greater interest that I ssed a decided sentiment in favor a change. It was during my own lege career that the proposal was st seriously made under the sponship of that redoubtable personty, Louis W. Jackson, who was n editor of The Blue Stocking. And was under this momentum that the me was changed from "Presbyte-n College of South Carolina" to t "Presbyterian College." Of course s was an improvement, but it was t carried far enough. Why not leave t the "Presbyterian" altogether and e the school a real name? It deves it. There is no denying that llowed associations have grown up und the school under the present me, but would the sweet odor of se traditions vanish if the school re given a name instead of a deiption such as the present designtion? Of course not!

But I will not carry the argument y further. It seems to me that there s been too much talk and too little structive thinking and action alady. I sincerely believe that any one o has the interest of the College heart will agree that the College ffers under its present name, from sychological viewpoint if in no oth- way. As fas as getting used to a w name is concerned, who remembers vividly the days when Duke Unisity was just plain Trinity Colge?

Now for a name. It seems to me at the proposals and suggestions ade up to date are at best weak and tirely unsatisfactory.

With all due respect to Dr. Jacobs, seems to me at best a left-handed mpliment to a man to take his midname and pin it to his progeny. ere is no earthly reason why it ould be named Poinsett College, and my mind, Palmetto College is posiely pusillanimous.

Here is my offering. I think the a of retaining the initials "P. C." the expense of a failure to get a od name should be discarded. And ce the school is supposed to be unded on Christian principles I ink it would not be amiss to name for the great apostle who died in artyrdom for the sake of his faith, amely, St. Paul. So why not call our loved Alma Mater the College of . Paul, or perhaps St. Paul's Colze? I believe this would be an emintly suitable name and would solve delicate and vexing problem. Name after a great, strong, martyred ristian. There's no prudishness out that idea.

LOUIS REMBERT WILLIAMSON.

ditor, The Blue Stocking:

For the past ten years at regular curring intervals we have heard rangling suggestions to change the ame of our institution. This time it ems that the majority favors a ange. There have been many excuses advanced as to why the name Presbyterian College" is unsuitable, ut I, for one, have not yet heard a ngle real reason.

There are three common objections our present name. Some say it is distinct, others that no other deominational institutions bear their hurch names, and still others that ersons in remote localities ask, on earing the words "Presbyterian Colge, "What is that?" And in a recent lue Stocking editorial one over-enhusiastic literatus went so far as to xclaim: "How far would Furman, Wofford, and the rest have gotten nd they had church names?" I hould think it difficult to attempt to rove that they, in spite of their adanced years, have little to compare with the position enjoyed by Presbyerian College.

Our name is distinct enough, if not to an extreme, in that it seems to be the one and only Presbyterian College. It is true that we are Presbyterian supported, teach Presbyterian principles, so why make any bones about a Presbyterian name?

There are other institutions bearing denominational titles. There is famed Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, Southwestern Presbyterian University, Catholic College and scores of others.

In spite of the fact that persons in remotely located communities do not know at first thought to just what Presbyterian College we belong, we frequently hear assertions that in practically every community there is some one who has heard of Presbyterian college. The writer has lived in thirteen states, and dwelt in twenty-six towns, but has yet to meet total strangers to our school. In every town there is some one who has heard of some one else, who knew somebody else, who had a brother who went there. It might be well to retain our present name, if for no other reason than to cause the uninformed to make inquiries as to the nature of the college.

Three names have been strongly suggested, Plumer, Poinsette, and Palmetto. What significance does Plumer have? It is the middle name of the founder, but who knows it? There is little more reason for calling Presbyterian College "Plumer College" than for naming Erskine College "Ebenezer College" in honor of Ebenezer Erskine. The surname would be preferable, but hardly suitable for obvious reasons. Poinsette has no significance in the history of the institution. It is only a name in so far as we are concerned. Palmetto restricts the patronage of the college to South Carolina, when not many years past the name was changed from Presbyterian College of South Carolina to Presbyterian College because the school was under control of the Synods of both South Carolina and Georgia. Furthermore, "Palmetto" reminds us just a little of an insurance company or meat packing house.

One paramount reason in the selection of the three names was a desire to retain the letter "P" in the initials of the institution. If the prestige builded around the letters "P C" is worthy of consideration, then why is it necessary to chnage the name at all?

There are Newberrys, Woffords, Erskines, Ginsbergs, and Swazis, but there is only one Presbyterian College; an unusual college with an unusual name.

If, however, those in the know will accept no other solution and the name is to be changed, there can be but one real reason and that to do homage to the late great Davison McDowell Douglas, who, in spite of many criticisms, has really accomplished more toward the building of one of South Carolina's foremost educational institutions than any other one person. And what could be more suggestive of Scotch Calvinism than the name "Douglas."

THE BLUE STOCKING SUSPENDS DURING THE HOLIDAYS

This will be the last issue of The Blue Stocking printed until after the holidays, when publication will be resumed with the opening of college the first week in January.

WHY CHANGE IT?

There has been a good deal of discussion of late about changing the name of the College. It may seem out of place for a Freshman, a member of the institution for a scant two months, to speak, but there are a few things that should be said.

"P. C." has come to mean something in this state and to the fellows of this institution. If the move to change the name is successful P. C. will be plunged back into obscurity from which it will be a long hard fight, under its new name, to achieve the reputation that the college now holds as Presbyterian. All the P. C. spirit and traditions could not just be changed over to the newly named college. Such things cannot be transferred; they have to grow and their growth is a matter of long years of alternate hopes and fears, of victories and defeats, and a long succession of classes and men giving their best part to raise their college to the place they think it should occupy.

A different name would cast an air of strangeness, of unfamiliarity over the campus. Regardless of what name is given, this will always be "P. C." to me, and it seems like usurping an old and venerable thing to attempt to bring in a new era by adding a new name. P. C. has stood the test of the years; its campus is worn and beaten by the feet of many classes; and the spirits of other generations brood over the place—why, then, attempt to put old wine in new bottles?

OUR GOAL IN '33

The old year is dying and in its place is coming another which bears the name '33. We wonder what this new member will be like. Man can not tell even though some of the philosophers and men with master minds are trying to advance solutions for the many problems which confront our nation today. They are no nearer a solution than when they started. People are brooding and pondering over situations which seemingly can not be remedied by human means alone.

Now we come to the entrance of '33. Let everybody be on his feet and greet him with lusty shouts and cheers. He, in return for our warmth and cordiality, will give to each of us a clean, snow-white sheet of paper, on which is to be kept a record of our lives for the year of '33. Now comes the big chance which we have been looking forward to. During the year '32 we have hoped without ceasing for better days to come. The days are soon to be here for us, and the fact of whether they are better or worse rests entirely on our own shoulders.

Our new sheets of paper are pure white. They have no ugly scars and black splotches on them to mar their cleanliness and purity. If deeds of goodness and kindness rule our lives during '33 we will still have a clean, unsoiled sheet to hand to '34 when he comes to take the place of '33.

So let us resolve more than ever to make '33 a better year, both for our own selves and the other fellow. First of all, be honest—honest in the class room and honest in our daily lives. Man judges man by his fairness in business and by his honesty in daily life more than any other way. But especially does the writer lay stress on honesty in the class room. Stop for a moment, fellows, and think about the unfairness of a dishonest exam. The fellow who does the riding is cheating his own good name as well as the goodness of the other fellow. Many say that there is no particular wrong in cheating if you don't get caught. The writer disagrees with these fellows, public opinion disagrees, and God disagrees. Above all should we try to please Him. He has bought us with a terrible price—a price which none other would dare pay for lowly, sinful man, such as we are in comparison with God. He shows very clearly that He loves us. Should we not at least try to return a small portion of this love in doing our best to be honest and faithful in our daily lives?

So, fellows, let's keep the sheet cleaner by far than we have in '32, and strive to show '33 what a clean, upright, straightforward bunch we are.

Now we leave you with your thoughts, but before we go may we suggest this one thought to you: Above all things, do not resolve to have a cleaner sheet than before if you are not going to keep the resolution. In the opinion of the writer, a broken resolution is worse than none at all.

—J. F. R.

AM I THE SAME FELLOW AT HOME AND AT SCHOOL?

Let us as new men at this institution of learning pause a moment and ask of our individual selves this question: Are we the same here as we were under the protecting roof of home? Do we strive to uphold the high ideals and standards that our parents and sweethearts have upheld as the goal toward which we should strive. Only too often we humans go astray when we get out from under the roof of the old home. We seem to think as long as our mothers are not aware of the things we do that they are O. K. But not so—no matter where we are, no matter what we are doing, God is always looking down on us. From Him is nothing hidden.

Again let us consider the question: Am I the same here and at home? At home no doubt we were active in the church affairs and took part in the young people's programs. Now we do not have the minister and his wife, our parents and friends to be continually asking us to take parts which have been assigned to us. Here, we are on our own honor, and often the writer wonders if we remember our honor when Sunday comes.

But this is our own personal question—a question which each man should weigh in his own mind and heart. Are we A-1 men when placed on our honor? Are we fulfilling the desires and hopes of mother as she works and prays for us back yonder at home? Are we?—yes or no!

—J. F. R.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Any one who has ever thought very much about the matter will readily admit that there is a peculiar and unusual feeling within mortal minds during the Christmas season, which is not present at any other time of the year. We can't explain the cause of this feeling; but somehow the very atmosphere seems to contain an element which it never has at any other time. Even the dumb animals seem to know that something is out of the ordinary. At this time more than at any other men have something in common—the frame of mind. Young and old, weak and strong, all lay aside their loads of care and trouble and try to be happy. Also men's thoughts seem to turn to their fellowmen more than ever during this season. If a man ever has a kind thought or if he ever does a kind deed he will show it at this time. Public welfare societies, churches and other organizations of their kind try to lighten the load of their less fortunate fellowmen and try to give them a touch of this spirit which they would not enjoy otherwise. Also, men try to draw their friends just a little nearer to them than they have been and try to make themselves be a little dearer to their friends than they have ever been before.

But what causes these unusual feelings to come in mortal minds. There are possibly different factors which cause them to be present in different individuals; but what are the factors which prompt them in you? Is it the fact that at this time you can leave off your studies, return home and again be with those who are near and dear to you? Is it because your friendships seem to be a little warmer than they have been in the past? Is it because you join your friends in telling those well-known and inspiring tales of some previous Christmas? Are your spirits brightened by the singing of those sacred carols which are dear to us all? Are these outward joys the factors which ensourage you to have this unusual feeling at Christmas time?

Or are you inspired because you are celebrating the birth of that One whose presence is so necessary in your life, and do you have these indefinable feelings because you want to respect and honor Him? Do you do kind deeds and think kind thoughts during this season because He was the One who originated the custom and because He was the One who taught us to do likewise? If you do have this remarkable spirit governed by a true love and by a true respect for your Maker then, friend, you have caught the true meaning of Christmas. But if you only have those outward evidences of that spirit, you have failed miserably.

So, fellow students, this Christmas when we become aware that our minds and beings are governed by this unusual feeling, let's be sure that it has the proper thing behind it and rest assured that we will reap greater benefits from this season than we have ever reaped from any previous one.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ditor, The Blue Stocking:

I received my copy of the Alumni ue of The Blue Stocking and wish thank you most sincerely for sendg it to me. It was most enjoyable d revived many precious memories me.

I must say that I was particularly erested in the arguments and stateits pro and con the proposal for a ange of name for the College. It s with even greater interest that I ised a decided sentiment in favor a change. It was during my own lege career that the proposal was st seriously made under the sponship of that redoubtable personty, Louis W. Jackson, who was n editor of The Blue Stocking. And was under this momentum that the me was changed from "Presbyte-n College of South Carolina" to t "Presbyterian College." Of course s was an improvement, but it was t carried far enough. Why not leave t the "Presbyterian" altogether and e the school a real name? It deves it. There is no denying that llowed associations have grown up und the school under the present me, but would the sweet odor of ese traditions vanish if the school re given a name instead of a deiption such as the present designtion? Of course not!

But I will not carry the argument y further. It seems to me that there s been too much talk and too little nstructive thinking and action alady. I sincerely believe that any one o has the interest of the College heart will agree that the College ffers under its present name, from sychological viewpoint if in no oth- way. As fas as getting used to a w name is concerned, who remembrs vividly the days when Duke Uniersity was just plain Trinity Colge?

Now for a name. It seems to me at the proposals and suggestions ade up to date are at best weak and tirely unsatisfactory.

With all due respect to Dr. Jacobs, seems to me at best a left-handed mpliment to a man to take his mide name and pin it to his progeny. here is no earthly reason why it ould be named Poinsett College, and my mind, Palmetto College is positely pusillanimous.

Here is my offering. I think the a of retaining the initials "P. C." the expense of a failure to get a od name should be discarded. And ce the school is supposed to be unded on Christian principles I ink it would not be amiss to name for the great apostle who died in artyrdom for the sake of his faith. amely, St. Paul. So why not call our loved Alma Mater the College of . Paul, or perhaps St. Paul's College? I believe this would be an emintly suitable name and would solve delicate and vexing problem. Name after a great, strong, martyred ristian. There's no prudishness out that idea.

ditor, The Blue Stocking:

For the past ten years at regular ecurring intervals we have heard rangling suggestions to change the ame of our institution. This time it ems that the majority favors a ange. There have been many excuss advanced as to why the name Presbyterian College" is unsuitable, ut I, for one, have not yet heard a ngle real reason.

There are three common objections our present name. Some say it is distinct, others that no other deominational institutions bear their hurch names, and still others that ersons in remote localities ask, on earing the words "Presbyterian Colge, "What is that?" And in a recent lue Stocking editorial one over-enhusiastic literatus went so far as to xclaim: "How far would Furman, Wofford, and the rest have gotten ad they had church names?" I hould think it difficult to attempt to rove that they, in spite of their adanced years, have little to compare with the position enjoyed by Presbyerian College.

Our name is distinct enough, if not to an extreme, in that it seems to be the one and only Presbyterian College. It is true that we are Presbyterian supported, teach Presbyterian principles, so why make any bones about a Presbyterian name?

There are other institutions bearing denominational titles. There is famed Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, Southwestern Presbyterian University, Catholic College and scores of others.

In spite of the fact that persons in remotely located communities do not know at first thought to just what Presbyterian College we belong, we frequently hear assertions that in practically every community there is some one who has heard of Presbyterian college. The writer has lived in thirteen states, and dwelt in twenty-six towns, but has yet to meet total strangers to our school. In every town there is some one who has heard of some one else, who knew somebody else, who had a brother who went there. It might be well to retain our present name, if for no other reason than to cause the uninformed to make inquiries as to the nature of the college.

Three names have been strongly suggested, Plumer, Poinsette, and Palmetto. What significance does Plumer have? It is the middle name of the founder, but who knows it? There is little more reason for calling Presbyterian College "Plumer College" than for naming Erskine College "Ebenezer College" in honor of Ebenezer Erskine. The surname would be preferable, but hardly suitable for obvious reasons. Poinsette has no significance in the history of the institution. It is only a name in so far as we are concerned. Palmetto restricts the patronage of the college to South Carolina, when not many years past the name was changed from Presbyterian College of South Carolina to Presbyterian College because the school was under control of the Synods of both South Carolina and Georgia. Furthermore, "Palmetto" reminds us just a little of an insurance company or meat packing house.

One paramount reason in the selection of the three names was a desire to retain the letter "P" in the initials of the institution. If the prestige builded around the letters "P C" is worthy of consideration, then why is it necessary to chnage the name at all?

There are Newberrys, Woffords, Erskines, Ginsbergs, and Swazis, but there is only one Presbyterian College; an unusual college with an unusual name.

If, however, those in the know will accept no other solution and the name is to be changed, there can be but one real reason, and that to do homage to the late great Davison McDowell Douglas, who, in spite of many criticisms, has really accomplished more toward the building of one of South Carolina's foremost educational institutions than any other one person. And what could be more suggestive of Scotch Calvinism than the name "Douglas."

We understand that a sweet young thing called up the Jacobs' home the other day and wanted to know if Barney MacLean needed anything around his neck.

And you say that Freeman Parker got his eye blacked in the gym? It is told that he drifts in from a week-end and hears his little roomie has partaken of some wild moose milk and was so affected that he had to be put to bed and tied there. Freeman, heartily indignant, violently wakes him in the wee hours to explain the error of his ways. And John Brown if—! Well, what would you have done if you had been his room-mate?

We wonder why Turk Osman waits till Columbia college is out to publish the first Collegian?

The ministerial social was quite an affair Thursday night (so we hear). Dr. Pepper had two dates, one going and one coming. Besides that, Cecil Lawter got his date home and then "just couldn't say good-by." Ask him what time he left.

Have you heard? Norton Dendy talks in his sleep. He was heard passionately crying, "Evelyn, Evelyn!"

All-Intramural Football Team

After much careful consideration, the sports editor and assistants have chosen the following men for the all-intramural team. There is probably a great difference of opinion as to who really were the best men for each position. Among the staff itself there was much difference of opinion and in several cases the man who holds a position on this team edged out another man by a narrow margin. In spite of whatever discussion there might be, the following is the staff's selection:

L. E.—Copeland	Co. "A"
L. T.—Lowry	Co. "C"
L. G.—Rhodes	Co. "C"
C—Kemp	Home Guards
R. G.—Wyman	Co. "C"

Q. B.—C. Plowden	Co. "C"
H. B.—Seagle	Co. "C"
H. B.—Adams	Co. "A"

With the same careful consideration the staff chose the following second team:

A. L. T. Planning Christmas Social

Iota chapter of Alpha Lambda Tau is planning a Christmas social on December 16th, at their fraternity rooms uptown. The social committee, composed of W. H. Hughley, John Francis Johnston, H. M. Wilson, Jr., and H. W. Calvert, is planning to capture the Christmas spirit in the last social before going home. The rooms will be decorated with wreaths and holly, a Christmas tree will be in one corner, and over the door will be that without which no Christmas party could ever be a success,—the mistletoe!

Black Directs Frosh 'Y' Work

The executive committee of the college Y. M. C. A. several weeks ago named Arthur Black director of freshman "Y" work. Black is a graduate student, having finished at Clemson last year. However, before going to the Tigers he was a Blue Stocking. He was president of the Clemson Y. M. C. A. his senior year.

Freshmen who have showed an interest in the work of the Y. M. C. A. have been interviewed. Ten men have been selected by the executive committee for this cabinet. In drawing up the plans for freshman work several requirements have been made that the men selected must meet before they can be placed. The definite work of this cabinet with the names of the members will be announced in the first issue of The Blue Stocking in 1933.

Eichelbergers Announce Birth

At the banquet in the college dining room, Claud Nelson was the speaker, with the subject "The Jubilee of the Y."

Sunday morning Barney MacLean conducted the devotional, and J. M. Leland, secretary of the Citadel "Y," gave a talk on "Personal Religion." The conference closed with an inspirational address by Dr. F. D. Jones on "The Student's God."

Sunday afternoon at 1:15 the delegates from Clemson put on a program in the auditorium. There were several inspirational quartet selections and also several interesting talks.

Everybody could see, by now, that Abrams, of the Home Guards, was being covered like a tent. He did get to the line of scrimmage once, though.

The only high spots in the second half were furnished by "Powerhouse" Plowden and "Snake Hips" Seagle. "Snake Hips couldn't get going in this period. Outside of several 10 to 20 yard runs from scrimmage and two or three punts that he brought back for an average of about 25 yards he didn't do much in the second half.

The game ended with "Powerhouse" "just before" giving the "zeppelin" to "Snake Hips" for the final 90 yard run. (Trying to pull a Higbe on the crowd).

The stars of the Home Guards were the powerful but handsome Abrams, his fullback, the ever-driving Frampton, and the main powerhouse of the line, "Peter Pund" Kemp, the campus sweetheart.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

In the last of the weekly programs on vocational guidance, H. H. Ferguson, Norton Dendy, and W. R. Frampton took part, giving a resume of the programs.

Ferguson read Bryant's "To a Waterfowl" to show, as the poet expressed it, how the Power that guides even a tiny, lonely bird on its way through the air can direct each of us in our journey of life.

Dendy summed up the subject of vocational guidance and distributed booklets on that line to all who were interested.

Frampton, who had presided at all the meetings during the month, told from his personal experience how much it meant to be in the right life work.

A council meeting was held afterward to perfect plans for the South Carolina Student Y. M. C. A.

an extensive experience in water safety work. While a life guard and aquatic director at various resorts on the Atlantic seaboard from the Chesapeake to Miami, he looked after the safety of swimmers and performed many rescues under hazardous conditions. He has supervised camps and training schools in both first aid and life-saving, and he was for some time recreation director of the city of Alexandria, Va. His first aid work in industries and municipal fire and police departments in the South has been equally successful.

A native of Virginia, where he received an education supplemented with extension courses in several Southern institutions, he is well known throughout the South. He has built up a large following in water safety schools, technical institutions, colleges, and army training camps.

The first aid and life-saving department of the Red Cross, for whom Mr. Eaton is working, is doing work throughout the United States. There are more than 60,000 swimmers annually who pass the exacting tests and are entitled to wear the Red Cross life-saving insignia. Red Cross instruction is given through approximately 7,000 local leaders who are called "examiners." These "examiners" have passed the tests given by field representatives like Mr. Eaton and are then eligible to examine for the life-saving tests.

There are several men on the campus who have at some time been eligible for the examiner's tests and failed to take them. This will be an excellent opportunity for these men to pass the tests.

"ALL FOR P. C." P. C. FOR ALL"

VOLUME XIV PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE, CLINTON, S. C., JANUARY 14, 1933 NUMBER 13

DEBATE PLANS ARE DISCUSSED

Neely and Abrams Appointed To Make Arrangements for Season. Interest Is Manifested.

At a called meeting Monday the members and prospective members of Kappa Delta, national honorary forensic fraternity, discussed plans for the year in debating.

Dr. Kennedy appointed J. T. Neely and S. L. Abrams to have charge of the material and W. M. Ransom to head the program committee.

Mr. Neely is president of the local (P. C. Beta) chapter, and has been outstanding in forensic work since his freshman year. Last year he was elected the best orator and debater in the student body superlative contest, and won the the latter honor again this year. Mr. Abrams represented P. C. at the State Oratorical contest last year, and was the winner of the Alumni orator's' medal given here last spring. He also won the declaimers' medal in his freshman year, and was recently voted the best orator now at Presbyterian college.

Besides these two outstanding leaders in this field other members of Pi Kappa Delta, and last year's varsity debating team are, Barney MacLean, W. M. Ransom, and N. G. Barron. Several sophomores and other new candidates for the team have shown interest in the work, and the prospects are good for a successful year. All who are interested are urged to try out for the team.

Enrollment At P. C. Holds Up Well

More students are now enrolled at P. C. than at any other time in the history of the school except last year, according to the records of Mrs. M. H. Brown, registrar. The 278 now on the roll are only nine short of the attendance at this time last year.

This, together with the fact that very few have dropped out, is unusually favorable in view of the sharply-felt pinch of depression.

The student body has increased despite the hard times. The best enrollment for an entire year prior to 1931-32 was 276, but has been topped by the 287 registered so far this year and the 300 present last year altogether.

Few schools have fared nearly so well as P. C. in terms of enrollment the past two years.

Publications Body Holds Meeting

At a called meeting of the Board of Publications after dinner last Monday it was decided that the contracts for the printing of The Blue Stocking should in the future run from editor to editor instead of from school year to school year. In this way a new editor may deal with a different company if he so desires.

The board also moved that The Blue Stocking staff stick to the custom of the past and nominate only one man for each position on the new staff. The staff had nominated two men for each position at a called meeting Monday morning. This movement of the board puts the staff's stamp of approval on only one man for each office. B. W. Covington, chairman of the board, presided.

Monday night after supper The Blue Stocking staff held a meeting to decide upon its nominees for the coming year. The following men were named by ballot as the nominee for the paper for 1933:

Editor, Walker Combs, Jr.
Business manager, Joe Haney.
Managing editor, L. A. McCall.

All three of these men have been active in the work since coming to the paper for three years and during the past year has been managing editor. He is a member of Gamma Sigma honorary journalistic fraternity, and is active in other campus organizations.

Joe Haney also has been a member of the staff for three years. For the

MUSICIANS ARE HARD AT WORK

Presbyterian Glee Club and Orchestra Plan For Programs To Be Given At Early Date.

The Presbyterian college glee club and orchestra are preparing a program to be given in several cities of North and South Carolina in the near future. These two organizations have been practicing every night of the past week in an effort to get things in order.

On Friday, February 3, they will leave for Bennettsville to give an appearance that night. Saturday morning they will go to Presbyterian Junior college, Maxton, N. C., for a performance that night. Sunday morning the club will appear at the First Presbyterian church in Florence, S. C. Sunday night they will give a program at the Presbyterian church in Sumter. This appearance will conclude the trip and the group will return to the college Sunday night.

Quite a few new selections are being worked on by the glee club. Among these are, "Allah's Holiday," "Calvary," "O, Carlina," and "The Winter song." The orchestra has just received many of the newest popular songs and is working hard to have them perfected by the first of February.

Several other trips to other parts of South Carolina and Georgia are being planned for later in the year.

"Young Field" Is Named By Students

At chapel last Monday morning the student body passed a resolution that the college practice field be named "Young Field." The matter will be brought up before the board of trustees at its next meeting for final consideration.

The name "Young Field" was recommended because John T. Young and his brother, the late N. Reese Young, both prominent citizens of Clinton, gave the land for the field. Mr. Young and his brother are members of a prominent old Clinton family whose name is closely associated with the history of Presbyterian college. The grandfather of the two brothers, Newton Young, together with J. W. Copeland, Sr., grandfather of J. B. Copeland, gave the original 16 acres of college property.

The student body feels that this action is a fitting tribute to the generosity of the Young brothers. The practice field was badly needed and is serving a useful purpose in P. C. athletics.

BASKETBALL IN FULL SWING

Presbyterian Team Shows Improvement In Furman Game After Defeat By Wofford.

Presbyterian's basketeers, after a setback in their first encounter at the hands of Wofford, showed vastly improved form in Thursday night's game against Furman, and won the help of "Geechy" Adams' startling scoring spree, played Furman to a 36-42 score. Furman had the first half 25-12, but Adams seemed unable to miss the basket during the second period, and when the game ended, P. C. was trailing by only six points.

Frank Waldrep added nine points of his team's total, and played a fine game on the floor. Nettles, Lynn, and Captain Copeland added the others, playing good floor games.

This close game somewhat offsets the stinging defeat of 37-16 in Spartanburg on Monday.

Furman seemed at first to have a vastly superior team, and ran up a considerable lead. However, no Furman guard was alert or swift enough to keep a jump ahead of "the Major." The team as a whole played excellent ball for their second game, and may surprise many a prophet in the state.

Only one substitute was used by Coach Lonnie McMillian, that being Clark, at forward.

LIAR'S CONTEST HELD BY "Y"

First Event Of Its Kind Brings To Light Hitherto Unsuspected Talent. Wingate Wins.

Many up-and-coming young liars were uncovered at the liar's contest sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. the first Thursday after the holidays. The contest was the first of its kind to be held on the campus and much interest was shown. A large number participated in the "whopper derby." Professors Brown, Jones and Brimm acted as judges.

Barney MacLean started the ball rolling with a tale about a wonderfully fast mare who entered a race, gave birth to a colt in the course of the race and even then crossed the tape frist, with the colt running a close second.

From then on wild stories came thick and fast; and even the Dean smiled when he heard some original ones that had not already been handed him for his acceptance.

Dean Brown himself could not refrain from entering into the spirit of the occasion and came dashing into the auditorium with the startling news that Dr. Brimm and Dr. Jones were tearing each other's hair out. It later developed that the two were having some words but the argument had not quite advanced to the hair-pulling stage.

The prize, a handsome military tie, was won by T. H. Wingate, whom none had ever suspected of being even a small prevaricator.

DAVIS SPEAKS AT "Y" SESSION

Head of Biology Department Discusses "How To Study" At Weekly Student Meet.

The weekly Y. M. C. A. meeting Thursday night was in charge of A. M. Tommins. The speaker for the evening was Dr. J. H. Davis, of the department of biology. He spoke on "How To Study." At the beginning Dr. Davis said that the object of his speech was to show how to learn more than just to tell how to study.

These are the five general methods of learning which he gave:

(1) There must be the attitude and motivation. There is only one class of people in the world to whom the world owes a living. That is the tramp. Since all of us are not planning to be tramps; and since we have chosen mental labor to manual labor, it must be our purpose to learn when we come to college. If one wants to be a great athlete and puts athletics before studies, let him go to a college which specializes in physical education.

(2) There must be the effort. The best feeling in life is to sit down tired after a hard day's work and realize that you have done something worth while. The average student is satisfied too easily. There is not the earnest effort that goes to make a success.

(3) There must be conditions favorable to study. That is the reason there are colleges with dormitories, so students will be in an atmosphere which will tend to encourage study. Get in the habit of studying the same lesson at the same place every day. Association of surroundings with the subject helps the memory. The equipment should be in such condition that it will not detract from the general attitude of study.

(4) Set aside one uninterrupted time for study. Learn to read faster and faster. This goes to make deeper concentration. A good student should be able to read 36 pages an hour and really learn them. Slow study robs a person not only of time but also of efficiency.

(5) Practice. Five out of six students never practice to see if they really know a thing. Get in the habit of saying something out loud. Live the subject. Associate every-day objects with the subject. That is the reason there are absent-minded professors. They become so deeply engrossed with the subject which they teach that other things become secondary.

Dr. Davis then told how to use the facilities of a college:

(1) How to use the lecture.
(2) How to use the text book.
(3) How to use notes.
(4) How to use the professor.
(5) How to use the library.
(6) How to use the laboratory.
(7) How to use the recitation.
(8) How to use quizzes and exams.
(9) How to use the memory.

EDITORIALS

APPRECIATION

Lately, several articles have been written about the student body of Presbyterian College. They have touched on various subjects, policies, and what have you, but I would like to bring one matter to the attention of the students that has been overlooked so far. If you are not guilty of the neglect brought out in this article then so much the better.

I wonder if you stop to realize how much time is spent by the boys each year in the dining room. Almost everyone parks at least forty-five minutes a day eating, besides killing time there after a good meal which is always well prepared and satisfying to the taste of the most exacting of us. Yet we apparently never think of all the worry and work in preparing such a meal. We never think of the one who is responsible for all the regular meals as well as the special ones that are served at odd times during the year. At least we never take time to go back into the kichen to tell Mrs. Hunter just how much we enjoyed the meal. Am I right or not?

Oh, I know we say we are going to, but all of a sudden we think of something that seems to us to be more important than a word of appreciation. It's not that we don't appreciate it, but we are prone to put off; consequently we never say anything to anyone. We do give a yell after a very special meal but don't you think that we should show our appreciation more often than three or four times a year? Do we have to get a big meal before we say "Thank you"? I don't think we mean it that way but it certainly looks that way now. Let's take a little more time and make it a point to tell Mrs. Hunter that we enjoyed the meal. It won't take very much of your time and it would be much nicer.

"P. C.—Where Men Are Made." That's our slogan and I'm sure that showing one's appreciation is one of man's best traits. Let's live up to our slogan and be just a little more thoughtful of those who work day in and day out doing things for our pleasure and comfort.

I know each and everyone of you join me in our appreciation of Mrs. Hunter's work for us at P. C.

—J. O. W.

PERTAINING TO THE "HONOR SYSTEM"

At the present time, different situations show that the Honor System at Presbyterian College needs the attention of the students. It is so easy to pass up the contents of the system on which P. C. is governor. Does each member of the student body do all that hat he can to promote the Honor System? If each man would carry out his part, there would be no question in regard to this subject.

All depends on the individual student. Will we, the students of Presbyterian College, at all times do our part toward maintaining the highest standards as laid down in our Honor System? If each man on this campus would take the responsibility upon himself to push forward the Honor System, then the student government of our college would surpass that of any college in the land.

The Honor System was made for the personal benefit of each man who attends Presbyterian College. Not as a means of forcement, but as a provision to strengthen the character of each one involved. To follow after the things that are high and noble, character is hereby built up. Show me the man with high character, and I will show you the man bound for future success.

The student who merely tries to "get by" will at a later time in his life realize his mistake. Oh!! the regret of a wasted college life. It may be hard to see it this way now, but when "college life" is over, and we are out in the world, then will we understand the meaning of this article. We may deceive our professors, our fellow classmates, but when "school days" are over we will reap agony and pain. Our fellowmen see us in our actions; in ten years from now what will their respect for us be? Naturally it depends on the ideals of each student. We can never forget the character of our fellow students.

Fellows, come out and be men in regard to the Honor System. I am sure that there is not a man at P. C. who would go back on his Alma Mater. Why is it that we cannot support our Alma Mater's Honor System as well.

The challenge goes out today for men who will stand up for the right. Come, men, let us renew the slogan of our college, "Where Men Are Made." May we, as students, make this slogan true by our lives each day.

It depends on you. What will you do?

C. B. L.

OUR CAMPUS ELECTIONS

For four short years I have seen the campus election held at P. C. Of course these are considered (as far as the student body is concerned) as important as the last Presidential election of the United States.

In our political world the best man never enters he race. Why? Because politics have been put on such a low plane, and there is so much dirt and crooked work being done that the best man does not care to have his name put on the list. Here on our campus it is quite different. Our political situation is put on a much higher plane and every man that runs for an office is well suited for the position. However, some member of the student body has to make some unkind remarks or start some report on some man that he is not quite as interested in and not only hurts him in the immediate election but for the rest of the time that he is in school.

I am not criticizing a man for being a politician, but I do criticize a man who varies from the standards of truth and honesty to which he has been taught. I have known this to be the case on our campus within the last three years. If this matter would affect only the individual it would be just a little more excusable, but the whole student body is reflected by these men whom we place in such responsible positions.

Next week on our campus we are choosing men to represent us through our college paper for the coming year, and I think that we should be very careful as to our choice. Every man in the race does more than qualify for the position, but what I am asking is that every member of the student body vote for the man who can best fill the position. I ask you to lay all envy and malice aside and vote for the man who can best represent you not only in this country but in the distant lands.

It will be only a few weeks before other important elections will take place. Elections that will not go so far into the world but will be even more important from the viewpoint of the present student body. These are the elections of a president of the student body and a student council for the coming year. Fellow students, every man at P. C. is supposed to be a friend to each other, and I ask that in the coming election here on the campus that you put aside the feeling of grudgery and vote for the man who will best lead you. All that I am asking is for you to be true to yourself, to your fellow students, and to your God.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

The uniform inspection last Tuesday proved to be quite an upset. The marks of the previous inspections have been very commendable, but now it seems "that the stock market is dropping." The lowest value received was 5.0.

Immediately after the inspection was over one boy was heard to say that he guessed he would have to drop back into his same "ole routine." On being asked what this routine was, he said: "Prior to this time I just shined the buckle and got a fair grade, but for this inspection today I really cleaned the uniform, and got the lowest grade I have made since I have been here." What a calamity!

From now on it seems necessary that the uniform be absolutely spotless, that the buckle be shined until you can see yourself in it, that the buttons resemble a July noon-day sun, and that the shoes be so shiny that they will reflect the glow of the buttons.

What a struggle! What a struggle! The seniors recently have completed a study of the Civil war, and they were told to write a critical essay upon the battles fought by the North and the South in the East during the year 1862. A fixed date was set when they were to be turned in—the 10th of January. Fifty per cent of the class waited until the 8th of Jan. to start their themes, and the other fifty per cent waited until the 10th.

These battles were fought in seconds, whereas the original ones lasted days. The soldiers of the two armies do not realize just what trouble they did leave behind them when they fought this war.

Attention is called to the notice posted on the bulletin board in regard to make up work. All freshmen and sophomores that are behind in their military class work must see Captain Blanton and have this work made up immediately.

With a great deal of interest and also dread the eyes of each cadet officer and "non-com" are turned toward the coming re-appointments. The "make-over" list will not be posted until after exams, so until then each can breathe easily.

Some wonder whether they will be "busted" or not; it is no time for wondering, it is a time for action—showing your ability on the drill field.

The battalion had its annual picture taken the other day for the PaC-SaC. Also the rifle team.

OOFUS GOOFUS

THE OFFIS BOY

Had you noticed how difficult it to get back to the daily grind after holiday? If you have, we sympaize with you. If you haven't, you ve a new experience in store.

The Liar's Contest last week was a eat success. Some excellent prevaritors and (what was that other word ector Jones used?) were dicovered. is planned to make this an annual air and send one or two represenives each year to a national con-t.

The national contest of 1932 was n with a story about a peg-legged who caught mice by clouting them the head with the peg. It brings to nd the tale I have been told about aged cat, Annabelle, owned by a ighbor. Annabelle was greatly loved d respected by all who knew her. e was old and venerable and in adion to a peg-leg had a set of false eth and used an ear trumpet. In ite of her age and artificial appenges, Annabelle was very nimble and ed to amuse herself by traveling m roof to roof of houses in the ighborhood by the simple expedient leaping. She met her death by elececution when she misjudged her up to a neighbor's house across the street and came in contact with an electric trolley wire over the middle of the street.

Annabelle's dying utterance was "Meow."

Useless information: Eight more studying days before exams.

Jimmie Wilson had a wonderful Christmas. He gave his mother a beautiful Kaywoodie pipe and his sister a shaving set. Both produced the desired results; but he bought a pair of socks for his girl, and she decided to keep them because it was such an original gift.

Several additions have recently been made to our collection of army songs. One is the "Song of the Noncoms." It originated on this campus:

Take my stripes,
And let me be
Just a private
In the armeee.

And now let us Winchellize or should we say Barronize? Snooper Mahaffey reports that he discovered Librarian Jones and Assistant Ferguson playing double solitaire with the card index system in the library the other day. But it may have been poker. Mahaffey always did give his victims the benefit of the doubt.

Middle Cook is that way about somebody. Your guess is as good as ours.

Will somebdy please ask "B. D." Wilson what happened during the holidays that has him so worried now.

P. S.—The B. D. does not stand for Bus Driver, in case you were wondering.

A certain sweet young thing was heard to express the opinion that a certain plump and bespectacled student councilman was "the cutest thing." Oh, no.

We are informed that Norton Dendy suddenly burst into tears when listening to a fellow-student's dissertation on love.

We offer no explanation. Bare fact ...our limit—the "barer" the better.

For no reason at all, Cecil Lawter is reported to have gone from White to Black, getting Cooked on the way. You figure it out for yourself.

This school will turn out at least two men of financial genius. These two went to the show Wednesday night, saw the picture through, and then sold their two seats for twenty-five cents, five cents more than they cost.

I thought there was a law against

No, no blessed events this week.

And shall we end with a bit of verse? We shall.

The following is not original, but good nevertheless.

"Oh, for the life of a college boy;
He lives a life of ease.
Even when he graduates
He does it by degrees."

RELIGIOUS ACTIVITIES

On Sunday afternoon at the regular time the Ministerial club held its regular meeting in the Y. M. C. A. room in the gymnasium.

The meeting opened with prayer, followed by a song. After another prayer the Scripture, taken from Philippians, was read by Freeman Parker, president of the club, who gave a short talk, urging the members of the band to press on in the high calling which is found in Christ Jesus. The students were urged to forget the mistakes of the past and press on toward the future. The talk was concluded with a prayer.

The meeting was thrown open to a discussion of the time and place of the meeting for the future. The time was moved up to 1:30 instead of 1:45 and the place of meeting remains in the gymnasium.

The service was closed with the usual formality.

When I like something I evermore like it!

THEY'RE MILDER—
THEY TASTE BETTER

—and I like CHESTERFIELD Cigarettes.

To me, they are mild—that is, they don't seem to be strong; and there is certainly no bite, so far as I can tell.

To me, they taste better and they have a pleasing aroma.

Every CHESTERFIELD that I get is well-filled, and I feel like I am getting my money's worth—that there is no short measure about it.

I like CHESTERFIELDS. They satisfy me.

GRIFFIN GIVEN JACOBS TROPHY

Hurricane Star Shyly Accepts Award At Rotary Luncheon Held In Clinton.

[illegible] who paved the way for many of the touchdowns that helped the Furman university's 1932 football team [illegible] a state championship, last Friday was awarded the Jacobs interference trophy, probably the highest individual award a football player may receive in this state.

The Hurricane's all-state fullback, shier but lively, displayed a touch of shyness as he received the loving cup from the hands of its donor, William P. Jacobs, Clinton business man and alumnus of Presbyterian college.

"I think," he said, "the committee could have found a better man for this honor, but I assure it could not have found one more appreciative."

The committee Griffin referred to was made up of coaches, sports writers and officials. Many of them were here to see him receive the award, established by Mr. Jacobs in 1928 to give recognition to players who do the blocking and interference work that enables their teammates to score.

[illegible] W. J. McGlothlin, president of Furman university, and Mr. Jacobs were the chief speakers at the luncheon, given in honor of Griffin by the Clinton Rotary club. Coach Paul ("Dizzy") McLeod, who helped develop Griffin, was in North Carolina with Furman's basketball team and could not be present.

"This cup," Doctor McGlothlin said, "rewards the college player for just the principles that, if followed, will make his life later fuller and richer."

Furman's president praised Griffin not only for his ability as a football player but for his general conduct and influence as a student at th. Greenville university.

Mr. Jacobs, in presenting the cup, declared the "award is not only an individual honor but is given in honor of those things that make intercollegiate sports live and chief among them is unselfishness." He also paid tribute to Griffin, his coach and his school.

Others who have won the trophy, none of whom were present Friday, are: O. D. Padgett, Clemson, 1928; High Stoddard, South Carolina, 1929; Grady Salley, Clemson, 1930, and Fred Hambright, South Carolina, 1931.

Two Marriages Are Announced

Two members of the student body have decided that two can live as cheaply as one, and have assumed the bonds of matrimony. They are Sam Crouch and Tom Howell. Crouch was married early last July, but the wedding was not announced until during the holidays. Howell married Miss Elizabeth Adair, of Clinton, in Newberry December 31. Crouch married Miss Opal Aughtry, also of Clinton. Both couples are making their homes in Clinton for the present, while Howell and Crouch continue their education.

Howell came to P. C. in his junior year from Marion, Ala. During his comparatively short time here "Tom" has made himself universally liked. He is captain of "B" company in the R. O. T. C., unit and was a member of the football squad for the last two seasons. He will graduate in June. He is a member of Alpha Lambda Tau social fraternity.

This is Crouch's sophomore year. He came here from Batesburg, but has since moved to Lyesville. He was a member of the freshman boxing team last season, and is well-liked by al who know him.

Trustees To Meet January 28th

The trustees of the college will hold their semi-annual meeting here February 28.

H. T. McIntosh, editor of The Albany Herald, Albany, Ga., has been elected by the Synod of Georgia to take the place of Rev. A. W. Dick, of Moultrie, Ga., who has moved from that state.

Among other things, the board will consider [illegible] the practice field [illegible]

Seek To Reduce Light, Water Bill

Wednesday morning President McSween made a request that the student body be more careful in the use of lights and water.

Dr. McSween said that the lights and water are here to use and the administration is glad for the students to use every bit they need. The president urged carefulness. Many boys go out of their rooms for several hours, the president said, and forget to turn off the lights. Others leave showers running. Often two or three lights are left burning in a room in the day time. This carelessness has run the college light and water bill to something over three hundred dollars for the last month, even after a fifteen per cent deduction allowed by the city had been made. Of course this is entirely too much. With some care this bill can be lowered one hundred dollars. Each individual is urged to do his part to save the administration this one hundred dollars each month.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

At the first regular meeting of the Y. M. C. A. for the year, on Thursday night, Jan. 5, the "Y" held a lying contest. (Maybe it was to get them off the chests of the student body before New Year's resolutions were made).

Hot waged the battle as consciences got weaker and weaker and imaginations stretched more and more. At last, the honorable judges, Dr. Brimm, Dr. Jones, and Dean Brown, declared T. H. Wingate winner by a stretch. Here was his tale:

He says that he and his brother planted watermelons one year. Nothing so unusual about that, but there was something unusual about the fertilizer. It was so strong that it made the vines grow so fast they wore out the melons dragging them across the field.

Another article about this week's program is on another page of the paper.

past year he has been circulation manager.

McCall is a budding journalist. He is the only sophomore to be elected to Gamma Sigma. During the fall term while Ben Covington was away on football trips, McCall had quite a bit of the work to do and he did it well.

The nominations of the staff have been made with careful consideration. They are made from knowledge which the staff, the center of the newspaper, is certain to have; however, the student body is free to nominate from the floor if there is any one who desires to do so. The election will be held at the regular student body meeting in chapel Tuesday, January 17.

Thomas H. Grafton Married In Virginia

Of cordial interest to many in Clinton and to former students of Presbyterian college is the following announcement:

Dr. and Mrs. Wade Stackhouse announce the marriage of their daughter Martha Cartherine to Mr. Thomas Hancock Grafton on Saturday, the seventeenth of December
Nineteen hundred and thirty-two
Waynesboro, Virginia

Mrs. Grafton is the youngest daughtre of Dr. and Mrs. Wade Stackhouse of Dillon, S. C. She graduated from Agnes Scott college, Decatur, in 1930, and is now registrar and assistant to the dean of Mary Baldwin college in Staunton, Va.

Mr. Grafton is the son of the Rev. Thomas B. Grafton of Vicksburg, Miss. He holds an A. B. degree from Presbyterian college, a B. D. degree from Columbia seminary, Decatur, Ga., and an M. A. degree from Northwestern university, and is at present connected with the religious education department of Northwestern.

Mr. Grafton was editor of The Blue Stocking in 1926-27 and was valedictorian of the class of 1927 and has one of the most enviable records ever made at Presbyterian college.

Haven't You Heard?

Those wedding bells are breaking up that old gang of ours. Married life has its advantages for students, though. Perhaps if Stupid J. B. Copeland would get married, his wife could do his home work for him—then he might pass something.

'Tis rumored that a letter was delivered to "The Right Honorable All-State Copeland." Such popularity must be deserved.

Whitey Adams is quite a favorite with Greenville basketball fans, because of his performance against Furman Thursday night. The Maje almost stole the show from the Celtics. Pluto Ross did all of his shooting in the dressing room before the game.

Bob Sims, our old reliable, was quite anxious to buy a ticket back to Clinton after a strenuous holiday season. Ask him who his friend Roy is.

Hoss Nettles has written every characteristic saying of a certain professor in his economics book.

The ride of Paul Revere was re-enacted under modern surroundings during the holidays by Pride Ratteree. He now ranks second only to Large Richard as the college's most outstanding bus driver. Mr. Ratteree, in an exclusive Blue Stocking interview, admitted "Paul Revere was a piker compared with me."

A certain young man is receiving perfumed letters weekly from Alabama. Watch the Thursday mail.

"Reuben" Seagle, after a mishap during boxing practice, is being urged to take the DeForest correspondence course in boxing, featuring Kid McCoy's famous corkscrew punch. The price of this course is only $2.98.

"Buffalo Bill" Cody, from the wilds of Oklahoma, is setting Spencer hall on fire with his astounding ability as a card shark. It is rumored that he has in his trunk a six-gun with seven notches. And they do say he's mighty quick on the draw.

A certain freshman, so 'tis said, has inherited $5,000. Go easy, Mickey!

Captain Blanton is wondering why everyone in "A" company is out of step except Frowein.

Frank ("Glutton") Holladay is keeping his pitching arm in shape by throwing biscuits at supper every night. He is rated as one of the best southpaws in the dining room.

Red Peterson has recently developed several serious complications. In addition to athlete's foot, he has a sore toe, which last prevented him from going out for boxing.

In conclusion, we wish to say that if somebody doesn't get suspended it won't be our fault.

Dinosaur Track Now Used as Bird Bath

Montreal.—Millions of years ago a dinosaur walked in the mud on a plain that is now part of the Peace river valley. His tracks, two feet long and five to six inches deep, hardened as the sun dried the mud. Then another freshet came and covered them with a layer of new mud. Deeply buried, the tracks remained in the hardening silt until it became stone, and finally man dug them up, hewed out slabs containing them, and carried them to museums.

Now one of the giant saurian track, modeled in cement, has been installed on the grounds of the Canadian National museum. It is kept filled with fresh water and used as a bird bath.

[illegible] The University of South Carolina [illegible]xers eked out a 5-3 victory over the [illegible]esbyterian fist-slingers Saturday, [illegible]n. 17. Many of the bouts were close, [illegible]th Seigle, Clark, and Sims winning [illegible]r P. C.

[illegible]The feature bout of the night came [illegible]en Bolick matched gloves with Will[illegible]d, of the University, and knocked [illegible]m down in the first round. The bell [illegible]ved Willard on the count of eight. [illegible]Adams and Quattlebaum played fine [illegible]ames at guard, and Bradley played [illegible] sterling floor game.

TAYLOR TALKS ON MANCHURIA

Former Missionary To China Relates Expansion of Japan and Explains Present Efforts.

At chapel exercises Monday morning, Jan. 16, Rev. H. Carr Taylor, returned missionary from China, spoke to the student body on the Manchurian situation. Mr. Taylor is a brother of George W. Taylor, an alumnus of P. C., and now a missionary to Brazil.

The speaker began by telling of Japan's crowded condition and her need of more room for her steadily increasing population. The islands composing Japan proper contain over 60,000,000 inhabitants, half the population of the United States, all crowded into an area of less than that of California. Even then, only one-sixth of this is fit for cultivation. Hence, Japan must look to other lands to find homes for her people.

This formerly backward country has in the past 77 years made probably the greatest improvement ever shown by any country in so short a time. Now she is one of the foremost powers of the world. As she gained power toward the end of the nineteenth century, she began to reach out for more land. Gradually more land was added by the seizure from China of several islands and the taking by force of Korea. This, however, was not nearly enough room for the excess population. Emigrants were sent to islands in the Pacific until finally most of the governments concerned forbade it. Naturally, Japan had then to gain more land by conquest. The logical place was China.

On China's side it may be said that Japan violated a solemn three-power treaty to respect the territorial integrity of China. Legally, Japan has not the least right in the world to take Manchuria. Yet, on the other side of the question, Manchuria is not actually a part of China. This province has in the past maintained itself almost as a separate country, at times being entirely independent from the Chinese central government. Also, Manchuria is a rich country, with enormous resources which, although undeveloped by China at present, would be immensely valuable to Japan.

The struggle in the East today is one between a Christian spirit on the one side, and a heathen, selfish attitude on the other, said Mr. Taylor. Our land is at its high plane today because of the work of Christ We must do our best to give the knowledge of Christ to the people of the Orient, so that they may find the just solution to their quarrel.

Mr. Taylor concluded with the statement, "There is a way out, and it is through God."

Lonnie McMillian Puts Lessons Learned At Olympics Into Work With Blue Stocking Track Squad

When the world's best amateur athletes were displaying their wares at the Olympic games in California last summer one of the most interested spectators was Lonnie McMillian, Presbyterian college track coach.

The keen-eyed mentor absorbed what he saw and is now attempting to teach some of it to Blue Stocking track aspirants.

"I learned a lot," Coach McMillian said. "I put some of it to good usage with the freshman football team and I hope to use more of it in training the track team."

Just what McMillian learned is not being noised around but it's no secret that Presbyterian, long the dominating factor in South Carolina track, is anxious to retrieve the championship in this sport it lost last year to the University of South Carolina.

Eight lettermen from last year's team are on hand to work with in addition to a number of sophomores who showed promise as members of the freshman team.

Osman, Graham, Woods, Lowry, Ewing, Freeman, Copeland and Pinson are varsity men working out now in order to be in shape when the hard work starts later in the spring.

Up from the freshman team are Clark, Yearout, McElrath, Perrin, Waldrep, Carothers, Lowry, Underwood and Reeder.

Osman, Graham, Woods, Clark and Yearout are considered among the best bets for the relay team while Yearout is also expected to gain a place among the 440-yard runners.

NEW STAFF FOR YEAR CHOSEN

Guess Is Managing Editor and Haney Business Manager. All Other Members Are Appointed By Editor.

Tuesday morning at a student body meeting The Blue Stocking officers for the year 1933 were elected. They will serve until this date next year.

T. H. Wingate defeated J. Walker Combs, Jr., for editor; J. W. Haney defeated Thomas Shinnick for business manager; and W. F. Guess was elected managing editor following the withdrawal of L. A. McCall.

These are the only members of the staff elected by the student body, the editor choosing others for various positions as he sees fit.

Wingate is from Charlotte, N. C. He has been on the staff for two years and during recent months has written the "Oofus Goofus" column. He has the happy trait of being able to get along with people and, with other abilities, should make a good editor.

Haney is from Calhoun, Ga. He has been on the staff for three years and during the past year served as circulation manager.

The election of managing editor caused quite a bit of discussion. L. A. McCall, the staff's nomination for this position, had no opposition. For reasons which he made known to the student body, he saw fit to withdraw. Guess was then nominated and elected. He is from Rock Hill, and is a member of the sophomore class. During the past year he has done writing for the paper, including several editorials and book reviews.

The new staff takes charge of the paper with the issue of February 4. Since next week is examination week the usual custom of omitting publication for that date will be followed.

Wingate has announced the complete staff for the coming year as follows:

T. H. Wingate, editor.
Frank Guess, managing editor.
Joe Haney, business manager.
J. W. Combs, Jr., associate editor.
C. R. Johnson, news editor.
Fred Ross, sports editor.
Hastings Wyman, assistant sports editor.
H. S. Odom, freshman sports editor.
Ed Andrews, assistant freshman sports editor.
Almon Tommins, organizations editor.
James Ratchford, alumni editor.
Colin Hudson, exchange editor.
Preston Charles, campus editor.
T. L. Shinnick, news service editor.
A. P. Wilson, R. O. T. C. editor.
Cecil Lawter, Y. M. C. A. editor.
W. I. Nexsen, editorial writer.
Frank Johnston, columnist.
Earl Winn, feature editor.
Raymond Corry, feature editor.
D. W. Boggs, joke editor.
Tom Plaxico, proofreader.

Business Staff

Henry Dillard, assistant business manager.
Louis Appelt, advertising manager.
R. P. Hamer, assistant advertising manager
A. W. Harrison, circulation manager.
John Rouch, assistant circulation manager.

Expect Annuals About May First

Editor Land has been busy this week getting in pictures of the basketball and track teams for the 1933 PaC-SaC. Only the baseball pictures are needed to round out the athletic section, and they will be taken soon.

Other work has gone forward steadily, and the editor reports that if the machinery works as expected, and on schedule, the book will be ready by May 1.

DO WE APPRECIATE THOSE WHO SERVE?

In these days of trying times when it is hard, extremely hard to make ends meet in the home of a small family, don't you think that it is even harder for those who control a family of three hundred to make the same ends come together? The administration of the College is having a struggle; and they are struggling so that we can obtain school, just as our parents are back home.

[illegible] realize what this [illegible] means to us, [illegible] opportunities more than we do? You, in your [illegible] say that you pay for what you get. I did you know that what you [illegible] pay into the college for expenses, will hardly pay the salaries of those who labor for us, not to say anything of how the college is [illegible] to many scholarships. We [illegible] more than half of what it cost the college to keep us here [illegible]. Why not show our appreciation to these noble men and women who are serving us by resolving to make that record better henceforth. [illegible] do this they will [illegible] appreciate their efforts, [illegible] more than [illegible].

B. E. M.

IS IT MORALLY WRONG TO CHEAT?

Evil customs, evil actions and bad habits; what a blessing it would be to mankind if such were taken out of the world. Nevertheless it is possible for men to live on a level where these sins will not tempt. But it certainly calls for a close and personal relationship with the Divine. Because man in his own power thinks evil, does evil and revels [illegible] to the present.

We believe that the outstanding temptation that every student should [illegible] is that of cheating. [illegible] every student will come face to face with the question, "Is it morally wrong to cheat?" There are some who say no, but the [illegible] answer [illegible] other aspect of human relations, counteract the routine of living. Life [illegible] interesting without a moment's hesitation in the affirmative. It is often wondered just how those who are classed with the former can reach such a conclusion after a process of valid reasoning. It may be found that they never do any thinking for themselves. If this be the case they are to be pitied.

Is it right to walk into a man's room and pick up a quarter and slip it into your pocket, without the owner knowing anything about it? Is it right to walk into a store and slip some candy in your pocket without paying for it? Every sound thinking person will agree that this is stealing. Well—is it morally right to walk into a class room for an examination, glance over your shoulder and copy the answer to a question from your friend's paper? If you haven't prepared and try to steal from the other fellow, is it right? But there is another principle involved. You steal knowledge and it hurts your conscience; you sacrifice your honor and self-respect in doing this. Personally, I have no respect whatsoever for the man who so lowers himself as to take that which does not belong to him. I admit that it is little that I know—but if a man tried to steal that which I have learned on an examination; I would be indignant, and rightly so.

There are men on the campus who will cheat on the examinations this week. This is true by the law of averages, you cannot bring three hundred men together without having some few who would steal the copper's from a dead man's eyes. And the sooner these thieves are caught and asked to accommodate us with their absence the better morale we shall have in the student body. The world is down on him who would cheat, and justly so; because the man who steals is a contamination to those with whom he associates.

—Barney MacLean.

PROGRESS

Since the beginning of time man has advanced slowly but surely in the arts of livelihood. The past is a closed book to a progressive people; the pages of the future have neither been written nor bound. Progress, the key to the unfathomed yet-to-be, will be tempered in other fires.

When man, the individualist, forgets the ancients and their crude customs, the ways of his ancestors, sits down and devises new adaptations for himself for the present and looks to posterity, then will he advance.

Each individual is a part of the world group which either acts as an auxiliary or an impediment to progress. Millions of hands will help you pull the load upward or pull against you. The individual shall constitute a per cent of the world's ignorance and crime or a per cent of its intelligence and progress. Brownell has said, "The ladder of life is full of splinters, but they prick the hardest when you are sliding down." It is the duty of everyone to draw someone who is lower in the scale upward. For the individual to progress he must have reason, for reason is the medium of progress which draws him forward and upward. When he finds himself in a tight place, everything against him, is he to turn loose and go sliding down? or have the courage to hold onto his position? He must take hold of the strongest weapon, reason, and meet all obstacles that fall in his way, hewing them down, pushing ever forward.

There is now a depression era. Things aren't as bright for the large majority as they have been. This is universally felt. Pessimists are saying labor saving devices are causing the multitude of unemployed. There were depression periods before progress brought forth her machines and put them to use. Even now governments are launching internal improvement programs which will employ thousands, spreading macadamized roads and utilizing vast resources of the nation. Here again is progress.

Shall the individuals of a progressive nation ever close their doors to the rest of the world as did China? We believe not. But if so, that nation would fall behind, would suffer the humiliation of waking up and realizing that she had practically been standing still. The individuals of one nation depend upon those of other nations for swifter advancement. All great men and inventions do not belong to one age and country.

Let each individual pave his way with knowledge, clothe himself in virtues, and grasp the strong weapon of reason. Then progress!

MYTH

Myth and mystery, have them as [illegible] other aspect of human relations, counteract the routine of living. Life [illegible] interesting without its coloring of imagination and its secrets we do not know. Most of us will admit that we enjoy things that we wonder about, and that we delight in the unknown. It is only human to like a change from our every day existence, to like the myth that can bring the changes. In our childhood we gloried in fairy tales because they brought us the world of fancy and they conjured fascinating dreams. As we have grown older the movies have been our world of make believe.

One of the greatest and most lasting myths of the years is the lovely spirit of giving symbolized at Christmas in a dozen ways all over the world. In America it is Santa Claus. Everywhere children believe in this imaginery figure of kindness and goodness. It makes them happy. Most of us were proud of our knowledge when someone told us that there was no Santa Claus. But deep down in our hearts we were sorry and felt sad that we knew. In truth every older person, if he is not too hard or too sour, has never lost that youthful picture of a fat, jolly man riding in a sleigh behind reindeer bringing gifts. He has not lost that picture, for somehow he still likes the warm feeling of the myth.

In this age of ours there is a strong trend to cast aside the realm of fancy and imagination as silly, to laugh at myth, and to deal in sordid realism. Men need ideal and the only lasting ideals are in unreality, in the fairy story. "Alice in Wonderland" is a masterpiece of entertainment because it is wholly amusing nonsense and unreality. Hendrik Willem Van Loon in an article for Vanity Fair says this of our modern age when the revelation of truth brings a more hopeless outlook on life, "Indeed, when I hear all the smart wisecracks of my neighbors about 'what this world needs is a good five-cent nickel' or 'a good five-cent congressman,' I fell more and more inclined to answer, 'What this world needs is a good, soul-satisfying fairy story.'"

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

The program committee regrets the absence of a program for the past Thursday night. A surprise program was planned for the pleasure and entertainment of the student body, but a number of prevailing conditions prevented the fulfillment of the plans.

The month of January was given to the subject of "Studying." This subject was only given emphasis in the one program, two weeks ago, in which Dr. J. H. Davis gave the students some very fine hints toward the improvement of scholastic work. The time was short, but well spent and it is with pleasure that the program committee wishes to express its appreciation to those who helped with the program during this month. Especially is credit due to A. M. Tommins, who planned this scheme of programs. We appreciate his effort.

Jimmie Greer has consented to take charge of the February program. So if you have any ideas, see Jimmie about them. In the meantime we wait with interest to see what he will unearth for the betterment of Y. M. C. A. interests.

A semester is gone; The Blue Stocking goes into new hands. I surrender this column to new and better hands gladly, but pause to give credit to whom credit is due. The few lines that have reached this column are due to the fine efforts of Claud Pepper from the senior class, and to Cliff Johnson and C. M. Hudson from the freshman class. Others have aided in some phases of the work and it is with a feeling of sincere appreciation that I remember their work during the past semester.

Co-ed Basketball Team Amasses Huge Score Against Goldville

The co-ed basketball team, around which much interest has centered of late, due especially to the attentions of Tom Estes, Ray Touchand, Hart Cannon and Coach Bissett, came out on the long end of a 50-13 score in a game with the Goldville damsels Monday night.

Annabel Kennedy and Sara Copeland vied for scoring honors, Miss Copeland making 28 points to the 22 made by Miss Kennedy. The guards played excellent ball the short time the ball was in their far end of the court.

The co-eds have been working hard for several weeks now and, though losing their first game to Laurens, it looks as if they are headed for a successful season.

Scoring summary:

ON THE SPORTS HORIZON

The Poughkeepsie regatta will not be rowed on the Hudson this June. The depression did it.

Harvard and Princeton have contracted to resume relations on the football field. The two teams will meet Nov. 3, 1934 at Cambridge, and at Princeton on Nov. 2, 1935.

Yale and Pennsylvania will meet in football in 1933.

After a lapse of 33 years, Cornell and Syracuse will meet on the gridiron next fall.

Lacrosse is said to be the oldest game played on the North American continent.

The Cornell Athletic council has voted to abandon all intercollegiate competition for Cornell teams, including winter and spring sports, with the exception of basketball. The sports affected by the order are ice hockey, wrestling, fencing, indoor and outdoor track, crew, baseball and lacrosse.

The Cincinnati Reds of 1933 will start training at Tampa, Fla., on March 1.

The Pittsburgh Pirates will train this year at Paso Robles, Cal. The first squad will start west February 1.

The New York Athletic club has officially gone on record as opposed to the adoption of the meter by the Amateur Athletic union. The club declares coaches' opposition, fans' confusion and unfairness to record holders.

Ed Siegel, nineteen-year-old metropolitan New York sprint champion, the other night in New York, ran 60 meters in seven seconds flat, thus establishing a new world's indoor record.

Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of organized baseball, who drew one of the highest salaries in baseball, $65,000, from 1925 to last year, has voluntarily reduced that amount to $50,000 for 1933.

Following the lead set last December by the American association, the International league also will decide its pennant winner next summer on a play-off system, involving four clubs, which will be contracted at the close of the regularly round-robin schedule.

One day a man found a crazy man pounding himself on the head with a hammer. The man asked: "Why are you pounding yourself on the head with that hammer?"

"Because it feels so good when I stop," was the reply.

FINALE

By Walker Combs, Jr.

It is a strange commentary on people that at the time when they should do their clearest thinking, they do what above all things is most foolish. Such a stunt has been pulled by the present congress in decreasing appropriations for the regular army of the United States, while they increase appropriations for the National Guard, a less efficient branch of the service. However, it may be explained that there are many more votes under control of the National Guard than the regular army, many of whom cannot vote.

But, to get on to sports, a branch in which we seemed doomed to bury what talent we have, the track situation is not a little upset over the A. A. U. adoption of the metric system. The A. A. U., to those who do not know, does not control intercollegiate track meets. It is quite certain at least from present indications, that the meter measurement will not be used in South Carolina this year.

Coaches Johnson and McMillian, who each year run the state track meet, do not commit themselves. Both plead they do not know what will be done. In this state of mind, then, not knowing what to do, they will probably hold this year's track meet under the same conditions which have held for the last few years.

And that means rain for a month beforehand, too.

Red Wyatt and Roy Forehand, well-known freshmen, gave some little exhibition in the second half of the Friday night's game with Elberton. Roy, we might say, was a bit too individual at times, but he looked good. We may allow for his individualism, since he worked out with the varsity before the freshman squad was called out.

Red Wyatt made the basket swish so regularly that everyone in the gallery was shouting, "Give it to Red" whenever P. C. freshmen had the ball. Alan Levi and Phil Adams kept their men well covered, and played fine floor games.

Quite a deal of excitement was caused by the fracas between Levi and Copeland this past week. It was at first much like the cricket in the elephant's ear, until Levi proved to have the same failing as Achilles. However, Coach McMillian stopped the melee before further damage occurred.

We are indeed glad that what Pluto Ross turned his head to keep from seeing did not happen.

But with Copeland's fine game against Furman, perhaps his best of this year, and Levi's good showing, the trouble seems to be cleared up, and basketball practice will be much the same as it has been.

Sometimes we get rather pessimistic over the depression, but when you drive around a little burg like Greenville, for four or five blocks before finding a parking space, it is time to begin cursing Prosperity. We have heard that prosperity was just around the corner, but we were anxiously looking for an example of the depression at every corner Friday afternoon.

Insult: To be accused of having no "common sense."

Oh, yes, and the co-eds deserve mention. They look pretty good. Uh-uh . . . their basketball. They did a great little job in polishing off Goldville 50-13.

Exams!

Norman Brokenshire Tunes Up Chesterfield Radio Stars for the New Year

Stage And Screen Comic Makes Radio Debut With Bing Crosby and Ruth Etting

Tom Howard's Droll Comedy Will Contrast In Chesterfield's Broadcasts With Popular Singers and Hot Band.

Six nights a week—every day except Sunday—at 9:00 p. m. Eastern standard time, stars of comedy, music and song will come through the Columbia Broadcasting system over the largest coast-to-coast hook-up in radio.

Tom Howard and his partner, George Shelton, are new to the ether waves. An exclusive Chesterfield find, they are reported to have turned down some attractive stage offers for an opportunity to present a new comedy-team idea on the radio. Howard is a real "scoop" for Chesterfield. In the past ten years the famous comedian's time has been filled to capacity with stage and movie productions, and he was finally persuaded to carry his inimitable drolleries into the realm of radio. The team of Howard and Shelton will be on every Tuesday and Friday. An added feature on these two nights will be Elizabeth Barthell, novelty singer, in special vocal numbers.

Ruth Etting, who as Chicago's "Sweetheart of the Air" rose via Ziegfeld's Follies and other stage successes to be America's "queen of the air," continues singing those [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Tune the Old Cow Died Of

To "sing the tune the old cow died of" is to give words instead of alms. The expression has its origin in an old song of a man who, having nothing with which to feed his cow, sang to her of the grass which is to grow. And of course, the cow died.

THE OFFIS BOY

[illegible]ne never really realizes what it is [illegible]e without a word to say until he [illegible] down to the task of filling a col[illegible]. Some people may glorify the [illegible] by calling it "composing a col[illegible]"; but we have no such ideas. We [illegible] afraid to call such a—well, thing, [illegible]omposition. It might do to call it [illegible]ompilation, but we are hazy on the [illegible]ning of that word, so we will con[illegible]e to call it a "column."

[illegible] column, so far as anyone has [illegible]nd out, can be anyhing just so it [illegible] a heading and is broken into [illegible]rt parts by little black lines every [illegible] and then. Some are not even [illegible]ken into short parts, but these are [illegible] exception rather than the rule and [illegible]amateur should never try such a [illegible]stic departure from past custom. [illegible]olumnist who does such a thing is [illegible] exercising that divine right of [illegible] literary talent known as "poetic [illegible]nse." (We have heard it called [illegible]etic licentiousness").

[illegible]s we see it, columnists are divided [illegible] two large classes: "Broadway" or [illegible] town columnist, and small town [illegible]umnist. The difference is that the [illegible] boys dish out the dirt and the [illegible] all town boys do not. [illegible]hen there are the collegiate columnists, who try to emulate both and end up by being neither. Their one and only purpose is to keep the typewriter moving until two pages are filled. (Two typewritten pages equal one column in the paper).

To turn to a more interesting discussion, we see that Babe Ruth and Colonel Jake Ruppert, the Yankee owner, are putting on their annual winter contest over the Babe's salary for next season. Here is the way The Beloit (Wis.) Daily News puts it:

Ruth and Ruppert, Babe and Jake,
Are at it again with dough at stake.
Words will be many and loud the cries,
But, never fear, they'll compromise.

And that, it seems to us, is the whole thing in a peanut hull.

Again quoting The Beloit News:

"Three matches are listed tonight in the major Ping-Pong league at the Beloit Ping-Pong club rooms. The Travelers will tie up with the Phi Kappa Psi Tigers, while the Beloit club tackles the Iron-Men of Fairbanks-Morse, and the Rattlers battle the Panthers." Go to it, Tigers and Panthers!

A happy thought is brought to us in the columns of the Campus News, paper from New Jersey College for Women. A professor at Georgia College objects to students wearing smoked glasses to class because he found they used them as shields behind which they could sleep through his lectures.

There's an idea!

We are told that out in Durant, Oklahoma, H. K. Jones, an erstwhile Democrat who voted Republican in [illegible], has returned to the ranks of the Democrats and has asked legal permission to change the name of his four-year-old son from Herbert Hoover Jones to Franklin Roosevelt Jones.

J. B. Copeland played a whale of a game against the Charlotte Bantams, one count, in a New Year's Day game. He played for the Dixie All-Stars, a team composed of college seniors and numbering among its stars, John Cain, Alabama's all-American back. The proceeds of the game went to charity.

J. B. has applied for a position with the Bantams next fall.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

As there will be no military operations during the week of exams, uniform inspection will not be held this week. However, one week from Tuesday, Jan. 24, the first inspection in the new semester will be held.

The rifle team has already completed several matches with various schools, and seems to be "holding their own."

With the coming of the new semester there also comes several changes in ranks. A new position is to be installed, that of Lieutenant-Colonel. The military authorities have not yet posted the new change.

RELIGIOUS ACTIVITIES

The ministerial club devoted its time on Sunday afternoon to a study of hymns. The study of the origin and use of some of our favorite hymns is of interest to the students in general. R. R. Potter gave a talk and V. Arnold followed it with another talk on a hymn and its use. The meeting was of short duration and was enjoyed by those attending.

You smoke a Pipe—

and we'd like to talk with you about it

All races of people since the beginning of time, so far as we have been able to read, have had some kind of a pipe and have smoked something—whether they called it tobacco or what not.

AND since smoking a pipe is so different from smoking a cigar or cigarette, we made a most painstaking, scientific study in an effort to make, if we could, a tobacco which was suited to pipes.

We found out, first, that there was a kind of tobacco that grew in the Blue Grass section of Kentucky called White Burley, and that there was a certain kind of this tobacco which was between the tobacco used for cigarettes and the tobacco used for chewing tobacco. It is this tobacco which is best for pipes.

We found out that Mr. J. N. Wellman, many years ago, made a pipe tobacco which was very popular. But it was never advertised and after he passed away nothing more was heard about it. We acquired this Wellman Method and that is what we use in making Granger.

The Granger pouch keeps the tobacco fresh

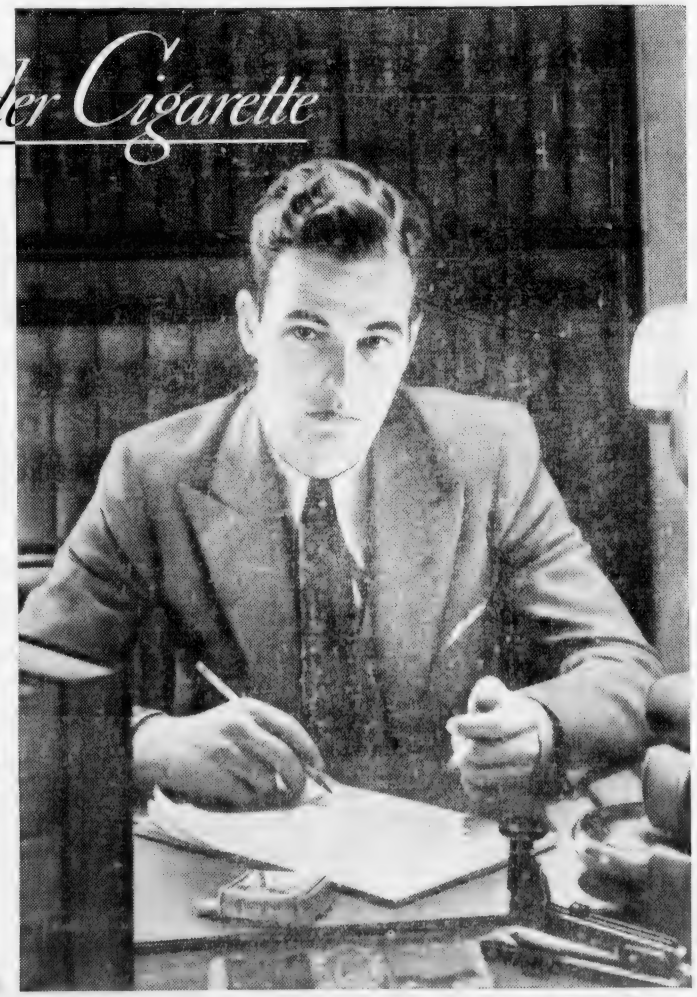
Next was the cut. We knew that fine tobacco burnt hot because it burnt so fast. You could hardly hold your pipe in your hand, it got so hot at times. So remembering how folks used to "whittle" their tobacco we cut GRANGER just like "whittle" tobacco—"Rough Cut." It smokes cooler, lasts longer and never gums the pipe.

So far, so good. Now we wanted to sell this tobacco for 10c. Good tobacco—right process—cut right. So we put Granger in a sensible soft foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke the package.

GRANGER has not been on sale very long, but it has become a popular smoke. And we have yet to know of a man who started to smoke it, who didn't keep on. Folks seem to like it.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

"I'm working and Smoking overtime—hence a Milder Cigarette



"WHEN I work hard, I usually smoke more; and when I smoke more, I usually work harder—and that's why I want a cigarette that's milder."

We use in Chesterfield Cigarettes mild, ripe Domestic and Turkish tobaccos which have been aged and re-aged.

These good tobaccos in Chesterfield are used in the right proportions—that's a very important matter.

These good tobaccos in Chesterfield are blended and cross-blended—welded together; that, too, helps to make a milder cigarette with better taste.

A CLEAN PAGE

Yes, yesterday is just another memory. It is the past semester. With it is a memory of work well done or otherwise. Whether this memory be pleasant or unpleasant—it is just a discarded old shoe we either wore well or abused. Did we go bankrupt last semester? Then let's close accounts and begin all over again in our new ledger. Did we go to sleep yesterday? If so, let's snap out of it and do a real honest day's work every day from now on. Let's play fair with Life.

After all, Life is just a benevolent old bookkeeper who ever so often totals up our records and then enters us on a clean page, giving us a new start with which we may balance the evils on the old bill with the good that can be done in the present.

Many of us were slothful in last semester's work. We didn't do as much studying as we might have done. Few of us cared to be book-worms, that's true; but did all of us do even the minimum amount of work? Perhaps we didn't, but what of it? That's past—just another bowl of spilt milk that already has too much water in it—a good alarm clock, beckoning us to crawl out and get a good cold shower. Then tackle the problems with renewed vigor. Shake off that infernal drowsiness.

Some courses really tried pretty hard and couldn't make the grade, but that is no reason we should develop inferiority complexes or "I can't." We can do it. We are as big as the problem. All we need to do is try a little harder and show world we are bigger than the problem. Remember, men who resolve to do something and fail are infinitely better than those who try to do nothing and succeed.

THE RACE

"A hare and a tortoise ran a race . . . and the tortoise won." Everybody has heard this fable of Aesop's and has been handed down to us as being the clearest illustration of how the race does not always go to the swiftest, but to the steadiest.

The rabbit, Aesop tells us, eagerly accepted the challenge to run against a tortoise in a race. But his eagerness soon waned, and he confidently stopped for nap. He awoke after a time to make a frantic dash for the tape. He was too late, though, for Mr. Tortoise's steady plod had put him there ahead.

Mr. Rabbit had resorted to some quick work of the contest. Then he foolishly thought he had plenty of time to loaf—and was disgraced by defeat. His crafty opponent admitted that he was not able to sprint in brilliant dashes or cover extraordinarily long distances. He did know, though, that his best gait would get him here, and he used it all the time—no let-ups. To the amazement of all the forest, his challenge was successful.

A track coach would never teach a quarter-miler to sit down and rest while the others ran to the second curve. He might start then and do some pretty sprinting, but he'd be way behind in that race.

The engineer of the "Crescent Limited" might figure he could stop five minutes telling his sweetheart goodbye and make up the time later, but he'd hardly do it. It would knock him down half a dozen rungs on his ladder of success. He knows to keep his engine running on schedule. [illegible] get begun, and it's power that all books should have.

a race worth winning. We lose it, we lose our time. We lose our self-respect if we run it half-heartedly. We gain knowledge—which mankind has ever sought, and Truth—the object of philosophy's quest, and Wisdom—placed by Solomon above all riches. And just for our having striven diligently, we gain immeasurably, and merit Kiplings

"If you can fill each golden minute
With sixty-seconds worth of distance run,
Yours is the earth—and everything that's in it;
And what is more, you are a MAN, my son."

No, the race is not to the swiftest, but to the eternally diligent. Why not begin it tonight with some real, honest-to-goodness work? —C. H.

THE POWER OF THE PRESS

Some people maintain that "the power of the press" is just a catch-phrase, that it has no meaning off the stage, in short, that there is no such thing. There is such a thing, however, and its power is felt in our everyday life. It has pardoned criminals, elected Presidents, broken up graft rings, and exposed vice. This "power of the press" is the force that newspapers exert in moulding and controlling human thought. Like all power, its effect depends upon the use the man in control puts it to. He can use it for his own selfish gain or he can be a beneficent despot and use it for the good of the people.

If the paper is headed by an honest, upright man its power for good is increased a hundred-fold. It means that the public will get honest news, unembellished yet complete, upon which to form its conclusions. This should be a solemn trust for newspapers to adhere to but many papers think little of it. The paper will be a civic aid in exposing graft and crime. Seabury's investigation in New York could not have lasted as long as it did if the decent newspapers of the city hadn't banded together to support it. A modern newspaper, put out by an educated staff, is itself educational. It has departments on all phases of home life, and these departments are a source of information to many. The last result that I shall mention,—there are any number that space and time prohibit taking up here,—is that a decent paper stimulates thought. Clear, non—partisan, unbiased editorials are the best means of doing this. The editorial sheet constitutes a good many folk's only reading matter outside of the actual news. This page is a great factor in how the "power" shall be used and is a direct indication of the newspaper's stand on all issues.

When a newspaper is controlled by a group of men who want profits and resort to sensationalism to get them, the power is bad. The paper then glorifies crime, it gives headlines and front-page pictures to murders and gangster killings. It plays up the crook and leads many an ignorant youth to follow in the same path. You may be sure that any news that you get in a paper published by one of these "sensation syndicates" is grossly overrated. A matter of little importance will produce headlines, and a shipwreck in which 20 were injured will offer to the world a "scare-head" apprising the world of the loss of 35 lives! These papers tend to condone immorality. There is bound to be some article about a bed-room shooting and maybe even a posed picture will appear to make it perfectly clear to the readers. The attitude of the paper is always maudlin. It never fails to support the under-dog, whether he deserves to be under or not. It is full of a weak and sloppy sentimentality that disgusts an intelligent and discriminating reader.

The individual himself plays a small but important part in this "power" problem. He buys a paper that exerts its power for one side or the other. If you want to throw your weight in favor of the paper striving for betterment, if you hate cheap sentimentality and the glorification of crime, and, above all, if you respect your own intellect, by all means buy the paper in your community that is run by clean men who think of something besides the perversion of truth and sensation selling.

"THE WATERS UNDER THE EARTH"

A Book Review by H. Calvert

Martha Ostenso's "The Waters Under the Earth" appeals greatly in the unique way in which it is written and the trueness of the story when applied to real life.

The story of the novel deals with a stern, over-righteous father. He rules his family with an iron hand and forms a rigid set or moral: for them. With these he subdues the spirits of his children and wife, that is, with the exception of the youngest.

The book deals with the hardships confronted by each member of his family individually. The author takes the life of each main character separately and tells his story. In doing this she is able to show the wrongs wrought by the selfish parent upon his offsprings—the evils of planning other people's lives for them, thereby crushing their hopes and ambitions for their coveted life work. This causes them to do things to get even or make his rule which end in unhappiness.

Most interesting is the youngest member of the family, who lets nothing stand in the way of her happiness and ambitions. She is a worry to her father in being so independent. She does not openly defy him but does as she pleases about most things. She scolds her brothers and sisters for letting their father quench the fires of their ambitions. She attempts to brighten the lives of the household with aiding them in their daily problems.

The book appeals because it puts into words the thoughts one has when seeing the father over-riding the ambitions and desires of his child. It is an expression of those fathers who will not accept the standards of modern youth and restrain his children from them, an expression of those children who are too sensible to subjugate themselves to the steam rule of a radical parent. The fact that the book adheres to real life in endless [illegible] the desired

"Chesterfields Satisfy"

WHEN smokers keep buying the same cigarette day after day... it's a pretty good sign that they're getting what they want... mildness, better taste—a smoke that's always the same.

So we're going right on making Chesterfields just as we always have ... selecting choice, ripe tobaccos ... ageing them ... blending and cross-blending them... making them into cigarettes in the most scientific ways that are known.

As long as we do these things we know that smokers will continue to say, "They Satisfy". For that's what people are saying about Chesterfields.

If you smoke, why not find out about them? A package or two will tell you the whole story.

VOL. 1 FEBRUARY 1, 1933 NO. 1

NEW NEWS FEATURE FOR Y.M.C.A.

It is space has been granted by the editor of The Blue Stocking to give interested information concerning Y. M. C. A. work. From week to week, we will give in this section, news of interest to all.

In behalf of those who have charge of the "Y," we want to thank the editor, T. H. Waggle, for his generous offer of this space.

We hoped that cooperation will be given to us to make this feature one of the best.

The last "Y" meeting proved a very good one. Those present had a general discussion on magazines, that should be of interest, and why. One of the important parts of the program was that it was short and snappy. These are the kinds of programs that we like.

No announcement has been made as to the program for next Thursday night.

For the freshmen who signed the "Y" pledge, membership cards will be issued in a few days.

Religious Activities

There will be a special meeting in the auditorium tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon at one-thirty. Every one is invited to attend.

Under the auspices of the Ministerial club, Rev. C. B. Betts, pastor of the A. R. P. church in this city, will give a message. Mr. Betts will talk on the latest finds of the Appraisal Commission of the Laymen's Foreign Mission Inquiry. This subject is one that is being discussed very much at the present time.

A cordial welcome awaits each one of you at this meeting.

"You do not get anywhere if you don't make a start. You may take the wrong road and have to retrace your steps, but you will finally get somewhere. It is better to start wrong than not to start at all."

"The friendship that does not inspire you to be better and finer in every way is not worthy of the name."

"Philip A. Roberts, of Carthage, N. C., is the president of the student body at the seminary, and also served as student president at Presbyterian college, where he graduated in 1930. The holder of three letters in basketball and three in baseball, the captain of the rifle team and a captain in the R. O. T. C. unit, he was voted the most popular man on the campus. Since coming to the seminary Mr. Roberts has given a large portion of his time to the Seventeenth Street mission, of which he is superintendent."

During the intermission, Dr. B. O. Whitten, head of the institution, welcomed the club, and congratulated it upon its work. He said that the Training school was happy to have it for the first program and to give it a send-off. He also made a few introductory remarks about the program that the members of the institution music department rendered under the direction of Miss Ellen Copeland. The order of their performance follows:

Both were played by the rhythmic orchestra and interpreted in dance by two Hungarian soldiers.

Sports Hangover

P. C. has always been noted for sportsmanship in athletics. Well — it seems as though this spirit does not extend throughout the other activities. Our good friends, Pinson and Barron, have, in an unsportsmanlike manner, printed some personal affairs of different members of the student body in their foolish little column. The buttes of these harsh attacks, heretofore, have had no opportunity for repartee. Well — we've got a column now!

No news on basketball—except the rumor that the athletic commission has ordered stilts for the P. C. midgets.

Our "leather-pushers" are still pushing. Clemson's next. The nightmare at Carolina won't stop those boys. With fighting hearts and grim determination, the battlers are preparing to ambush that Tiger at the gym on February 17th.

Bolick's eye is coming along nicely. Coach Johnson took him over to Greenville Saturday to see a specialist. The report was favorable—he'll be ready for Clemson.

The famous "Ramblers" of Notre Dame haven't got much on our track team. The Presbyterian speedsters are taking on plenty of territory this year. They will meet the University of Florida at Gainesville, and the University of Georgia at Athens—not to speak of the Penn Relays at Phillie, and the Southeastern A. A. U. meet in Atlanta.

By the way, those aforementioned tracksters are rounding into shape.

The forgotten women—the co-eds. Only once before has any mention of these fair damsels graced the pages of The Blue Stocking. These ladies of "basketballery" are doing right well. Luck to you, lassies.

Hot news! A real "scoop"! Our baseball team is going to get new uniforms!

Today's "pain-in-the-neck" — the authors of "Haven't You Heard?"

Purely Personal Piffle

Among remarkable accomplishments I would like to add "Bunt" Wood's ability to walk like he's falling from an elevated seat. . . . Henry Dillard, when humorously inclined, cackles like a hen. . . . The ever faithful Ransom has an antiquated plod . . . Leland Young, in his more thoughtful aspects, reminds one of the inimitable Dr. Jones. . . . Ben Covington has the sure, exalted air of a king that only Covington and Kings can achieve. . . . Mahaffey, when viewed from a distance with veiled eyes, bears striking resemblance to Joseph Hergesheimer. . . . The ever effesvescent Willard Jones in locomotion brings to mind a very proudful juvenile who has just won the Friday afternoon speaking contest. . . . Hart Odom has an artistic cigarette technique that somehow shows definite Garbo influence.

By their language you shall recognize them. Do these remind you of anyone?

"Is that the best you can do?"
"Do you think you can get away with that?"
"Daddy, what a big airplane."
"After all, it's come to this."
"Why, haven't you heard?"
"I am tired of being called—"
"I'll tell you about my experiences this summer some time."
"Gentlemen, it gives me a great deal of pleasure and personal satisfaction "
"Speakng strictly in scientific terms."
"Fine day, isn't it?"

A Needed Law

The man-with-one-joke should be required by law to keep a list of the people he has told it to.

Smile once a day even if you have to hire someone to tickle you.

Food For Thought

A dead hero or a living coward.

Thoughts While Strolling

Despite Dr. McSween's entreaties, the inhabitants of Smyth show little evidence of pioneer blood . . . Most wayfarers to the Science Hall traverse the short cut with a remarkable display of unconcern, while others become conscious of the misdemeanor half-way en route and, changing their course, strike out boldly in the general direction of Spencer. . . Still others compromise while only treading the edges of the path. . . To these perhaps unartistic eyes the path lends a welcome touch of rustic simplicity to the campus . . . The Buick of the inestimable Sylvester always parked at the corner of Smyth adds immeasurably to the general prosperity of the scene . . . The indispensable campus crew has, after a long period of labor and untiring efforts, completed a second of their vast and magnificent projects of construction . . . the surplus earth has not been cleared away yet but—Ill we ought to feel infinitely determination, the battlers are prepared to be ready.

THE WEEK'S BASKETBALL REVIEW

Maroons Nose Out Blue Hose

The College of Charleston basketball team, after an unsuccessful series of game on their home court, broke into the winning column with a 55 to 49 victory over the Presbyterian Blue Stockings at Clinton Tuesday night.

In the fastest and closest game seen on the local court this season the visitors barely eked out a victory in their first up-state tour. Led by Johnson, a brilliant and speedy guard, who covered the floor in a dazzling exhibition of dribbling and defensive work, and Silcox, the most accurate long distance shot seen here this year, the Maroons started off like a house afire. The midget Presbyterians, who were playing a team nearer their own size than they have played before, soon matched the Charlestonians basket for basket, and made the game close throughout.

Ross was the most accurate shot for the locals during the early stages of the game, but Adams found the basket for a total of twelve points before the game was over. Nettles went wild in the second half to lead the scoring for his team with a final score of sixteen points, and Collins, Ferguson, and Lynn eached chalked up four. This was Lynn's first game since a recent attack of influenza, and his defensive work aided the team greatly in the latter stages of the game.

Bramlett, for the visitors, was high scorer of the evening with nineteen points, but his running mate, Silcox, was the most accurate and spectacular man on the floor, garnering a point less than Bramlett. Johnson's unorthodox method of shooting as he leaped into the air was a feature of the game, but the little fellow was not as successful in scoring these shots as he has been in previous games.

Geechy Adams, a Charleston boy, gave the team from his home town no end of worry when he began dropping in his quick shots at the basket, and with the short shots of Nettles and the others the Presbyterains were within four points of the Charlestonians when Silcox scored a difficult shot from the corner of the court to end the game, with his team six points ahead.

Clemson Downs P. C.

Presbyterian lost to the Clemson Tigers, 38-25, last Saturday night. Playing a team that was from six to twelve inches taller, man to man, they clung tenaciously to the Jungaleers and made them fight for their victory.

The first half was a see-saw affair. The Blue Stockings held the lead for the first few minutes. Then the Tigers sprinted and the score for the remainder of the half wavered between the two teams. Just before the whistle Clemson rallied slightly and the half ended 19-16 in their favor.

Early in the second half, the Calvinists began a shooting spree ,but were soon forced into defensive play. The final whistle showed a score of 38-25.

Adams and Ferguson were probably the most outstanding for P. C. For Clemson, Dillard, Craig and Simons were best.

Co-eds Beat Laurens High

The Presbyterian college co-eds showed marked improvement to win from Laurens by a score of 26-31, Friday night. The game throughout was fiercely contested by both teams. P. C.'s center zone, with Robinson at center and Prather as her side at side center, was particularly outstanding. Both guards and forwards showed continued improvement. Kennedy was high scorer, with Copeland second.

The co-eds have a game here [illegible] on February 25.

STUDENTS HEAR DR. EGGLESTON

President of Hampden-Sidney College Speakss On Finding the Truth In Jesus Christ.

Dr. J. D. Eggleston, president of Hampden-Sidney college, Farmville, Va., addressed the Presbyterian college student body Friday morning. The school which he heads is small but claims the honor of having more living alumni in "Who's Who" in comparison to the number of students than any other college or university in the United States.

Dr. Eggleston spoke largely upon finding the truth in Jesus Christ, and used as his theme the verse, "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." He made a strong protest against the use of this verse by so many people disregarding the thought that precedes it. The condition is that we must continue in the words of Christ.

He gave a personal example, taking an incident from his own life. Dr. Eggleston told how he had once thrown away his belief in Christianity and turned to the principles of Darwin and other free-thinkers. He emphasized the fact that arguments taken from the Bible refuted his new theories and turned him back to the Christian religion.

P. C. GLEE CLUB WELL RECEIVED

Gives Three Concerts On First Tour of Season. Others Are Planned By Group.

The Presbyterian college glee club, under the direction of Dr. S. M. Huntley, returned to the campus Monday after a week-end trip, giving concerts at Cheraw, S. C., Maxton, N. C., and Florence, S. C. There were unusually large and appreciative audiences at Cheraw and Maxton, and the hospitality extended to the boys in both towns was cordial and gracious. At cheraw the orchestra played for an informal dance given in the high school gymnasium. After the performance at the Presbyterian church college at Maxton, there was a reception in the recreation room which a number of girls from Flora McDonald college attended.

Sunday night in the Presbyterian church at Florence the club sang before a large congregation which filled the auditorium. Dr. McSween gave the evening address at the church, using as his subject "A Defense of Modern Youth." The members of the club were received with enthusiasm and entertained cordially while in the city.

It has been announced that the club will give its regular performance at the Florida Street school some time in the near future and will, in all probability, make two more concert tours during the year. One has been announced for the week-end of Feb. 18th and 19th. Concerts will be given at Chester and Charlotte.

Name Tennis Men After Try-Outs

Under the direction of W. J. McCutchen, captain, the annual tennis tournament has just been completed. After many hard fought matches the following team has been selected: McCutchen, W. J., Ransom, W. M., Pepper, C., McCutchen, C. F., and Gregg, E. M.

Three of these men were members of last year's squad and, with the addition of Ransom, a senior who plays a steady game, and McCutchen, C., who has a terrific drive, one of the best teams in the history of the school is expected.

One hour each afternoon is being devoted to special practice under the coaching of Prof. R. L. Coe.

Several matches are being arranged by Coach Johnson with colleges in South Carolina, but it is hoped that other matches in North Carolina and Georgia can be made.

Greenville Doctor Speaks Thursday

Dr. W. S. Judy, of Greenville, will address the Chi Beta Phi in a called meeting Thursday night at 7:30.

It is through the efforts of Dr. T. J. Peake, local physician, that Dr. Judy's services have been obtained. He will give an illustrated lecture on the use of the X-ray in medicine .

This is an open house meeting and everyone is urged to attend the lecture, which will be on one of the most interesting fields of modern medicine.

Work Improves Looks Of Campus

The campus has been greatly improved during the last few days by the working crew made possible by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, which has allotted funds in various counties throughout the country. These men were secured for this work on the campus through the efforts of Dr. J. H. Davis and Coach W. A. Johnson.

Much cleaning and general improvement has been done.

Pi Kappa Phis Honor New Men

The Pi Kappa Phi fraternity held its regular annual party in honor of the new initiates Friday night. The affair was held at the country club and was chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Bailey, Captain and Mrs. R. E. Wysor and Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Grafton. There were present, besides representatives from each of the college fraternities, a number of out-of-town guests.

The reception room was attractively decorated with Valentine hearts, and on the walls the fraternity colors of gold and white formed in large letters "Pi Kappa Phi." The room was heated by an immense log fire. Punch and cakes were served to the guests at intervals.

The ladies received Valentine favors in the form of large candy hearts.

Despite the bad weather, the event was delightful and enjoyed by everyone.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

The regular meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was held Thursday evening at 6:30. J. E. Greer had charge of the program.

A subject of interest to all was discussed, "What is wrong with religion?" Several important phases of this subject were brought to attention.

The "Y" will hold its scheduled meeting on next Thursday night.

A set of slides showing our mission work will be shown on February 23, as the program for that week.

The new Christian leadership fraternity recently formed on the campus is making definite plans for the remainder of the year. The fraternity is known as Delta Chi Alpha.

IDEALS

Ideals, most of us have in our mental visions, sometimes unconsciously. They are our conceptions of what seem to us perfection, and they exist wholly in the realm of unreality. They are mentioned, but seldom discussed, for they cannot be generalized. Sometimes we find the personification of an ideal but never do we attain it, for when we think we have it, it has faded and there is nothing in its place.

It is dangerous for us to touch what we think are our ideals for as Flaubert says, "the gilt might come off on our fingers." Wordsworth once, on a trip into the highlands of Scotland, saw the embodiment of his conception of the perfect highland girl. He gazed at her from afar and wrote a poem to her, but he did not go close; he kept her at a distance. He desired that he should keep the memory of her simple beauty as it was. Somehow this idea of the poet seems to me a beautiful one and we should learn from it that we must look at our ideals from afar off, that we must strive not to shatter the dream.

We need our dreams for they bring us joy and relief from the monotony of living. But we must not spend our lives dreaming, and we must never try to actually grasp the flimsy happiness of the dream. Let the dream be separated from our general life. And just as we hold the dreams away from us let us place our ideal high up and clothe it in a mellow, golden light. It will then keep us just beyond its reach and we may enjoy the anticipation from a distance because it is so fragile a thing, it is so light a thing and it is gilded, and should we be able to touch it a tiny bit of gilt might come off on our fingers and we would see with disillusioned eyes into nothingness.

The man who thinks that the world owes him a living wants it a loaf at a time.—The (Columbia, S. C.) State.

PERSONALITY IN A HANDSHAKE

Handshaking is a custom which has been handed down to us through ages upon ages. It is an expression of friendliness and cordiality. Perhaps the sentiments now express by the handshake were in ancient times manifested in other ways. We have heard of Indians smoking the "peace pipe," of certain African tribes "rubbing noses," and of others bowing to the earth. All of these expressed peacefulness and a friendly spirit. Today, in civilized countries, the handshake has taken the place of former customs. It has now come to the point where we invariably judge personality by handshaking, for it is very true that a handshake reveals personality.

There are two types of people with whom we all despise to shake hands. Everyone has encountered the person who offers you a limp, fishy hand that feels like a dishrag. It is always my desire to throw a hand like this as far away from me as possible. A poor attempt like this form handshake represents either a person of negative character or one who affects to be bored with the world. They suffer from a lack of personality or from the absurd idea that they are being sophisticated. Then, there is the jolly good fellow who nearly wrings the life out of your unfortunate hand, while he knocks your breath out with a terrific slap on the back. After a few times of this, you consciously avoid this "strong man," if your hand isn't already paralyzed. A person of this type is more than likely suffering from an inferiority complex. He hasn't any strong or attractive qualities, so he must give the impression of being a "super-man" by torturing others with the power of his handshake. It is hard to believe that weakness of character and lack of a winning personality, are the causes for these two abominable kinds of hand shaking, but they are.

One of the rare pleasures in my life is to meet and know a person who has a sincere and friendly handshake. Everyone appreciates a warm and true grasp of the hand. There is something unusually likable about this type of person who reveals his true personality in this manner. I can never recall disliking anyone who had a true hand shake, but I feel a nearness to him. Would that more of us had friendly handshakes. E. A.

WORDS

"A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in network of silver."—Proverbs 25:11.

It is a postulate that people in this world are judged by the way they dress and talk. It is an almost certain fact that when people first meet an individual they judge that one by the clothes he or she wears. The attire worn by anyone seems to indicate whether that person is rich or poor, slovenly or orderly, possessed of good or bad taste, thoughtful or careless, stingy or generous. In fact, thousands of thoughts flash through the mind when one looks at a person and the frame surrounding that person, which is called dress.

Correct speech is the dress in which one clothes his thoughts. If persons use coarse or slovenly speech, it is indicative of the same kind of minds. If one "murders English" he is adjudged by those who know the English language, either as a careless one who does not make use of the knowledge he possesses, or as a poor ignorant who has not had the opportunity of learning how to speak correctly. Incorrect speech very often makes one as distasteful to cultured people just as ragged clothes bar one from going to beautiful receptions. A person with a cultivated ear for correct English actually suffers mental agony when hearing the beautiful English tongue mutilated. Just as a lover of a beautiful picture or object does not like to see it marred in any way, so a lover of good speech does not like to see his language marred, for words are to him works of art.

Truly speech is the index of the mind. Everyone should cultivate good speech. The dictionary is one's best friend in teaching him to speak correct English and in giving him an understanding of the words in this language. People have laughed at the old lady who read the dictionary from A to Z while her husband read the Bible from the world's creation to its end; but there is no better way to acquire flowing and rich robes to dress our thoughts than in seeking the dictionary's aid frequently. Some people may suffer because of monetary poverty but there are few who need suffer for lack of words in which to clothe their thoughts if they will only seek daily new words with which to express themselves.

A man with the attainment of a large vocabulary has a singular accomplishment that no vicissitudes of fortune can wrest from him. He is a hero to be admired and toasted, a man to be envied, an artist capable of painting masterpieces of verbal pulchritude. Such should be the goal of everyone. For what is more to be sought after in expressing oneself than to be "prompt without being stubborn, to refute without argument, and to clothe great matters in a motley garb." —H. C.

The wolf has been at our door so long she has had a litter of pups.

A new dance is called "Technocracy." Just a bunch of staggering figures, no doubt.—The Atlanta Journal.

IMPROVEMENT?

We have been wondering why someone doesn't build a path from Smyth to the Dining Hall and to the Administration Building and improve paths generally all over the campus. We do not mind being pioneers as long as we don't have to bog in mud to our knees whenever there is a slight rain. Why not lay aside the conventionality of straight walks and add to the beauty of the campus with winding paths of gravel, or anything substantial, that would take us where we are naturally inclined to walk. The few cement walks that we have are but slightly used, and in bad weather merely serve as aqueducts for water. We have noticed that on other campuses this practice of laying convenient paths has made for beauty and improvement. It is certain that the students would make use of the ways that they have been pioneers in forming if they were only improved.

The physical appearance counts for a great deal; but it is hard to keep clothes clean when there is so much mud and dirt to muss them. We have a military inspection every week and we feel that it is almost impossible to keep our uniforms even decent in rainy weather when the campus is so slushy. Sometimes one feels that a bathing suit would be the appropriate costume to wear around the campus.

It is quite a fitting time to think of construction work on the campus when we have secured men paid through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. They have done a great deal toward improvement but much more can be done to really bring the work toward more useful ends.

This editorial has been written not from a critical viewpoint but rather from a constructive one. In conclusion, the work needs to be done, the labor is at hand, and nature furnishes the material. Let's strike while the iron is hot.

"Will beer come back?" asks an editor. Well, if you don't drink it too warm.—The Atlanta Journal.

"The Kennel Murder Case"

A Book Review By Henry Calvert

S. S. Van Dine in this his latest novel has given his readers an unusual plot as only he is able.

Beginning with the murder of an old man, a collector of Oriental ceramics, who has not too many friends, the web of mystery begins to tangle, bringing suspects from a learned Chinese cook to an art-buying Italian.

Before the inevitable Philo Vance can find an end to start unraveling the mystery, another murder occurs in the same household. This tangles things even more.

With a third murder and a broken vase, a stilletto, and a Scottish terrier bitch confusing things, the mystery thickens to a climax. Only the great Vance, with his unique knowledge of ceramics and of canines could possibly solve the mystery and untangle the plot. This is one of Van Dine's best accomplishments.

Sports Hangover

Oh! What a "head" this week! P. C. hasn't won a basketball game [illegible]. However, considering the general "quat-low" tendency of the squad, they have done remarkably well. In the two games this week— Clemson and College of Charleston—the team showed marked improvement. The last half of the Clemson game was good, and the Charleston contest was interesting throughout. Charleston's match proved that he was a good sport when he sent in substitutes in the closing minutes of the game with only ten points lead. They hadn't won a game this season either.

Both of our freshman basketball teams are good. We haven't yet determined which is the first team. Also, the C.'s ladies of the court are still carrying on. They defeated Laurens high the other night.

More members of the student body turn out for the girl's high school basketball practice than for varsity games. This may be spirit, but not the kind that P. C. is noted for.

I hear that the race for president of the student body will be run between "Wee" Wyman and Alex McCulloch. Luck to you, "Wee"!

The grim reaper of college athletics, "Ol' Passing Grades," dealt a severe blow to Presbyterian's teams this year. Many good athletes on the campus cannot participate in any more sports because they failed to pass enough work. Too bad.

Watch Coach McMillian's relay team this year.

The boxing bouts with Clemson next Friday night will be good. Bolick will be missed, of course, but Coach Johnson is very fortunate in having a man like Jimmy Horton to fill his shoes.

If the Clemson boxers beat Carolina Saturday night, and we whip Clemson next Friday night, we'll tie Clemson and Carolina for the state championship. Hot dog!

Splash! Splash! Splash! What's that? Well, this is news! P. C. is going to have a swimming team! "Deep Sea" Brewer is the coach. More about these mermen later.

Coach Johnson needs a couple more good pitchers for his baseball team. The mighty arms of "Pyorrhea" McCutchen and "Georgie Earnshaw" Montgomery will be dependable, but two hurlers can't pitch the whole schedule.

P. C. is the greatest place in the world for organizing new sports. Squiff-ball and various other games have been talked of for some time. However, a brand new sport has recently come to our campus. It's "Furniture-moving."

Tobacco to smoke right has to be a different kind of tobacco from that used in cigarettes... and it has to be made by an entirely different process...

OUT in Kentucky, where they have pretty women, fast horses, and blue grass, there grows a tobacco called White Burley. It doesn't grow anywhere else in the world.

There is a type of this White Burley that is best suited for pipe smoking. It is neither too thick nor too thin. It is not light and chaffy; at the same time, it is not rank or strong. "U. S. Type 31" is the government classification for White Burley.

Since no other pipe tobacco has yet been found which seems to equal White Burley, this is what we use in making Granger Rough Cut.

Next, we use the Wellman Method, a famous 1870 method of making pipe tobacco, to give Granger its fine flavor and fragrance. Then, too, Granger is "Rough Cut"—just like they used to "whittle" their tobacco off a plug with a jack-knife. It smokes cool, lasts longer and never gums a pipe.

And finally, we want to sell Granger for 10 cents. Good tobacco—right process—cut right. So we put Granger in a sensible soft foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke the package.

Granger has not been on sale very long, but it has grown to be a popular smoke. Folks seem to like it.

There will be no R. O. T. C. rifle matches this year. The number turning in the scores to fight were so few that it was decided to call them off altogether. This is the first time in several years that the Army has not put on its show in the arena.

The rifle team will fire the two final stages of the Corps Area matches this week. The firing last week was the best that they have done in any preceding match. They will also fire challenge matches with several colleges.

ILLUSION:

Right before your very eyes the man of magic draws rabbits, vegetables, flowers, fruits—even babies—all from an empty tub! What an astonishing fellow he is!

EXPLANATION:

The assorted rabbits, babies, carrots, cabbages, ribbons and other magical "props" are not created by magic. The tub has a false bottom that is conveniently displaced, and numberless wonderful things spring to life in the magician's nimble fingers. They do literally "spring" because they are made to compress into the bottom of the tub, taking their natural shape as the magician lifts them out.

IT'S FUN TO BE FOOLED
...IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

Tricks are legitimate on the stage but not in business. Here's one that has been used in cigarette advertising...the illusion that blending is everything in a cigarette.

EXPLANATION: Blending is important...but it makes a lot of difference what is blended.

Inferior tobaccos can be blended to cover up their humble origin. But your taste soon detects the trick.

The proper use of blending is to bring out the full "round" flavor of mild, high-grade tobaccos. It's the costliness of the tobaccos, as well as the blending, that counts.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent by others in the attempt to discover just how Camels are blended. The blend is important.

But all the while Camel spends millions more for choice tobaccos...to insure your enjoyment.

Light up a Camel. Relax, while the delicate blue smoke floats about you. Enjoy to the full the pleasure that comes from costlier tobaccos.

Keep Camels always handy...in the air-tight, welded Humidor Pack.

PRESBYTERIAN-CLEMSON FIGHT CARD FURNISHES THRILLERS

Bob Sims, Heavyweight, and Clark, Lightweight, Turn In Victories For P. C. One Bout Ends In Draw, While Tigers Win Other Five.

The Clemson leather-pushers won a well-earned decision over the Presbyterian College Blue Stockings here Friday night, five bouts to two. Every bout was a whirlwind affair, with plenty of action. They were so packed with action that even though the spectators were asked to refrain from cheering while the pugilists were actually fighting, there were times when the gym was in an uproar as the boys in the squared circle mixed it up with reckless abandon.

The best part of the matches was the way the P. C. men came back to carry the fight after being hurt badly by their opponents. Every Presbyterian man, with the possible exception of one, carried the fight to the Tigers.

Sims Wins

Bob Sims gave the best exhibition of intestinal fortitude witnessed here in many a day. Outweighed 20 pounds, Davis of Clemson, Sims was knocked down in the first round to be the count of nine. It was evident that he was hurt badly. He rose from the floor fighting, landing a right on Davis's chin for the first blow after the knockdown. From this point on he carried the fight, maneuvering the heavier opponent to land often with both hands. Both boys showed that they were willing to mix it and mix it they did. They landed blows time and time again that could be heard all over the house. Sims did a fine job of winning from Davis.

The only other P. C. man to win his fight was Bill Clark. Clark presented a two-fisted attack that left Blitch bewildered. Bill would wade in to his man swinging both hands, landing lefts and rights frequently. He was never in a bad way. Only once or twice did Blitch hurt him. Clark is destined to become a great fighter.

Capt. Jimmie Horton and Capt. Egginson of Clemson, gave the fans a real fight. Never was there a let-up in the three rounds these boys fought. Both men would bore in, throwing leather until one clinched, then they would back off only to come back in fighting. Neither man deserved to lose and even though the decision was unpopular a draw was probably right.

The rest of the fights were clearly Clemson's, with the exception of the middleweight bout. Parker could have gotten at least a draw.

In the bantamweight match, Seagle was getting along fine, he was landing often, until Lide bounced a right on Seagle's chin as the fighters

Erskine Takes P. C. Into Camp

Presenting a team with only one regular in the line-up, Presbyterian went down fighting to an undefeated Erskine quintet Tuesday night, 51-18. The make-shift P. C. team started off with a bang, bagging several goals in the first few minutes to jump into a lead. At the half the Flying Fleet was leading, 18-10.

When the second half began, the superior offensive of the Erskine team showed up and they began ringing up goals right and left. For P. C., Lynn and Collins showed up well, Collins shooting 15 of Presbyterian's 18 points. Miller, Smonton and Bolton played well for Erskine.

Students Vote To Aid Association

At a student body meeting last Wednesday morning a motion was passed to do away with Sunday night supper for a month and to give the money thus saved to the athletic association.

H. H. Ferguson, acting on the suggestion of several students, presented the motion and it was passed almost unanimously.

The boys who take meals up town and the day students are to make donations to the cause, the minimum amount to be paid being fixed at fifty cents.

The amount which the association will receive from the suppers will be near $120.

Glee Club Plans Another Trip

The Presbyterian College glee club will make its second tour of the year, leaving on Thursday, March 1, and giving two performances, both in Georgia towns. The first appearance will probably be at Toccoa and the second at Gainesville. It was at first thought there would be four stops, but the number has finally dwindled to two. The club has been practicing hard since the last trip into upper South Carolina, and has learned a new number.

A trip to Charlote has been proposed for some time in the near future but plans for it are not definitely laid. It is probable that the club will return to the college immediately after the performance, if the trip materializes.

The regular program will be given next Thursday night at Cross Hill.

MAIL BOXES TO BE INSTALLED

Necessity For Better System of Handling Mail Brings Action By Student Body.

A movement is on foot to install individual mail boxes to replace the present system which has proved very inadequate and unsatisfactory.

Discussion was brought up last Thursday morning as to the probability of getting the boxes. A motion was made and passed whereby each member of the student body would pay fifty cents as box rent for the rest of the semester. A committee composed of J. N. Dendy, B. E. MacLean, and W. M. Farrington was appointed to see the president of the college and find out what could be done about the ...

The committee has ... and reported Friday ... and they had seen the post ... and letters had ... to several firms ... to make arrangements for purchase of the boxes.

As the situation now stands the students can get their mail only at certain times in the day. The principal objection is that under the present system mail has been tampered with. The mail clerks say they dislike the situation even more than the student body.

Students Miss Talk By Doctor Judy

Dr. W. S. Judy, Greenville doctor who was to have addressed the open house meeting of Chi Beta Phi Tuesday night on the subject of the use of X-ray in medicine, failed to appear at the announced time and disappointed a fair sized audience which had gathered to hear the lecture.

The meeting was originally scheduled for 7:30 o'clock Thursday night, but due to the conflict with the P. C.-Wofford basketball game was moved up to 6:30. Announcement to this effect was made at supper but evidently Dr. Judy was not notified of the change in time.

The crowd which had gathered to hear the lecture watied until 7:15, but drifted away before the speaker arrived.

Pepper Is Lost To Tennis Team

Claude Pepper, after winning a coveted place on the tennis team, decides in his enthusiasm to buy himself an expensive tennis racket. He moves his residence from Spencer to Laurens dormitory and takes the difference in the room fees to buy the coveted racket. Pepper no sooner receives the racket than his doctor tells him that an injury which he sustained several years ago would prevent him from playing tennis any longer. Pepper gets confidential with the Dr. but to no avail, the decision remains the same.

Pepper is one of the leading tennis players on the campus, and will be greatly missed from the team.

Columbia Doctors To Lecture Here

In carrying out the plan of the college administration to bring speakers to the campus to give lectures which will be of interest to the students, Dr. Wyman and Dr. Josey, of Columbia, will each lecture in the college chapel on Wednesday. The first will come at a special chapel program Wednesday morning and the other will be Wednesday night at 7:30.

Glee Club Benefit For Athletic Body

The Presbyterian College glee club will give its annual performance in Clinton next Friday night at the Florida Street school at eight o'clock.

The performance will be for the benefit of the college athletic association and the proceeds will be used in purchasing baseball uniforms and equipment.

The Clinton Hi-Y team has been coached by Fat Ross, who also plays guard on the team. Others on the squad are Boland, Ellis, Daniels, and Addison.

Blue Hose Meet Clemson Tonight

The Blue Stocking basketball team will play the Clemson basketeers at Clemson tonight. This will be the second meeting of the two teams this season, the Tigers having defeated the Hose in an engagement here several weeks ago, 83-25. The freshman team will also have a game with the Tiger Cubs.

An entirely revamped team will face the Jungaleers in this return engagement. Only Collins and Boggs of the team that played in the initial game will be able to participate tonight.

Twenty-two men, including coaches and managers, left in the college bus at 1:30 this afternoon.

MAIL BOXES

At last after these many years it begins to look as if mail boxes for the students will be a reality. For a fact the present mail delivery isn't working satisfactorily and mail boxes seem to be the only solution of the problem. A committee from the student body has consulted the faculty about the matter and plans are under way for the purchasing and installing of the boxes.

Certainly it seems that after so many petitions and the willingness of the students to pay rent for the boxes that the faculty would take some definite action to secure them. The student body must cooperate if the plans of the committee materialize. This is what it is going to take to get the new system.

It is indeed a shame that our honor system and the past postal delivery system could not work together. It is truly a serious affair, more serious than some unfortunate ones seem to know. However, hardships are being worked on the students in not being able to get mail at their leisure. Some revision in the present plan must be effected. May this revision be the securing of mail boxes.

BOOKS

"He who loveth a book will never want a faithful friend, a wholesome counselor, or an effectual comforter." Borrow.

Books are the memorials of great minds — sepulchres containing the hopes, desires, ambitions, disappointments, and passions of the lives of the past. Images of mankind's emotion and wit and knowledge are stored on the pages of books. It is only for the opening of these covers of leaves that the thoughts of the spiritual lives of men of the distant dead.

When one is young and his mind is receptive he should be much reading, for it is then that he discovers the great books. It is then that one receives the influence they have and enjoys the society they give, the spiritual influence of the greatest and best of our race.

Man's best friends are the books he reads. They are his advisers and his companions of every mood. They influence his character greatly. If these of his friends are to be of the best he must be careful in his choice.

One is, or should be, careful of the human associations and friends he makes. He should be mindful of the influence that these companions may have, even so he must exercise choice of the best taste in the books he reads.

When one becomes a lover of books he gains an infinite host of sympathetic friends who never fail him. They are his advisers in trouble, comforters in sorrow, and companions for his every mood. Books are invaluable; everyone should cultivate their society. —H. C.

GEORGE WASHINGTON

The one heroic figure in our national hall of fame, whose memory transcends all partisanship and sectionalism, is that of George Washington. It will be many years before any other great American soldier or statesman becomes such a figure of national honor. In fact we doubt whether, even after the lapse of ages, our nation will ever have produced another character commanding such universal respect and esteem.

Yet Washington in his lifetime was the target for abuse and vilification such as few Presidents since his day have had to bear. A British traveler and author, writing in 1795, told how many men refused to drink to the President's health at the celebration of his birthday. When Washington retired to private life at the end of his second term as President, one of the foremost of the newspapers then in existence declared that this was a time for public rejoicing, "for the man who is the source of all the misfortunes of our country is this day reduced to a level with his fellow citizens and is no longer possessed of a power to multiply evils upon the United States . . . if ever a nation was deceived by a man the American nation has been deceived by Washington."

Very few men in high place escape such calumny. There is something in human nature which resents the idea that one man is superior to others. But it did not take the American people long to realize that in George Washington they had had a leader who was probably the only man who could have successfully led the revolt against the British domination and establish our nation on an independent basis so sound that the foundations laid by him have never been seriously shaken.

The wisdom of Washington's warnings and admonitions to the young republic of which he was the first President become more and more clearly apparent as time goes on. Particularly at this time we are impressed with his warning to the young nation to avoid entangling alliances with Europe. That was not intended, of course, as an admonition to detach America from the rest of the world; it was rather an admonition that we should maintain friendly relations with all nations and not be allied with some in opposition to others. We think this an opportune time to remind our political leaders and the people of America again of Washington's warning against foreign entanglements.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

The officers of the day and their orderlies for the week are as follows:

Feb. 20—Lt. Col. C. W. Adams, with Corp. Yearout, P. W. as orderly.
Feb. 21—Capt. C. B. Barnwell, with Corp. Elmore, L. O. as orderly.
Feb. 22—Capt. G. W. Ewing, with Corp. McCaskill, J. as orderly.
Feb. 23—Major T. A. Howell, with Sgt. Lynn, R. D. as orderly.
Feb. 24—Capt. A. L. Woodside, with Sgt. Freeman, M. P. as orderly.
Feb. 25—Capt. J. B. Copeland, with Sgt. Plowden, C. N. as orderly.

The battalion is taking up extended order drill and combat principles. Every man in command of a unit is advised to know all signals for the drill. A field problem will be staged in the near future, probably next week.

The rifle team shot the prone and sitting positions last week in the Fourth Corps Area match, scoring 956 prone and 934 sitting. These are the two highest scores that a P. C. team has ever shot for these two positions. The results from kneeling and standing have not yet been tabulated.

The military department has the official uniform, shoe, shirt, and belt under consideration. The shoe is tan and much better grade than the one this year. There may also be a change in the color of the belts for next year. The new one will likely be a lighter tan and better quality. Olive drab shirts are also being considered to replace the white shirt as a part of the uniform. It is expected that such a change will add a great deal to the appearance of the unit.

J. W. Davis, B. A., M. D., '90, was elected vice-president of the Laurens County Medical association at a meeting held recently in Laurens.

Rev. Frank P. Anderson, D.D., '13, of Greenville, S. C., was extended and has accepted a unanimous call from the First Presbyterian church of Pulaski, Va. Since his resignation as pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Fort Smith, Ark., last July he has been in New York studying Bible at the Biblical seminary and taking courses in religious education at Union Theological seminary, Richmond, Va.

Rev. Watson Emmet Davis, D. D., '15, has left Princeton, W. Va., to accept a call from the Presbyterian church, Concord, N. C.

R. P. "Bob" Moore, '31, Laurens, S. C., was on the campus Thursday.

omorrow afternoon there will be a ial program in the college audi- um. A group of students repre- ting the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. A. from Newberry college will give eputation program. The exercises egin at two o'clock. Every mem- of the student body is invited to resent for this occasion.

embers of the "Y" represented the ege by giving a program at the fney high school last Wednesday ning.

he subject followed was "Christ, Example of Youth." Bob Lyrn the program. Barney MacLean e a talk for the occasion, using above subject. The Scripture was en from Luke 2:52. In this talk four sides of the life of Christ developed. The college quartet, le up of W. J. McCutchen, J. E. ns, H. J. Montgomery and M. J. McDonald, gave special selections.

The local "Y" will send deputations to the following places this week:
Sunday—Clemson College.
Monday—Chester High School.
Friday—Rock Hill High School.
Several other deputations will be given before the present administration leaves office.

One of the outstanding programs of the year was given at the "Y" on last Thursday night. "Polo" Pinson had charge of the meeting.

W. P. Jacobs, grandson of the founder of this institution, gave an inspiring talk. Mr. Jacobs spoke on "Activities and Their Relation to Religion." In the course of his remarks vital points were given that should inspire every man. Mr. Jacobs said "to put Christ first in our student activities, and you will then live a real life."

The college quartet assisted with the music.

A set of slides will be shown next Thursday night depicting missionary work in the foreign fields.

Last year similar slides were shown that gained approval.

The Ministerial club will not meet tomorrow, as there will be a deputation from Newberry on the campus.

Spicy leaves of TURKISH tobacco are strung to dry and cure in the sun.

Well, that's something about cigarettes I never knew before

I'd never thought much about what's inside a Chesterfield cigarette. But I have just been reading something that made me think about it.

Just think of this, some of the tobacco in Chesterfield—the Turkish—comes from 4000 miles away! And before it is shipped every single leaf is packed by hand. All because Turkish tobacco is so small and delicate.

Of course I don't know much about making cigarettes, but I do know this—that Chesterfields are milder and have a very pleasing aroma and taste. They satisfy—and that's what counts with me!

ILLUSION

EXPLANATION

IT'S FUN TO BE FOOLED
...IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

Magic has a place — but not in cigarette advertising.

Consider the illusion that there is a mysterious way to give cigarettes a superior "flavor."

EXPLANATION: Cigarette flavor can be counterfeited by adding artificial flavorings. By blending, too, the quality of tobaccos used.

Cheap, raw tobaccos can be "built up" or "fortified" by the lavish use of artificial flavorings.

Such magic, however, seldom fools the audience. Your taste finally tells you the truth.

The cigarette flavor that never stales, never varies, never loses its finest appeal, comes from mild, ripe, fragrant, more expensive tobaccos... blended to bring out the full, round flavor of each type of leaf. It's the quality of the tobacco that counts!

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Because Camel annually pays millions more every year for choicer tobaccos, you find in Camels an appealing mildness, a better flavor.

And Camels taste cooler because the sealed Humidor Pack of three-ply moisture-proof cellophane keeps them fresh.

BALLOT BOX FOR ELECTIONS

Constitution Amended To Provide Better System for Naming Student Officers.

The student body Tuesday morning voted to amend the constitution in regard to campus elections. The constitution, as approved by the faculty, and by the student body Tuesday, reads:

Article XI—Elections

Section 1. Unchanged.

Section 2. Unchanged.

Section 3. All elections, both class and general, shall be by secret ballot. A locked ballot-box, the key to which shall be held by the president of the student body on the day of each election, shall be placed in the hands of the officer of the day. The ballot box shall be in charge of at least two members of the student body, authorized and designated by the student council, who shall be known as the managers of the election.

The polls shall remain open from a. m. to 3:30 p. m. of the election day. The managers of the election shall check the name of each student from the student boy, or class roll, as he casts his ballot.

Ballots shall be provided by the student council and only ballots of approved form shall be counted.

Section 4. The managers of the election shall count the votes in the presence of a quorum of the student council, members of which shall act as tellers, and two sheets shall be made by separate individuals of the result of the balloting.

Section 5. The votes shall be returned to the ballot box after they are counted and the result certified to by the student council. The locked ballot box containing all votes shall then be placed in the office of the Dean of the college and kept there for the period of two weeks after the election.

Section 6. All nominations for any of all elective officers shall be made at a student body meeting, called for the purpose, at least one week before the date on which the election is held. These nominations shall be certified by the president and secretary of the student body and posted on the college bulletin board and published at least once in the college paper.

This amendment was approved by the faculty February 15, and by the student body February 21. It is now a part of the school constitution and shall govern the student body elections to be held in the near future.

Suggestions have been made to insert another amendment to Article 7 to read somewhat as follows:

Section 7. In case all vacancies are not settled by a majority vote in the first balloting, the two candidates receiving the highest votes shall run over to fill one vacancy, or the four highest to fill two vacancies. No candidate shall be elected until he receives a majority of the votes cast.

Section 8. The election of the president of the student body shall be held on a ballot separate from that for the election of the three senior councilmen.

Names of nominees for president shall also be placed on the ballot for councilmen.

The one elected president automatically fills one of the vacancies for senior councilmen.

Section 9. The first one, other than the president, to receive a majority in the election of senior councilmen shall be vice-president of the student body.

Section 10. The first one to receive a majority in the election of junior councilmen shall be secretary of the student body.

The proposed amendment, after being approved by the faculty, will be brought before the student body for discussion and action soon.

P. C. Rifle Team Scores High Mark

Aggregate of 3,607 Points Is Result of Week's Work. Two Men Hit Above 370.

The rifle team score last week was the highest shot by the Presbyterian college team during the present season. The team total was 3,607.

Two members of the team, M. H. Hunter and Captain A. D. Ferguson, shot scores of over 370. Ferguson got 373, while Hunter missed breaking his own record of 378 by only two points. This record was made last year.

Mail order matches were fired against five college teams this week, results of which have not yet been received. These schools are North Dakota Agricultural college, University of Alabama, DePaw University, Connecticut Agricultural college and The Citadel.

Number among teams which have been defeated this season by the P. C. sharpshooters are such schools as Rose Polytechnic institute, University of Vermont and Michigan State college.

The season will end in two weeks, after which the Heart Trophy match

Sims And Clark Are State Champs

Bob Sims and Bill Clark, Presbyterian boxers, have been declared South Carolina intercollegiate boxing champions in their respective weights by virtue of their victories over Carolina and Clemson opponents.

The following account appeared in The State, under the title of "Speaking of Sports," by John A. Montgomery:

Palmetto Boxing Champs

Only three collegiate boxing teams were in South Carolina this year—Carolina, Clemson and Presbyterian. Each of these met each of the others and Clemson defeated both Carolina and P. C. for the state team pugilistic title.

On the basis of results in the dual meets among these three the following individual state champions were named:

Bantamweight, Tommy Lide, Clemson.

Featherweight, Eron Crow, Clemson.

Lightweight, Bill Clark, Presbyterian.

Welterweight, Charlie Bannister, Clemson.

Junior middleweight, none determined.

Middleweight, Bill Medlin, Clemson.

Light-heavyweight, Henry Willard, Carolina.

Heavyweight, Bob Sims, Presbyterian.

Former Student Is Married

According to an announcement in The Clinton Chronicle, J. D. Guerard, of Beaufort, formerly known as Jack Pollitzer, was married to Miss Virginia Kellers of Clinton, last September. The marriage has just been announced by the parents of the bride.

Guerard was a student at P. C. for three years, but the past fall left for Vanderbilt. Had he continued in classes here, he would now be a senior.

His name, Pollitzer, has been legally changed to Guerard since leaving here.

LETTERS GIVEN TO ATHLETES

Athletic Council Makes Awards To Basketball and Boxing Participants. Freshmen Included.

At a meeting of the Presbyterian College Athletic council on Thursday afternoon, the men who are to be awarded letters and numerals in basketball and boxing were decided upon.

Men to receive letters in varsity basketball are: Lynn, guard; Barron, guard; Collins, forward; Boggs, guard; Holcomb, forward; Francken, guard; Bissett, forward, and Gray, manager.

The team that played the last few games was composed, with the exception of Lynn, of men who hadn't played in the regular line-up before. But what they lacked in knowledge of the game was more than replace by the fight and spirit which they displayed. Although they did not win, it is a fact that they never stopped trying.

The freshman team got off to a bad start this year but has consistently improved. Men to whom numerals were awarded are: Belk, center; Forehand, center; Levi, forward; Wyatt, forward; Adams, guard; Bradley, guard; Majors, guard; Quarterman, guard; Potter, forward; Little, forward; Viser, manager.

The boxing team, although not annexing any victories, was in there scrapping to the last bell. The showing made against Clemson was much better than the one made by Carolina against Clemson, although Carolina had previously defeated the Presbyterian team.

Letters were awarded to Seagle, 115; Bissett, 125; Clark, 135; McDuffie, 145; Horton (Capt.) 175; Parker (alt. Capt.) 155; Sims, unlimited; and Woodside, manager.

The team produced brilliant performers in Clark and Sims, both of whom won their fights against all their opponents, and therefore have a clear right to the state championship in their weights.

The athletic committee consists of the managers of each team, Prof. H. E. Sturgeon and Prof. A. V. Martin, faculty members, and the secretary-treasurer, "Babe" Rampey.

Gives Instruction In Life-Saving

Ramone S. Eaton, Red Cross life-saving instructor, returned to the campus last week for a stay of three days. During his visit he gave daily instruction in the principles and methods of life-saving. These instructions were given at the pool Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Many boys took advantage of this splendid opportunity to train themselves to be able to help others and themselves in case of emergency.

Some of the things taught in these courses are methods of approach to a drowning person, principles of breaking holds, and the prone pressure method of artificial respiration.

The school is indeed fortunate in having Mr. Eaton from time to time. It is honed that more of the boys will avail themselves of the instruction in his future visits.

PAN-HELLENIC DATES SET FOR MARCH 10-11

The Pan-Hellenic council has finally made definite plans for the Pan-Hellenic dances which will be held March 10 and 11. "Selby" Leftwitch and his orchestra of Duke university, has been secured for the occasion. This band has played widely in the South.

Debating Team Gets To Work

Season Opens On March 13 With Erskine. War Debts Cancellation Is Subject.

The Presbyterian college varsity debating squad is rapidly taking form as men interested in forensic work begin putting finishing touches on their pro and con arguments. Training debates will be held between various club members during the next two weeks in order to provide practice in preparation for the varsity season which begins March 13.

Four intercollegiate debates have already been arranged, and others are expected to be arranged in the near future. The subject to be used in the P. C. debates is national policy for the year. The subject: "That the United States should agree to the cancellation of the inter-allied war debts."

Three men on the campus this year are members of Pi Kappa Delta. They are Neely, Staples and Ransom. Several new men have had debating experience in high school or junior college. Some of these are Lawter, Gibbs, Barron, Arnold, Haney and McDuffie.

Dr. D. O. Rhame To Practice Here

Dr. D. O. Rhame, Jr., class of 1926, after March first, will be associated with Dr. S. C. Hays of Clinton. He will have his office at the hospital, where he will make his headquarters. Dr. Rhame graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, in 1930. He served internships of one year at New York Polyclinic hospital and eighteen months at King's County hospital. For the past year he has served as resident surgeon on the staff of the Kings County hospital in Brooklyn, which has a capacity of three thousand beds.

Dr. Rhame is the only son of Dr. and Mrs. D. O. Rhame of this city.

During his career at Presbyterian college Dr. Rhame made a record of which any man should be proud. He was a member of Sigma Kappa Alpha and Chi Beta Phi fraternities, captain of the track team in 1926, on the football squad 1925-26, PaC-SaC staff, Collegian Staff, first lieutenant and adjutant in the R. O. T. C. unit, and assistant in biology.

Columbia Doctors Here Last Week

Wednesday the Presbyterian college student body had the privilege of hearing Drs. Wyman and Josey, of Columbia. Both doctors were on the campus for an all-day visit.

At a special chapel hour, the doctors mad short talks on problems facing college sudents. During the afternoon there were discussion groups. In the evening Dr. Wyman conducted a discussion along with educational pictures which were shown.

Dr. Wyman made a visit to P. C., his alma mater, last year and it was a great pleasure to have him on the campus again. Dr. Josey was making his first visit. Both of these men are prominent physicians in Columbia.

WORK ON PAC-SAC IS MOVING ALONG

Work on the PaC-SaC has been going forward rapidly and Editor Land reports that nearly all the material has been sent to the engravers and printers. It will be only a matter of time until the book will come off the press and be ready for distribution.

THREE DAYS' TOURNAMENT

Preliminaries Go Through Tuesday. Finals Take Place Thursday. Good Fights Expected.

The annual R. O. T. C. boxing tournament at Presbyterian college will get under way tonight in the Leroy Springs gymnasium, under the auspices of the military department of the college.

This tournament has been a high spot in the intramural athletic program at P. C. since its installation three years ago by Coach Walter Johnson and Captain Wyson.

A small admission price will be charged and the proceeds will be turned over to the athletic association.

Tonight semi-finals and semi-finals will be held tomorrow night, with the finals to come Thursday.

A feature of the tournament, as announced by Captain Wyson, will be some bouts between several little Negroes. These boys participated in the show two years ago and are expected to put on an interesting contest.

The most talked-of bouts are the ones that will be fought in the extra special consolation matches. This is a new feature added to the tournament by Capt. Wyson. The Captain realized that it would be an inhuman act to turn G. Barron, R. Graham and Covington loose with the rest of the boys so he added this new weight in order to keep these mean old tough boys fighting among themselves.

There are to be seven new champions crowned in the seven weight classes. None of the champs selected last year have elected to defend their laurels.

Of the thirty-six men taking part in the tournament, only two bantamweights have signed up. They are Cobb and Cranford. The winner of this fight will be declared bantamweight champion of the campus. In the featherweight and lightweight classes two fights are scheduled. There will be five welterweight bouts in the preliminaries.

The heavyweight bouts should be good. Holliday, Robinson, Harvin and Noland look as if they could put up good fights. The welterweight division has an overflow of men. Eleven will fight in this weight.

The thirty-six that will fight in the tournament make about sixty men, including those going out for the varsity team, that take part in boxing at Presbyterian college.

The bouts scheduled for tonight are as follows:

Bantamweight: Cobb vs Cranford, H. D.

Featherweight: Hudson vs Johnson, C. R.; Winner vs Potter.

Lightweight: Ransom vs Robinson, J.; Winner vs Guerard.

Welterweight: Lowry, M. K. vs Gibbs; Calvert vs Majors; Hull vs Williamks; Horne vs Levi; Mixon vs Morgan; winner of latter fight vs Hays.

Middleweight: Yearout vs Upshur; Jordan vs Perrin; Higbe vs Workman.

Light-heavyweight: Elmore vs Reeves; Forehand vs winner.

Heavyweight: Holliday vs Robinson, B. A.; Harvin vs Noland.

Extra special consolation: Graham, B. vs Barron; winner vs Covington.

I. R. C. CLUB HOLDS INTERESTING MEET

The International Relations club held its regular meeting Friday night. J. H. Stamps, president, opened the session with a welcome to the new members.

A plan was presented by John Osman for the future programs of the club. It was unanimously voted upon for adoption.

After some discussion the meeting was brought to a close by the president.

DEBATING

The apparent lack of interest shown by students in debating is to be regretted. No other line of extra-curricula activity is as useful to the student in later life as the work of the forensic society. Statistics show that those students who engage in debating and oratorical work are more apt to succeed than those who do not. To quote the Bee Gee News of Bowling Green State College: "A survey in a large New York bank showed that only one of the twenty highest paid employees had been a socially prominent undergraduate. The average salaries for ex-college athletes, dramatic stars, and class presidents is less than the average for all college graduates. Annual editing and debating are the only extra-curricular activities that tend to make students more successful after graduation."

Public speaking is a vital and necessary element in the life of every person, and all who can possibly avail themselves of the opportunity to engage in this kind of activity should by all means do so. It is to be regretted that more interest in forensics is not displayed at P. C. To be able to stand before a crowd, speak distinctly and forcibly, think clearly and to persuade others to accept your own point of view is an accomplishment desired by every person, and no other extra-curricula activity offers the same opportunity for the development of these abilities as does forensic work.

The walks lately constructed on the campus proved useless during the recent showers. After a slight rain they became veritable mudholes.

Since we are to have ballot boxes for our elections, why not divide the campus into wards with each dormitory as a separate voting district? Then we could have ward bosses, stuffed ballot boxes and everything else that goes with a real election. Maybe even some campaign booze. Who knows?

BALLOT BOXES

The recently-passed amendment to the [illegible] ballot boxes in [illegible] a long felt need at this institution. Heretofore confusion and waste of time has characterized class elections as ballot were [illegible] procedure. With the new amendment all question as to procedure [illegible] and the delay formerly experienced will be eliminated.

Last spring the election lasted from eight o'clock until well after the bell had sounded for the first morning class. Nominations for the various offices had been made previously, but the delay was caused by the numerous harangues, arguments and votes which were made necessary by the lack of a definite form of procedure. The new system will change that. Nominations will continue to be held at a set date before the time for the election, but the election itself will not be held at a meeting of the [illegible] The ballot box will be open from 9 A. M. until 3:30 P. M. Students may cast their votes at any time during that period. Two election managers will be in charge of the box to prevent misuse of the voting privilege.

After being counted and checked, the ballots will be held for two weeks in the office of the Dean, where they may be examined by interested persons. This again is an improvement over the old system where, in a close election by acclamation, it was very possible for a mistake to be made. Now such a mistake, with the resultant ill-feeling, can not occur.

We do not say that the ballot box method of voting is perfect and absolutely foolproof, but we do say that it is quite an improvement over the old way. The authors of the amendment are to be commended for their work and the student body for its good judgment in allowing the new amendment to be added to the constitution.

And now that we are to have a ballot box for elections, let us hope some playful collegian doesn't steal it at the very first election. It happened at Georgia Tech some time ago.

A Michigan school teacher has devised a machine for correcting test papers. They may do away with the professor entirely, but we are just old-fashioned enough to bet that modern science can never manufacture a mechanical student.

WHAT ABOUT TECHNOCRACY?

Technocracy has spread over the country like wildfire. Seldom has there been an example of how a movement can gain nation-wide recognition if only it is new, exciting, a little mysterious and the times are ready for it. Eleven million unemployed give it a sympathetic audience — ready to listen to anything that might bear on the solution of the present labor problem.

Technocracy has one difficulty and that is the word is variously used to mean three or four different things. The term really means "governance by science." The movement was started by an engineering group at Columbia University. It is to this organization that the term is truthfully applied. After many years research under the name of "Energy Survey of North America" they have concluded that the power resources of the United States have so increased the amount of goods that our workmen can make that by the spring of 1934 the millions of unemployed will be doubled unless drastic measures can be applied to balancing the production.

Until about one hundred years ago man was wholly dependent upon hand labor to get work done, with the exception of a few machines, crude and inefficient. Invention and rapid improvement of power-driven machinery has changed all this. There has come a vast increase in energy. The largest single turbine can produce in a twenty-four hours a day as much as nine million men. If all the machinery now installed were operated at capacity continuously it would be able to do as much work as the total population of the globe. Some of this machinery is capable of the most delicate and complex operations. Remarkable machines sort cards as fast as a whole battery of clerks; a marvelous invention called the "electric eyes" can be focused on a band of milk cans and as they pass by knock off the unlabeled cans. it is unique how accurate and efficient these inventions are. It would seem that with all this mighty and perfect machinery at his disposal that man could live a life of ease. Yet what has happened? Introduction of it has thrown men out of work causing what [illegible] all "technological unemployment."

The technocrats say that if the people place the government in their hands for a while, letting them regulate the working man by his energy output, that in a short time everything will be all right. This system of theirs includes doing away with the present currency, substituting energy-hour certificates for the money exchange. If we do this, they say, all the enormous power at our disposal will not wreck us; on the contrary it will enable us to live in luxury with what would seem to us now absurdly little work. They offer a four-hour day, four days a week, with two months vacation a year for only twenty years of our lives.

Such calculation may be wild but it will bear looking into with a hopeful eye. Americans are used to finding for profit, finding ways to avoid work and labor, cherishing liberty of action and thought. It might take more than the technocrats think to persuade us to live obediently and cheerfully on monthly energy tickets. However, we would be making a terrible mistake to totally disregard technocracy as merely a fad. It has given us a vivid exaggerated idea of how prosperous we might be if we learned to make the adaptation.

We may not meet the problem with this method. At the present rate we most probably won't. But if all this clamor and talk over technocracy brings nearer by one day the revelation of a solution to the national problem, it will have served its end admirably.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

Officers of the day and their orderlies for the week are:

Monday, Feb. 27—Lt. H. S. Elliott, with Sgt. Sims, R. E. as orderly.

Tuesday, Feb. 28—Lt. A. D. Ferguson, with Sgt. Combs, J. W. as orderly.

Wednesday, March 1—Lt. J. C. McCaskill, with Sgt. Copeland, C. W. as orderly.

Thursday, March 2—Lt. J. T. Neeley, with Sgt. Cranford, W. H. as orderly.

Friday, March 3—Lt. F. B. Parker, with Sgt. Gregg, E. M. as orderly.

Saturday, March 4—Cap. F. B. Pinson, with Sgt. Haney, J. W. as orderly.

The R. O. T. C. fights will be held this year. After such a discouraging beginning in result of the first call for contestants, they were called off. However, a second call was made and 36 turned in their names. These men weighed in and are bracketed. The fights are open to any one who has in no way participated in varsity boxing.

There will be two nights of preliminaries and one of finals. Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 27 and 28, will be given to preliminaries, and on Thursday night, March 2, the finals will be run off. An admission of 10c and 25c will be charged for the benefit of the athletic association.

The rifle team did fair on the kneeling and standing positions of the Corps Area matches, shooting 816 and 706, respectively. This brings the total score for the positions to 3,412. However, the final rating of the competing teams has not been announced from Corps Area headquarters.

Uniform inspection will be held Tuesday at drill period.

Next week the juniors begin the initial training for camp. Inoculations and vaccinations will be given Monday, Wednesday and Friday of the next three weeks.

Chesterfields are Milder

WHEN you ask a Chesterfield smoker why that's his brand — he generally comes right out flat-footed and says . . . "It's because They're Milder!"

So we're going to keep on doing everything we know how to keep them that way.

That's why we look for and buy the mildest and ripest tobaccos we can get. That's why we age them in our warehouses till they're mellow and sweet.

We believe that even the shredding of the tobacco . . . and the quality of the paper it's rolled in, have a lot to do with the even-drawing, mild smoke that people enjoy in Chesterfields.

You can bank on this . . . every method known to science is used to make Chesterfield a milder, better-tasting cigarette that satisfies.

Cheap, raw tobaccos are, as you would naturally expect, harsh to the throat. Ripe, costly tobaccos are mild, mellow—gentle. The question is whether a cigarette is made from cheap tobacco or the more expensive grades.

BASEBALL MEN NOW AT WORK

Virtually New Team Will Have To Be Fashioned. Wealth of Material On Hand.

In spite of the inclement weather of the past few days, Coach Johnson has had his baseball tossers out for practice. Due to the cold weather and the fact that the field is being worked on in preparation for the beginning of the season of outdoor practices, workouts were held in the gym the last several days. A wealth of material is on hand to fill the positions left vacant by graduation and "quitation," but the loss of Captain Copeland and Arlie Williams, pitchers, will be sorely felt.

W. J. McCutchen, G. H. Montgomery and B. A. Robinson, are the only veteran pitchers back this year. Clyde Street, and W. A. Galloway, a southpaw, are new men trying out for the pitching assignment for the first time this season. Street is a senior and Galloway is a sophomore. McCutchen and Montgomery are seniors, while Robinson is a junior.

Three infield positions are vacant. Cheatham, first baseman, graduated last spring. Fleming and Keeble, last year's third and second basemen, respectively, did not return to school for the present term. Barret, regular catcher last year, did not report for practice this season. Plowden and Odiorne are two veteran infielders fighting for posts. J. R. Ferguson, flashy shortstop from Presbyterian Junior college, will put in a strong bid for one of the infield positions, while Captain Carl Adams, a centerfielder last year, is working out some at second base.

Pan-Hellenic Hop On Schedule For Next Week-End

Three Dances To Feature Celebration Covering Two Days. Many Get Invitations.

The annual Pan-Hellenic celebration, the most outstanding social event on the Presbyterian college campus, will be held here Friday and Saturday, March 10 and 11. Three dances will be held for the occasion. Pan-Hellenic Hop will come Friday night, lasting from 10 until 2:30. A tea dance will be given Saturday afternoon from 4 to 6, with the Pan-Hellenic finale to be held Saturday night from 9 to 12.

"Jelly" Leftwich and his Duke University band will play for all three occasions.

The middle section of Smyth dormitory will be reserved for the girls who will be invited here for the event. Word from the Pan-Hellenic council warns that room reservations for girl friends must be made by Thursday.

"Jelly" Leftwich's band is known as "the South's most famous college band." Among other features attributed to these entertainers is an electric amplification system for the soloists. A different dress will be used by the musicians for each of the three affairs.

Besides the more than one hundred fraternity men on the campus, some two hundred and fifty others have been sent invitations. A large crowd is expected to attend this affair, which is always a feature of the spring social season on the campus. Other annual spring events are the junior-senior celebration, and the Pan-Hellenic final, which was initiated last spring.

The Pan-Hellenic council, composed of one man from each of the six fraternities on the campus, has complete charge of all plans for the affair. The council is composed of: J. O. Woods, president (Kappa Alpha); C. W. Adams, vice-president (Pi Kappa Phi); J. E. Osman, secretary-reasurer (Pi Kappa Alpha); Ralph Rampey (Beta Kappa); J. F. Davis (Alpha Kappa Pi), and C. B. Elliott (Alpha Lambda Tau).

pletely dominated by Johnnie Robinson, although he was getting the worst of it in the first round of his fight with Guerard. Guerard took the first round with a wide margin and it was clearly his fight up until the time he left his chin open for Robinson to bounce a right off of it. Robinson proved that this was the wrong thing to do, putting Guerard to sleep immediately after. The blow that spelled finis for Guerard was one of the cleanest this writer has seen. "Duke," of the house of Ransom, left his chin uncovered also in the first round battle and began to study the stars presently.

Phil Hayes made a beautiful comeback after being knocked down for the count of six in the welterweight final. Lowry floored him in the first round. Hayes got up groggy. Referee Harry Bolick laid him back down to take a few more counts. When Hayes finally got back up he waded into Lowry and made some clean blows. It was Lowry's fight all the way, but Hayes put up a game battle.

The middleweight between Paul Yearout and Robert Higbe was faster than any of the bouts. Both boys waded in to give and take, throwing all caution to the winds. Yearout used his reach, experience and ring generalship to take all three rounds. Higbe missed a lot. He would swing a haymaker, miss, and fall to the floor. Counting the times he fell and the times Yearout knocked him down, Higbe was on the floor nine times.

Roy Forehand won the light-heavyweight championship Tuesday night when he defeated Neil Crymes.

Holliday outpointed Harvin for the heavyweight title. Harvin showed a willingness to fight but Holliday was just too good for him.

G. Barron and B. Graham staged a real fight in the first round of the extra special class. Barron whipped Graham and Covington to win this championship.

To add spice to the programs, Capt. Wysor had some small boys, two local fighters, and a bunch of Negroes fight. To climax the tournament a battle royal was put on. Six Negroes fought until only one was left in the ring.

The summary:

Elimination (Monday Night)

Featherweight: Robinson knocked out Ransom.

Welterweight: Lowry over Gibbs (decision); Calvert over Majors (decision); Wilbanks over Hull (technical knockout; Horne over Levi (decision); Morgan over Mixon (decision).

Light-heavy: Forehand over Addison (decision); Crymes over Elmore (technical knockout).

Heavyweight: Holliday over Robinson, B. A. (decision); Harvin over Noland (decision).

Extra special: Barron over Graham (decision).

Semi-Finals (Tuesday Night)

McCutchen and Montgomery are seniors, while Robinson is a junior.

Three infield positions are vacant. Cheatham, first baseman, graduated last spring. Fleming and Keeble, last year's third and second basemen, respectively, did not return to school for the present term. Barret, regular catcher last year, did not report for practice this season. Plowden and Odiorne are two veteran infielders fighting for posts. J. R. Ferguson, flashy shortstop from Presbyterian Junior college, will put in a strong bid for one of the infield positions, while Captain Carl Adams, a centerfielder last year, is working out some at second base.

Howell was an understudy to Cheatham at first on the 1932 team and is working regularly at that post now. Jack Wood may be shifted from right field to cover the initial sack.

The outfield presents no great difficulties. Veterans are available for every garden post, with Holcomb, a dependable sophomore, available for (Continued on page four)

Pan-Hellenic Hop On Schedule For Next Week-End

Three Dances To Feature Celebration Covering Two Days. Many Get Invitations.

The annual Pan-Hellenic celebration, the most outstanding social event on the Presbyterian college campus, will be held here Friday and Saturday, March 10 and 11. Three dances will be held for the occasion. Pan-Hellenic Hop will come Friday night, lasting from 10 until 2:30. A tea dance will be given Saturday afternoon from 4 to 6, with the Pan-Hellenic finale to be held Saturday night from 9 to 12.

"Jelly" Leftwich and his Duke University band will play for all three occasions.

The middle section of Smyth dormitory will be reserved for the girls who will be invited here for the event. Word from the Pan-Hellenic council warns that room reservations for girl friends must be made by Thursday.

"Jelly" Leftwich's band is known as "the South's most famous college band." Among other features attributed to these entertainers is an electric amplification system for the soloists. A different dress will be used by the musicians for each of the three affairs.

Besides the more than one hundred fraternity men on the campus, some two hundred and fifty others have been sent invitations. A large crowd is expected to attend this affair, which is always a feature of the spring social season on the campus. Other annual spring events are the junior-senior celebration, and the Pan-Hellenic final, which was initiated last spring.

The Pan-Hellenic council, composed of one man from each of the six fraternities on the campus, has complete charge of all plans for the affair. The council is composed of: J. O. Woods, president (Kappa Alpha); C. W. Adams, vice-president (Pi Kappa Phi); J. E. Osman, secretary-reasurer (Pi Kappa Alpha); Ralph Rampey (Beta Kappa); J. F. Davis (Alpha Kappa Pi), and C. B. Elliott (Alpha Lambda Tau).

Dramatic Club Play Postponed

The dramatic club postponed tryouts for its new play, 'Hot Copy," until this week because many men expecting to try out for the play were away last week on the glee club trip.

Prof. C. W. Grafton, the director, says the members should be ready for the presentation sometime during the month.

"Hot Copy," as the name indicates, is a newspaper comedy.

PRESBYTERIAN TO OPERATE SUMMER SCHOOL SESSION

Will Be Held Primarily For Teachers Seeking To Renew Certificates. Five Academic and Nine Professional Courses To Be Offered. Regular College Faculty Will Be Used.

The first summer session in the history of the school will be offered at Presbyterian college this summer, June 5-July 14, inclusive, according to an announcement by Dr. R. L. Coe, head of the department of education, under whose auspices the session will be held.

The regular college faculty will teach in the new school. Five academic courses will be offered in addition to the nine professional courses. The courses will be primarily for the teachers in Laurens county, but also will be open to college students who wish to take advanced work.

The school will have headquarters in the W. P. Jacobs Science hall.

The college boarding department will not operate for the duration of the school. A day school plan will be followed with classes running from nine o'clock until one-thirty, five days a week.

Courses giving enough credits for the renewal of state board of education certificates will be offered.

The professional courses to be given are: Educational psychology, educational sociology, problems of the high school staff, problems in elementary instruction, problems of the rural teacher, historical introduction to education, psychology of the elementary school subjects, psychology of the secondary school subjects, teaching and its improvement with objective tests. The following academic courses will be taught: Practical French for teachers, literature for teachers, language for teachers, American history for teachers, European history for teachers. The course in European history will include a history of France or some phase of French history. Other courses not listed will be offered if the demand is great enough.

A folder giving a description of the summer courses has been issued by the department of education and distributed to teachers in Laurens county. It gives the general plan of the school as follows:

"Under the direction of the department of education the William Plumer Jacobs Science building, housing lecture rooms, reading room, and a modern library of over 10,000 volumes, will be used as an ideal study-conference-recitation unit.

"Since a day-school plan will be followed, each daily session will run from nine o'clock in the morning to one-thirty in the afternoon, thus allowing ample time for travel. While no boarding department will be maintained on the campus, every effort will be made to find suitable accommodation for any who may wish to stay in the community.

"Beginning June 5, and continuing through July 14 the classes will meet each day, five days a week, for six weeks. Each course will carry a credit of two semester hours. By completing three courses, present certificate renewal requirements of the State Board of Education may be met.

"The tuition fee covers all expenses except texts and materials. Five dollars tuition is charged for the first course, four for a second, and three for a third, thus making the maximal tuition twelve dollars and the minimal five. Fees are payable five dollars with application, and the balance, if any, June 5.

"Courses are so organized that secondary and elementary teachers will be able to work together on common topics and separately in their respective fields. Those definitely offered and recommended for local conditions are described below. Others that are available if sufficiently requested are also listed.

FROSH TAKE HIGH RANK

Four of Seven Highest In Scholarship Are Members of First Year Class. Leaders Named.

According to averages recently released from the office of the registrar, the freshman class boasts of more "scholars" than any other one of the four classes. Four freshmen, including one co-ed, have places among the highest seven averages based on the grades made the first semester this year. One junior and two sophomores are the others ranked among the high seven.

C. M. Hudson is the freshman leading in scholarship for the first semester. The others, with their classes, follow: J. P. Todd, sophomore; E. R. Andrews, freshman; Catherine Blakely, freshman; Tom Plaxico, freshman; J. W. Combs, junior; and Doris Abrams, sophomore.

In the senior class, H. H. Ferguson and W. M. White are tied for first honor. J. C. McCaskill and J. T. Neely are tied for second place, followed by C. G. Pepper and W. M. Ransom.

J. Walker Combs heads the list in the junior class, followed by R. D. Lynn, Sara Copeland, H. Wyman, D. H. McFadden and Elizabeth Speake.

Honors in the sophomore class go to J. P. Todd, who is followed in order by Doris Abrams, R. F. Fleming, W. F. Guess, and R. H. Corry.

In the freshman group C. M. Hudson has the highest average. Next in line come E. R. Andrews, Catherine Blakely, Tom Plaxico, and Elizabeth Blakely.

The averages are for the first semester of 1932-33 ,and are based upon a system of honor points. The average is the ratio between the number of semester hours taken by the students and the honor points received.

Little Interest In "The Collegian"

The college literary magazine, The Collegian, will appear sometime during the last month of this semester, J. F. Osman, the editor, stated last week. Much difficulty has been encountered by the editor in collecting material suitable for publication; but Osman stated that The Collegian would come out before the end of the school year, even if it contained nothing but his own compositions.

Osman is very much concerned about the lack of interest shown by the student body in the field of poetry and story-writing. He has received only three or four stories in so far, but expects to get at least six or seven more manuscripts before publishing the magazine.

Board Of Trustees Take Action Upon Other College Items

Cost of Board In College Dining Hall and Student Activities Fee Are Reduced, While That For Tuition Is Increased.

Board Curtails Athletic Set-Up

At the annual meeting of the board of trustees of Presbyterian college held here Tuesday, February 28, it was decided that basketball and baseball would be dropped from the college athletic program next year.

The intramural program in these two sports will be retained and enlarged, but inter-collegiate competition will be discontinued. Football, boxing, tennis, swimming and track teams will be continued.

The student body has shown little interest in these sports for the past few years, and it was found necessary to drop two sports, these have been picked.

At their regular February meeting held here last Tuesday, the board of Trustees of Presbyterian college voted to lower the student activities fee and to lower the cost of board in the dining hall and increase the tuition and maintenance fee for the nine months term. Campus work scholarships are established, and the awarding of scholarships put in the hands of a committee appointed by the president.

The board passed a resolution thanks to Mr. John T. Young and late Mr. N. Reese Young, for the donation of several acres of land to be used as an athletic field; and amended the action of the student body in naming the plot Young Field. The ground is now being used as a football field. It is used in the fall football practice.

Most of Tuesday was spent in hearing the report of President W. Sween and discussion on the various items of the budget. The board, for the first time in many years, was able to balance the budget, the past the income from the has been more than the expenses, but through the economical management of the last few years this balance.

College Bulletin Gives Information

The college recently issued the 1933 edition of the advertisement bulletin, copies of which will be sent to prospective students. It is a booklet of fourteen pages of information, giving a resume of some vital elements in the life of a Christian college. It is attractively compiled with pictures of various campus buildings, organizations, students, and data concerning them.

Following are the items discussed in the bulletin: History of the College, the Faculty, the Department, the Student Body, Atmosphere, and Ideals and loyalty of the Christian college.

Included is a summary of the requirements in the making of a Christian college. They are:

1. Physical equipment.
2. Character and ideals of the faculty.
3. Type of student body.
4. Atmosphere and ideals of the campus.
5. Support and loyalty of the constituency.

In the bulletin the alumni, active patrons and Christian philanthropists are challenged to support Presbyterian college by these standards.

Last week members of the "Collegian crew" were kept busy addressing envelopes to prospective students. A large number was also mailed to various church organizations and individuals throughout the Southern states, particularly South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

A NEW DEAL

On March 4 America got a new deal. THE URGE OF SPRING

Springtime and the feel of its rapturous sunshine, the still, warm air, when " a young man's fancy turns to love," and writers respond to nature in praise of her loveliness. It is an annual occurrence, the repetition of what has happened thousands of times ever since the world began centuries ago. Yet there is something about Spring that wakes us and gives life a new and fervent zest. Spring is day after night, it is the waking after a long, long sleep.

Already it is false Spring, and though the trees are still black and bare there is that warm something in the air that is the inevitable harbinger of green leaves and mellow days. If we are human we cannot help but arouse ourselves to the change. For some there is an urge to take exercise and breathe deeply in the open, others will respond with writing, and still others are content to relapse into pleasant dreams. There are those who have the desire to wander aimlessly in the fields and drink in with wide-open eyes the newness of plant life.

With Spring's awakening we invariably fall a prey to romantic writers with their praise of nature in verse and song and story. The greatest feel the impulse. There is an endless line of names and among them, Wordsworth, Shelley, Keats and Browning, some of our loveliest songs sing of the glories of Spring—one, the fairest "rush of morn all listeners tell of a "dewy blooms," "sparkling brooks," and "singing birds." There are those who laugh at the "silly sentimentalist" who glories in Spring, but those who laugh are too prone to be ashamed to deep down they must have a feeling that they are ashamed to admit. This is no a matter of beauty for those are and will be so numerous, but it is to say that no matter who we are we wake to the sight and scent of spring even though it be false and comes in early March.

"FIGHTERS"

Life is one grand fight. We can look around and see everything fighting for existence. The smallest insignificant flower that grows in the field clings to life just as long as the season lasts; the animal in the forest fights for life, preys upon other animals for food, and lives for awhile and is done. Man, the highest of all living creatures, puts up the hardest fight for existence. He is continually trying to take that which belongs to some one else; because he claims that it is essential to life. During the last few years we have been brought to the realization that we, too, must fight. But I believe we should ask the question — fight for what? If it is merely fighting to have happiness—pleasures — we are selfish and self-centered. Probably we are struggling to make some other person happy; if this be the case, are we happy in trying to attain this end? It seems that we should be. But just how many individuals can be selected that are hoping to make others happy. It seems that the majority today are grabbing all that can be reached for selfish ends." And in doing this, is the game being played squarely? Do we bear our responsibilities and try to run the other fellow's business at the same time? Just what does that fellow think when you intrude upon his affairs? Are you not questioning his ability, honesty and judgment? The meddler is always in trouble, and we have boys on our campus who are always making suggestions and yet never applying them their own fights.

"Live and let live" is one of the best phrases ever written. If every man would build his "fight for life" on this slogan what a different school, city, state and nation we would have. Man is no better than the brute when it comes to playing the game of life. He fights for honor, fame, wealth, position, existence, et al. And in the end what has he achieved? In nine cases out of ten he is ten times worse than when he began the fight. And all because he did not play a clean game; he took what he could get—he crushed all that crossed his path, without even considering justice. He did not realize that those victims had feelings, authority and opinions of their own. In his fight for his own selfish gains he has possibly survived, but is it the survival of the fittest?

Man strives so hard for his desires, his lusts and material wealth; and in doing so, generally by the means he uses, loses all the confidence of the person who is watching him play the game. He yells "fair play and yet is the vilest of foulers." Happiness is not found in fighting for personal gain — but realized in fighting a square game, a game in which the other fellow plays with you. The philosopher was right: "Happiness is knowledge, and knowledge is truth, and truth is God." We are not merely fighting for existence here, but fighting for eternity. If we know the truth, "the truth shall make us free." And being free we can make the game of life worthwhile.

"And when that one Great Scorer comes
To write against your name,
It matters not if you've lost or won,
But how you've played the game."

BOOK REVIEW

By Henry Calvert

"INVITATION TO THE WALTZ"

Rose Lehman, hardly out of the twenties and the author of "Invitation to the Waltz," has written but three books yet seems to have reached that stage that takes most novelists a professional lifetime to reach.

"Invitation to the Waltz" is the story of that fleeting moment in a girl's life when she stands on tip-toe, poised between childhood and womanhood. In this case she is a young miss just turned seventeen and of the middle-class English. She could easily have been a girl from anywhere in America on that same important birthday. The book deals with this romantic age much as does Tarkington's "Seventeen." What Tarkington did for the boy—Lehman does for the girl. The main character, Olivia Curtis, attends her first big party and it is around this one event that the whole plot is worked out.

Trivial as though it may seem, the situation holds the reader in suspense from the first lifting of the pretty head of Olivia from the pillow as she wakes on the morn of her seventeenth birthday to reflect on the problem of her first important dance. Life takes on a new meaning; every experience is sharpened by a new sensitiveness. There is the ecstasy over the red silk for the first real evening gown; the horror of that first glimpse of the escort whom the mother has succeeded in procuring for her two daughters; there are the first awful moments of the dance.

The story may seem slight, but it is strangely full. There is another theme woven in that touches Olivia's lightly throughout, enhancing and deepening its significance—the story of Olivia's older sister, Kate, who is prettier and a blonde. Kate's story is a fairy tale come true — as should happen at a dance while Olivia's remains stark realism.

The two stories are entwined expertly and delicately together. The background is rich and varied. Every member of the Curtis household is done with nicety — absent-minded father, anxious mother, and, notably, precocious and not too happy James, the small brother who is forced on botany walks with a gentle lady of small means. The character studies from the solid rich, who give the party to the quietly respectable poor (like the Curtises), are good. The young bloods who hunt in pink coats, the unloved bitter poet, the lew old gentleman whom mothers smile upon because of his age, all are circled before you. Every partner is sharply differentiated, each conversation gone into thoroughly, every lapse, every trip from room to room, is made vivid. Like Olivia, one is given in an evening, a large slice of life; but unlike her one can contemplate it thoughtfully.

This is one story that leaves the reader really happy. It is not a "girl's book"—though girls will blush to find that someone has peered so deeply into their secret hearts. Men, too, will cherish it who have daughters or sisters there on the threshold — or who remember girls they have danced with. You will enjoy it.

The book deals with this ro...mantic age much as does Tarkington's "Seventeen." What Tarkington did for the boy—Lehman does for the girl. The main character, Olivia Curtis, attends her first big party and it is around this one event that the whole plot is worked out.

Trivial as though it may seem, the situation holds the reader in suspense from the first lifting of the pretty head of Olivia from the pillow as she wakes on the morn of her seventeenth birthday to reflect on the problem of her first important dance. Life takes on a new meaning; every experience is hampered by a new sensitiveness. There is the ecstasy over the red silk for the first real evening gown; the horror of that first glimpse of the ...over whom the mother has succeed... ...in pressing for the two daughters. ...and they are the first awful mo... ...ments of the dance.

The character studies from the solid rich, who give the party to the quietly respectable poor (like the Curtises), are good. The young bloods who hunt in pink coats, the unloved bitter poet, the lew old gentleman whom mothers smile upon because of his age, all are circled before you. Every partner is sharply differentiated, each conversation gone into thoroughly, every lapse, every trip from room to room, is made vivid. Like Olivia, one is given in an evening, a large slice of life; but unlike her one can contemplate it thoughtfully.

This is one story that leaves the reader really happy. It is not a "girl's book"—though girls will blush to find that someone has peered so deeply into their secret hearts. Men, too, will cherish it who have daughters or sisters there on the threshold — or who remember girls they have danced with. You will enjoy it.

LIBRARY NOTES

Circulation for the month of February exceeded the previous high record for the year, made in November, by fifty-two per cent. Sixteen hundred fifty-seven books went into circulation during the shortest month of the year. Of the classified works, fiction led with a total just short of three hundred, followed by literature and history. Last year February had the highest record with eighteen hundred seventy-three. In no other months has that number been exceeded.

Among the more interesting books added during the month are the following: Springs, "Leave Me With a Smile"; Kruif, "Hunger Fighters"; Pickett, "History of Alabama"; Hibbard, "Lyric South"; League of Nations, "Appeal by the Chinese Government (the Lytton report on the Manchurian situation that recently caused the withdrawal of the Japanese from the League); Vandiver, "Traditions and History of Anderson County"; Bridge, "Peking Picnic"; Clark, "Economic Rivalries In China"; Escher, "Modern Foreign Exchange"; Moulton, "War Debts and World Prosperity"; Patterson, "America: World Leader or World Led?"; Ware, "Business and Politics in the Far East"; and, Van Loon, "Van Loon's Geography."

VOL. 1 MARCH 6, 1933 NO. 4

'Y' President Commends Frosh Cabinet

Through the medium of this column I wish to express, on behalf of the Senior Cabinet, our appreciation for the accomplishments realized by the men on the Freshman Cabinet. When we selected these men, we placed confidence in them, believing them to be men who were faithful, earnest, and in whom we could place a trust for the next four years. This was a responsibility, tremendous in its magnitude, and even now I do not believe that they realize the significance of the trust. For upon them depends the future success of the religious activities of our campus.

However, I personally know that thus far you have done a splendid work; and because of the interest you have taken, and the magnanimous progress which you are achieving in the "Y" work, I believe that you will accomplish the end to which we aspired: That of making the Y. M. C. A. a vital factor in the life of P. C. boys. I thank you for the cooperation you have given your able counsellor, Mr. A. Black, and I lift a prayer that the Holy Spirit may guide you in your work henceforth, and that He will reveal to you a vision of the Master as the silent Companion in your deliberations and achievements.

President, Y. M. C. A.
Barney MacLean,

At six-thirty on last Thursday evening, there was an interesting "Y" program held in the auditorium. The freshman "Y" Cabinet had charge of the meeting. The subject discussed was that of "Technocracy." This is the first program that the freshmen have given as a specimen of their accomplishments.

The program on next Thursday night will be under their supervision, and another topic of world interest will be discussed.

An outstanding man, Dr. J. McD. Richards, president of Columbia seminary, was on the campus yesterday. Dr. Richards had charge of the morning service at the First Presbyterian church, then came to the campus to speak to the Ministerial club. His talk was enjoyed very much.

Beginning tonight at ten o'clock, prayer groups will be held on each floor of the respective dormitories prior to the coming of Dr. Anderson to our campus. This move was decided upon by the Y. M. C. A. cabinet and the Ministerial club, which met with Dr. McSween several days ago. It is hoped that every one will attend one of these prayer groups.

OOFUS GOOFUS

For some weeks this corner of information, wisdom, advice, and scandal has not appeared in print. It was probably due to an oversight by the editor, but the writer is not kicking. I enjoyed the rest.

Many interesting and startling bits of information were picked up on a journey taken during the late moratorium on activity.

And speaking of moratoriums, George Mitchell, portly proprietor of an uptown cafe, is going to see what he can do about having the recently-declared moratorium on Sunday suppers extended indefinitely. . . . But he had better not let Coach Johnson find out that the move has helped his business if he doesn't want to be asked for a contribution to the cause of the athletic association.

Colored brethren of a church in a certain city of North Carolina recently displayed remarkable impartiality in the dedication of their newly-finished church building. They solemnly named it the Church of Saint Paul and all the Saints and Apostles.

It seems that gold, or even ... will do almost anything these days. It is rumored that a certain dignified senior journeyed from Alumni ... to the heating plant and back again clad in — well, very little, while the ground lay covered with a sheet of ice; and all for a measly dime.

There's a Scotchman for you.

I had heard that a dog always sought its former home when it was removed to a strange one, but I never suspected that a cow had the same habit until one of our professors had such an experience with a bovine several days ago. It seems that the professor brought home a cow one evening and got up the next morning bright and early, some time before his breakfast.

Humming a gay tune, and blithely swinging a bright and shiny milk pail in one hand, he opened the barn door; but no Bossy was there. The cow was not found until some hours later in the barn lot of her former owner; and the poor prof had no milk for breakfast.

Someone has defined a specialist as a man who continues to learn more and more about less and less until he comes to know everything about nothing; and a philosopher as a person who knows less and less about more and more until he comes to know almost everything.

Don't you get Pipe Hungry once in a while?

The Granger pouch keeps the tobacco fresh

"MAYBE it's back to Nature. Maybe it's something else. I don't know just what it is, but somehow or other I've just got to slip out in the woods and sit down on a log. I always take the old pipe along. Thinking somehow seems easier when you are smoking a pipe. I can fill up my pipe with Granger, and somehow just seem to see things clearer than at any other time.

"Don't know what it is about Granger, but it must be made for pipes—real pipe tobacco.

"Somehow, there's a flavor and aroma about Granger I never found in any other tobacco. When I pack my old pipe tight and good with these big Granger flakes, it's about the coolest smoke I ever enjoyed. It makes me downright pipe hungry every time I look at the package."

Some years ago we made a painstaking, scientific study to find out, if we could, the kind of tobacco best suited for pipes.

Down in the Blue Grass regions of Kentucky, we found a tobacco called White Burley. There is a grade of this tobacco between the kind used for chewing and the varieties suitable for cigarettes that is best suited for pipes. This tobacco is used in Granger.

This tobacco is prepared by a method worked out many years ago by Mr. J. N. Wellman. It gives Granger a fragrance and mellowness that pipe smokers like, and makes it burn to a clean, dry ash. Granger never gums a pipe.

Granger has not been on sale very long, but it has come to be popular, and there is this much about it: We have yet to know of a man who started smoking it, who didn't keep on. Folks seem to like it.

R. O. T. C. BOXING TOURNAMENTS

pletely dominated by Johnnie Robinson, although he was getting the worst of it in the first round of his fight with Guerard. Guerard took the first round with a wide margin and it was clearly his fight up until the time he left his chin open for Robinson to bounce a right off of it. Robinson proved that this was the wrong thing to do, putting Guerard to sleep immediately after. The blow that spelled finis for Guerard was one of the cleanest this writer has seen. "Duke," of the house of Ransom, left his chin uncovered also in the first round battle and began to study the stars accurately.

Phil Hayes made a beautiful comeback after being knocked down in the count of six in the welterweight final. Lowry floored him in the first round. Hayes got up groggy. Referee Harry Bolick laid him back down to take a few more counts. When Hayes finally got back up he waded into Lowry and made some clean blows. It was Lowry's fight all the way, but Hayes put up a game battle.

The middleweight between Paul Yearout and Robert Higbe was faster than any of the bouts. Both boys waded in to give and take, throwing all caution to the winds. Yearout used his reach, experience and ring generalship to take all three rounds. Higbe missed a lot. He would swing a haymaker, miss, and fall to the floor. Counting the times he fell and the times Yearout knocked him down, Higbe was on the floor nine times.

Roy Forehand won the light-heavyweight championship Tuesday night when he defeated Neil Crymes.

Holliday outpointed Harvin for the heavyweight title. Harvin showed a willingness to fight but Holliday was just too good for him.

G. Barron and B. Graham staged a real fight in the first round of the extra special class. Barron whipped Graham and Covington to win this championship.

To add spice to the programs, Capt. Wysor had some small boys, two local fighters, and a bunch of Negroes fight. To climax the tournament a battle royal was put on. Six Negroes fought until only one was left in the ring.

The summary:

Elimination (Monday Night)

Featherweight: Robinson knocked out Ransom.

reduced from forty dollars to twenty-five dollars, and the cost of board in Judd dining hall was reduced from one hundred and eighty dollars to one hundred and sixty dollars for the nine months term. At the same time the tuition and maintenance fee was increased from one hundred to one hundred and fifty dollars. Campus work scholarships will not be awarded next year, and the total amount set aside for scholarships has been slightly reduced.

The cut in student activities fees will necessitate the elimination of two branches of intercollegiate athletics. Baseball and basketball will be dropped next year as intercollegiate sports, but will be retained as intramural sports. The intramural sports program will be enlarged next year.

With the dropping of these sports from the athletic program, Presbyterian college will still have six branches of athletics in which students may win letters. These sports are: football, boxing, tennis, track, rifle shooting, and the newly-added swimming.

The board named a committee to set up permanent regulations concerning scholarships and student subsidies, and gave this committee power to act for the trustees in awarding scholarships.

It was decided to change the number of scheduled meetings of the trustees from two to one a year. The regular meeting will come on the second Tuesday in February. The executive committee will meet at commencement time to pass on applications for degrees and at that time will act for the entire board on any matters which cannot be postponed until the regular February meeting of the trustees.

After the morning session the trustees had dinner in the college dining hall. All of them seemed well pleased with the situation of the college and were much encouraged with the financial outlook.

Members present Tuesday were:

Synod of South Carolina: Dr. W. R. Wallace, Bethel presbytery; A. J. Thackston, Pee Dee; Rev. G. G. Mayes, D.D., Congaree; Rev. H. W. DuBose, D.D., Enoree, chairman of the board; H. M. McLaurin, Harmony, Rev. T. E. Simpson, D.D., Pee Dee; Dr. E. C. Doyle, Piedmont; C. M. Bailey, South Carolina, Dr. Jack H. Young, member-at-large.

Synod of Georgia: Rev. E. L. Hill, D.D., Athens presbytery; Rev. M. M. MacFerrin, D.D., Augusta; Rev. R. S. Boyd, D.D., Macon; Rev. S. W. Dendy, South Georgia; Rev. J. A. Simpson, member-at-large; Rev. M. C. Dendy, alumni member.

Three men will fight it out for the position behind the bat. Junius Montgomery is the only veteran reporting, but Harry Bolick, sophomore, and H. L. Kemp will furnish opposition for the post.

The schedule has not yet been announced for the Palmetto Collegiate league, of which P. C. is a member, but Coach Johnson expects to play about ten games this spring. The Palmetto league consisted of only five teams in 1932. The addition of Furman to the loop will make a six-team circuit. Newberry, Erskine, Carolina, Clemson, and P. C. made up the league last year.

Each team played sixteen games during the 1932 season, eight at home and eight on foreign soil. A similar schedule will be followed for the coming season. Coach Dutch McLean of Newberry college, is again in charge of arranging the schedule, which will be released sometime in the near future.

"RED" UNDERWOOD

ILLUSION:
The Oriental girl reclines on a sheet of plate glass supported by two slaves. The magician waves a white sheet in front of the pretty maiden ... pronounces a few magic words ... Presto! She has disappeared in thin air.

EXPLANATION:
"Disappearing" acts are among the most popular in the repertory of the magician. Dogs, horses, girls, whole rooms disappear—whisked into wings, dropped through trapdoors, hidden by mirrors. But this "disappearance" is a bit different. One of the "slaves" is a hollow dummy. When the magician holds up the sheet the lithe little lady disappears completely—into the convenient figure of the dummy.

IT'S FUN TO BE FOOLED ... IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

There is also a trick of cigarette advertising, whereby a few magic words are used to create the illusion of "Coolness."

EXPLANATION: Coolness is determined by the speed of burning. Fresh cigarettes, retaining their full moisture, burn more slowly ... smoke cooler. Parched, dry cigarettes burn fast. They taste hot. This makes the method of wrapping very important.

Improperly wrapped cigarettes begin to dry out as soon as packed.

Camels are cooler because they come in the famous Humidor Pack of welded, three-ply, MOISTURE-PROOF cellophane ... and because they contain better tobaccos.

A cigarette that is fresh, full of natural moisture, and blended from choice, ripe tobaccos tastes cooler than one that is harsh and acrid. For coolness, choose a fresh cigarette, made from costlier tobaccos.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Try Camels ... give your taste a chance to sense the difference. You'll appreciate it!

Student Body Goes To Polls Tomorrow

FOUNDER'S DAY EXERCISES TO BE HELD WEDNESDAY

Annual Observance To Honor Dr. Jacobs Includes Address By Grandson of Founder.

Founder's day is to be observed at Presbyterian college Wednesday at a special chapel program at 11:45. The speaker will be William Plumer Jacobs, grandson and namesake of Rev. William Plumer Jacobs, D.D., LL.D., founder of the college.

The occasion for the observance of founder's day is the birth date of Dr. Jacobs, who was born March 15, 1812. The exercises Tuesday will commemorate the 121st birthday of Dr. Jacobs and the fifty-third anniversary of the founding of Presbyterian college. Classes will be cut to 45 minutes each, beginning at 8:30.

Dr. Jacobs came to Clinton from Columbia seminary, as pastor of a group of churches, of which the Clinton church was one, and spent 50 years here as pastor. He founded the Thornwell orphanage and Presbyterian college, and built the first stone church on the site of the present First Presbyterian church. The orphanage was founded in 1875. In 1880 the enterprise, then known as Clinton college, and later to become known as Presbyterian college, was launched in what is now the high school building on the Thornwell campus. The stone building to house the First Presbyterian church was finished under his guidance in 1901.

Four sons and one daughter of the founder attended college here. The late James Ferdinand Jacobs was the founder of Jacobs and Company of this city. Dr. J. Dillard Jacobs is the head of a medical firm and an advertising house in Atlanta. Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, who spoke at the exercises here last March, is president of Oglethorpe university; and Dr. William States Jacobs, of Houston, Texas, was for years pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Houston, the largest in the Southern Presbyterian church. The late Mrs. Florence J. Bailey was a member of the first graduating class, in 1883.

Wednesday's speaker is a grandson of the founder. He is president of Jacobs & Company, Inc., a graduate of P. C., and is an interesting speaker.

"An Evening With Verdi" Arranged for Next Week. First Program of Kind In City.

Excerpts, entitled "An Evening With Verdi," will be presented at the Florida Street school next Monday night at 8:15 under the sponsorship of the PaC-SaC.

Selection from Verdi's works will be sung by Thelma Ballou and Lyman Ackley. They will sing excerpts from Aida, Il Trovotore, Rigoletto, and La Traviata. Miss Ballou will sing the parts in Aida and La Traviata, while Mr. Ackley will sing the parts from Rigoletto and Il Trovotore. The explanation of the selections will first be given in English and then sung in Italian. This will enable everyone to understand what the song is about and will add much to the enjoyment of the selections.

This will be the first time an operatic presentation has been offered in Clinton. Lovers of good music will not miss this opportunity to hear these renditions.

The program, sponsored by the PaC-SaC, promises to be well worth the time anybody in an educational way as well as in affording entertainment.

An admission of fifteen cents will be charged for school children and college boys, and twenty-five cents for adults.

BOLICK NAMED RING LEADER

Charleston Boy Heads Fighters Next Year. Clark Chosen As Alternate Captain.

At a meeting of the letter men Monday, Harry Bolick was elected captain, and Bill Clark alternate captain of the Presbyterian college boxing team for 1934.

Bolick, a Charleston boy, will be a junior next year. He has had a colorful boxing career for a college sophomore. Until he was defeated in the finals of the Southeastern A. A. U. tournament he had never lost a fight. Millard, of South Carolina, won a decision over him this year.

Before entering college Bolick had won many fights in South Carolina, most of them in Charleston. Besides boxing, he takes part in three other sports, football, basketball and baseball. He was high scorer in the state during the football season.

Harry should make the Blue Hose a good leader. He works hard, trains all the year round, and is liked by all the boys.

Bill Clark, also a sophomore, hails from Union. Clark won the light heavyweight championship of South Carolina this year.

Debaters Go In Action Tonight

The debating team will begin its season this week with debates at two institutions. Tonight the P. C. affirmative team will engage Erskine's negative in the college chapel, while the negative team is arguing with Erskine's affirmative at Due West. Saturday night, March 18, the affirmative team from P. C. will journey to Charleston for a debate with the College of Charleston.

Wiley, Narton and J. B. Gibbs compose the Presbyterian affirmative teams. M. P. Snipes and W. M. Ransom will argue the negative.

Gibbs and Cecil Lawton will speak at Charleston, with Snipes acting as alternate.

Council Calls Off Greek Celebration

Funds of Pan-Hellenic Committee In Closed Banks Cause Celebration's Postponement.

Due to financial difficulties, which were aggravated by the declared holiday on banking activities, the Pan-Hellenic celebration planned for the past week-end were called off by the Pan-Hellenic council. The action was officially announced Wednesday.

As a result of the postponement the student body received Saturday and Monday as holidays.

Arrangements for the celebration were complete. The orchestra had been secured, the hall engaged, invitations sent out, and everything was in readiness for the event when it was learned that most of the money expected to pay the expenses of the affair was tied up in closed banks. At hurried meetings early in the week, the Pan-Hellenic council decided that the best plan for handling the situation would be to postpone the dances, but no action could be taken until the orchestra leader, "Jelly" Leftwich, could be reached. The council got in touch with him Wednesday and he agreed to cancel the contract, thus releasing the council from the most pressing financial obligation.

The Saturday after Pan-Hellenic is a regular declared holiday; and in recognition of the indefinite postponement of the dances, the administration agreed to give the students an extra holiday. At chapel Thursday morning the student body decided by popular vote to take the extra holiday Monday.

FURMAN WINS WATER MEETS

Both Events In Greenville and Clinton Go To Baptists. Sacco Is Outstanding Performer.

Furman succeeded in defeating the Blue Hose swimming team in two meets last week. On Tuesday the Furman team won by a score of 53-21 in their own tank; and on Thursday night in the P. C. pool, the same team was victorious by a score of 42-16.

At both meets the outstanding feature was the fancy diving of Sacco, Furman flash. McFadden and Valley were P. C.'s entries in this event. McFadden took third in both meets.

The time in three events was faster in the meets here Thursday than in the contest at Furman. There was only a half second's difference in the times for the 40 yard free style events, with the race at Furman being the faster.

Valley, P. C. swimmer, gave a great exhibition of grit in the meet here Thursday when he came back to enter both the medley relay and the fancy diving contest after having been forced to drop from the 140-yard back stroke because of an attack of cramp.

The state swimming meet will be held March 16 at Furman. Clemson, Presbyterian and the Citadel will participate. U. C. also has a meet scheduled with Clemson. The date has not been officially announced.

The summary, comparing both meets:

At Furman: 160-yard relay: Furman first; P. C. second. Time, 1:31.5.

At P. C.: Furman first; P. C. second. Time, 1:33.2.

The [illegible] relay event was postponed

TWO DAYS SET FOR BALLOTING

President To Be Named Tuesday While Other Officers Will Be Voted On Wednesday.

On Tuesday and Wednesday the student body will choose its offices for the coming year. Ballots will be cast at the desk of the officer of the day between 9:10 a. m. and 3:30 p. m. Tuesday for the election of the president of the student body, and at the same hours Wednesday in the races for other offices. In case any of the other offices do not have a candidate receiving the necessary majority, a run-off will be held Thursday.

In the nominations for offices, held last week, male candidates were nominated for four of the posts. Nominations had to be made to oppose them in the race, they also automatically became Rice Lynn was named Y. M. C. A. president, and W. H. Cranford, vice-president. C. N. Plowden and M. P. Freeman were named business manager and advertising manager of the PaC-SaC, respectively.

Tuesday the president of the student body will be named from the list of those running as senior members of the council. The remaining two senior councilmen, three junior councilmen and two sophomores will be elected Wednesday. The other member of the council will be selected from the freshman class during the first semester next year.

Other offices for which elections will be held Wednesday are secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and editor of the PaC-SaC.

Five juniors, six sophomores, and four freshmen are entered in the student council race. Three are running for secretary of the Y. M. C. A., while there are two candidates for each post of PaC-SaC editor and Collegian editor.

An amendment recently added the constitution provides for the election of the student body president on the day preceding the general elections. This is the first time it has been done here.

Select Characters For "Hot Copy"

College Dramatic Club Plans for Presentation of Play Here Early Part of April.

Last Thursday afternoon the Presbyterian college dramatic club held its tryouts for the next play, "Hot Copy." Only the male characters were selected. The female characters are to be chosen within the next few days. As not very many co-eds seem to be interested in dramatic work the club has decided to fill in all vacancies with outside girls.

The male characters for the play are as follows:

Bill Gregory (a young reporter with ambition), Hart Odom.

Bud Rice (in charge of the Herald's back office), H. M. Wilson.

Kenneth Wade (owner and editor of the Evening Herald), Walker Combs.

Dudley Kay (aspiring to the Mayorship), Alman Tommins.

Randolph Peters (outstanding among the local colored boys), Cliff Johnson.

"Hot Copy" is a three-act comedy centering around a struggling newspaper office. This promises to be one of the best plays the dramatic club has ever put on. More time is to be put on the play than the last one because the dialogue in some places jumps from one scene to another with lightning rapidity.

Professor Grafton, the director of the play, stated last week that it plans to have a performance in Clinton somewhere near April 7.

APPRECIATING THE BEAUTIFUL

There is beauty all about us in this w[illegible] a great deal of it passed over and unnoticed by unseeing eyes. There is [illegible] natural beauty, so much of it that we should find comfort [illegible] in its appearance. Music has been written almost since man began. Whole lives have been spent in the creation of melody and song in all the varying degrees of fineness and delicacy, and whole people have made songs to suit their separate tastes. In the field of art the work has been prolific and the names of those who have given themselves in the interest of painting and sculpture are unnumbered. Literature, the most famous art of them all, has in its field beauty that is unlimited, writings that enchant men and hold them. And there is the beauty of nature, the charms of the varying seasons made for man's pleasure and [illegible] used by the Creator of all things.

The nature [illegible] man must have an emotional outlet for he cannot stand long the monotony of living without it. Lack of this outlet has led peoples and nations into listing movements. In the advance of civilization to the west in the United States the people took with them none of the finer things of life. They had sordid, hard existences and scarcely any means of letting loose natural emotions. Thus [illegible]

ILLUSION:

In India, the fakirs present a spectacle to tourists. Two lovely performers break bottles and lamp chimneys before the eyes of the audience, and throw the jagged pieces into a box already filled with broken glass. They step barefooted into the box and do an Oriental dance in the glass without injury.

EXPLANATION:

The performers toughen their feet in a strong solution of alum water and thoroughly rub them with pulverized resin before they appear. They throw the freshly broken glass around the edges of the platform. The glass on which they actually do dance is very thick, heavy, and filed or ground so that the sharp edges are rounded off. The girls just pretend to dance on the sharp glass.

IT'S FUN TO BE FOOLED
... IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

One of the tricks of cigarette advertising is to pretend that "Heat Treatment" is an exclusive process, making one cigarette better than any other.

EXPLANATION: All cigarette manufacturers use heat treatment. It is a routine process of manufacture. The first Camel cigarette ever made was manufactured under the heat-treating process. Every one of the billions of Camels produced since has received the necessary heat treatment.

Harsh, raw tobaccos require intensive processing under high temperatures. The more expensive tobaccos which are naturally mild, call for only a moderate application of heat. Heat treatment never can make cheap, inferior tobacco good.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

P. C. Glee Club Closes Season

The college glee club gave two performances last week, one at Goldville and the other at Queens-Chicora college, in Charlotte. Thursday the organization went to Goldville, and Saturday journeyed to Charlotte. These appearances ended the season for the songsters.

The club visited Queens-Chicora three years ago, but the club this year is more improved than the one heard at that time. The program this season has much more variety than any given in some years. The soloists and orchestra have been so worked into the presentation that interest does not lag during the performance.

The program in Charlotte was the last to be given this season and was considered one of the best put on.

Members of the organization were entertained after the performance at an informal reception given by the girls of the school. The boys returned to Clinton after the reception Saturday night.

Rifle Team Scores For Season Given

Season totals for the members of this year's rifle team at Presbyterian college have been posted on the bulletin board. The sharpshooters finished their season of mail order matches last week. Shoulder to shoulder matches with schools within the state will be held in the near future.

A. D. Ferguson and B. H. Gregg were the only members of the team who fired in all ten matches. Other members participated in various numbers, ranging from nine to one. Individual totals for the season follow:

A. D. Ferguson, 3642; B. H. Gregg, 3477; J. G. Jones, 3178; T. F. Carothers, 3151; M. H. Hunter, 2927; T. H. Wingate, 2869; J. C. McCaskill, 2754; H. S. Odom, 2467; V. S. White, 2382; G. W. Blue Key Works On Several Problems

The Blue Key fraternity at its meeting last Tuesday evening drew up a platform of aims. Among the list of things they intend to strive for on the campus is the abolishment of student athletic tickets. This is the immediate movement under way. At the meeting a committee was appointed which has already referred this resolution to the faculty. The faculty has in turn appointed a committee to meet with the Blue Key committee to decide on the matter. It is thought that in such a small student body this is an unnecessary formality and expense.

The fraternity also nominated a number of men to be voted on for membership in the order. These nominations will be voted on at the next meeting.

Blue Key will sponsor an entertainment at the Thornwell chapel, the tentative date being April 14. This amusement will be for the benefit of the athletic association; and will consist of a ten-minute skit or some form of entertainment to be given by each social fraternity on the campus. The co-eds will add their talent to the program as well a crack squad from the military department, rendering fancy drills. The entertainment promises to be one of the best of the year.

Founder's Day Observed Here

College Student Body Hears W. P. Jacobs In Impressive Memorial Service To His Late Grandfather, Dr. William Plumer Jacobs.

Founder's day was observed at a special chapel program at Presbyterian college Wednesday morning at 11:45 in commemoration of the birth date of Rev. William Plumer Jacobs, D.D., LL.D., founder of the college and Thornwell orphanage, and for nearly a half century pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city. W. P. Jacobs, grandson and namesake of Dr. Jacobs, was the speaker.

Mr. Jacobs' talk was a challenge to those who have benefitted from the pioneer endeavors of Dr. Jacobs to carry on that pioneer spirit of unselfish building for others and thus benefit future generations.

"The purpose of this day," the substance of the address ran, "is not to glorify the man or to commemorate living flesh, but to honor the pioneer spirit which dominated the man. The name is nothing; the spirit of the pioneer is everything. The real lesson of this founder's day observance is to apply the spirit of the founder's life, which is the very spirit of the college, to our own lives.

"Pioneers today have the responsibilities of the accomplishments of former pioneers. They must carry on the work started by their predecessors and give unselfishly to future generations.

"There is a man for every hour, and a glorious opportunity for all those

BALLOT BOX SYSTEM PROVES SUCCESS IN RECENT ELECTION

New Departure Shows Worth At First Trial In Student Body Balloting Last Week.

SIMS NAMED PRESIDENT

Other Council Members Chosen. Also Heads of Publications and Y. M. C. A.

The first three days of the past week were taken up in the election of student body officers for the 1933-34 term at Presbyterian college. The new system, whereby ballot boxes were used, made it necessary for preliminaries to be run off for two of the offices.

The votes for all officers were counted before a quorum of the student council, thereby assuring absolute fairness to all candidates. This was the first time the new system has been tried here.

At the elections ten offices were filled. Six other places were not voted on because only one man had been nominated for each of the positions.

The men elected were: Bob Sims, president of the student body; H. J. Montgomery, vice-president of the student body; C. N. Plowden, senior councilman; D. W. Boggs, secretary of the student body; B. B. Redmond, editor of the PaC-SaC; J. W. Combs, Jr., editor of The Collegian. Others named were: F. E. Jordan and T. F. Carothers, junior councilmen; R. R. Potter and R. N. Belk, sophomore councilmen, and C. B. Lawter, secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

C. N. Plowden was named business manager, and M. P. Freeman, advertising manager of the PaC-SaC; Bob Lynn and W. H. Cranford, president and vice-president of the Y. M. C. A., respectively; and T. B. McTeer, business manager of The Collegian.

The first ballot resulted in a tie between L. A. McCall and C. B. Lawter for the position of "Y" secretary. In the run-over Thursday Lawter won.

Bob Sims, the new student body president, has been a member of the council since his freshman year. He was secretary of the student body last year. Sims is president of the junior class, captain of next fall's football squad, and a heavyweight fighter on the Blue Hose boxing squad. He is from Rock Hill and is a member of Blue Key honorary society and Kappa Alpha social fraternity.

H. J. Montgomery is the new vice-president. He was a member of the council last year. Montgomery entered school with the class of '33, but dropped out a year between his freshman and sophomore terms. He returned last year and has been active in campus life during his stay here. He is a member of the baseball squad and earned a letter in this sport last spring. He is a pledge of Alpha Lambda Tau social fraternity.

The student body secretary is entering his second year as a member of Individual Boxes For Mail Installed

Individual mail boxes for students at the college were installed Tuesday and are now in use. This is a big improvement over the old mail system and the students appreciate the fact. They now are able to get their mail at their leisure.

Much praise should be given the student committee, headed by J. N. Dendy, in putting this movement through so quickly.

There are 109 boxes, costing $175. The student body is commended upon their cooperation in "coming across" with the initial payment of $75. This fund was given by each student out of his breakage fee.

The boxes are of the combination lock type and eliminate the expense and necessity of carrying keys. The new system is working efficiently and serviceably. After a year or so the boxes are expected to pay for the scholarships necessary to the handling of the mail.

Track Team Meets Florida Saturday

The entire Presbyterian college track team leaves Thursday for Gainesville, Fla., on one of the longest trips that a P. C. team has made in some years. The meet with the University of Florida will be held Saturday, March 25.

With the beginning of warm weather this week, Coach McMillian's track charges got down to serious practice. With the first meet only a week away, the men are beginning to get on edge. Last year the Florida team administered the P. C. team a rather severe beating and this year the team hopes to pay back that defeat with interest.

On the track, Captain Osman is again the outstanding star, but he is being closely pushed by Graham, Yearout, Clark and Woods. There seems to be a sufficiency of 440-yard men this season and they bid fair to take all places in the meets.

The 100- and 220-yard events are being left to Yearout and Woods. Both are making good time in these events for this time of the season. Oliver and Jordan seem to be the pick on the mile, with Parker holding down his usual berth in the two-mile, with Redmond not far behind. This was one of the weak departments in last year's team, but prospects seem to be brighter this year.

In the field, Ewing, Stamps and Rampey, veterans from last year's squad, bolstered up by Reeder, promise to give their opponents a hot battle for first place. Freeman, who made a record throw of 180 feet with the javelin last year, and Carothers are alone in this department with the withdrawal of Pinson on account of a bad leg.

The ranks of the pole-vaulters were lessened by one when Underwood strained a stomach muscle in practice Wednesday. He will be out for some time. Carothers and Copeland are the other vaulters who will make the Florida trip.

Erskine Debaters Win From P. C.

The P. C. debaters lost two engagements last Monday night, one at Due West and one in the local auditorium.

The negative team, composed of M. P. Snipes and W. M. Ransom, lost at Erskine, and the affirmative team, composed of J. B. Gibbs and W. Narron, was defeated by the Erskine negative here.

The judges at the debate here were Miss Olive Tuck, English teacher in the Clinton high school; J. H. Witherspoon, superintendent of the Clinton schools, and Rev. Edward Lane, pastor of the local Baptist church.

Anderson Services Changed To April

According to a telegram received by Dr. McSween Thursday, Dr. W. M. Anderson, who was to have held a series of meetings here beginning tomorrow, will be on the campus April 18-21 for a series of seven services.

It was announced in chapel several days ago that the revival services had been postponed indefinitely by the officers of Dr. Anderson's church in Dallas, Texas, because of the banking holiday; but the telegram received here stated that things were looking much brighter and set the date for the first service as the night of April 18.

Dr. Anderson is a pleasing and inspiring speaker, and the student body is looking forward with interest to his coming here. A number of students heard him at the First Presbyterian church at Spartanburg last fall.

The "depression edition" of The Erskine Mirror illustrates a most sensible way of meeting the depression. The paper was cut down to a single sheet for the last edition. Another result of the banking holiday.

Jig-saw puzzles have declined in popularity on the campus since the installation of the new mail boxes. The new fad is tinkering with the combination lock on your mail box.

THE PIONEER

"We come here, not to honor the man, but to honor the spirit which actuated the life of that man."

These words sound the keynote of the Founder's Day address delivered by William P. Jacobs at the chapel exercises Wednesday. We are not only to give honor to the memory of the name, Dr. William Plumer Jacobs, but to give honor and applause to the pioneer spirit which dwelled in him and actuated him in the unselfish giving of his energies to the development of the two institutions which stand in Clinton today as monuments to his efforts. And above all, we are to apply the lessons which the life of this man teaches to our own lives.

That same pioneer spirit has been back of every worthy enterprise ever completed. The unselfishness, the determination, the dependability, the faith—all go to make up that almost intangible something called the pioneer spirit. Columbus had it when he set out on the journey which brought him to the discovery of a new land; Morse had it when he worked long and faithfully on the development of the telegraph; Dr. Jacobs had it when he came to the hamlet of Clinton. It was the spirit of the pioneer that caused him to remain in the unpromising village for half a century and found there the institutions which meant much to generations which have followed him; it was the unselfish courage and faith of the pioneer which caused him on in his great work in spite of physical handicaps.

The life of Dr. William Plumer Jacobs is a challenge to each one of us to carry on the spirit which his life made the spirit of Presbyterian College—the spirit of the pioneer, the unselfish labor to others and the devotion of a lifetime of effort to the betterment of the world in which we live for the benefit of generations to follow us.

MEDIOCRITY

"To every man there openeth
A way, and ways, and a way.
And the high soul climbs the high way,
And the low soul gropes the low;
And in between on the misty flats,
The rest drift to and fro."

Mediocrity is one of man's great sins. The average person is so standly content to advance to the "fair" stage and remain in anything that he does always in the shadowy obscureness of mediocrity. He does not try to gain anything above it; he is unwilling to exert the little extra energy that would enable him to look down upon the heads of others; and be looked up to as the best in his line. The greater part of work always comes in the rise to the mediocre, but invariably when one has reached this stage he stops, wholly satisfied with himself and happy in the thought that he has gone as far as the average. This is the reason that there are more students making "B's" and "C's" than there are failing or making excellent marks. Of course there is a certain per cent at the bottom content with no attainment, but the majority reaches the "fair" plane. This is the reason that one man out of a hundred is a success. This is what the whole "curve of life" is based upon.

In any field or any phase of life the man who makes the little bit of extra study, who practices a little harder, who trains a little longer is the success, the "star," the man of importance. The greatest musicians, whether with instrument or voice they make their fame, are the ones who have studied and practiced for the perfection of their talent. Undoubtedly there are exceptions to every rule, there are geniuses in every line, but it still stands out that the person with the extra will is the one who rises above the common "rabble." The greatest leaders of world history are those men who develop the qualities of courage and foresight above the race of men. The greatest actors of today are the unusual, those who have gone above with the extra something that the majority does not have.

If we would seek success in any line we must be wholly willing to give the extra energy that makes toward perfection. In any form of activity we must realize that "practice makes perfect." If we would be "men of the hour" we must realize that it is necessary to raise ourselves from the common level and in making a distinctive contribution to the world lift ourselves from the deadliness of mediocrity. —W. F. G.

ALUMNI

Last week W. Hazel Youngblood, class of '17, was on the campus. Mr. Youngblood is connected with the foreign division of the National City bank of New York. Accompanying him were George W. Wise, class of '19, of Trenton, S. C., and John F. Marsh, class of '16.

Last week-end Bob Ritchie, class of '31, and Gus Adams, class of '32, were visitors on the campus.

During the past week Otto Ferrene, class of '31, was a visitor here. Ferrene is teaching science at Presbyterian Junior college, Maxton, N. C. He is also dean at the institution.

Mike Caskey stopped by for a while here Thursday morning. Mike finished with the class of '32.

ESSENCE —OF— BULL

You know, when a freshman enters school, just about the first serious questions asked of him by his English professor are: "Why did you come to college?" "What do you expect to get out of college?" The professor receives various answers, none of which are correct, and finally has to answer the question himself. He tells the students that in the course of their college careers they are to learn how to live. He explains further that their contacts with other students and the different opinions about all subjects that they hear, go to make up most of the actual benefit they receive from college. In other words, "bull sessions" are one of the greatest factors in the student's life.

Before I go too far, let me tell you the object of the aforestated wearisome words. I was merely preparing you for a "bull" column that will appear each week. You can expect anything and will probably get nothing out of it. I might just "bull" myself, which I grant would be none too interesting, or I might repeat that which I have heard during the week past. However, I am not going to use sex in this argument, even if it is statistically correct that a "bull session" cannot remain ten minutes on any subject without reverting to sex.

Now that you get the gist of the thing, I will continue. Did you ever wonder where the term "bull" originated? I have, and frankly, I haven't the faintest idea in the world how this mighty word came into use. I'll try to have a suitable explanation next week. In the meantime, you think about it.

Just one more question before I go. Have you ever tried to define the term, "bull session"? See if you can beat this: "Bull sessions" are profound expostulations on the part of different individuals of a group to which anyone is invited and none barred, in which narration, exaggeration, prevarication, "gossipation," and refutation are not prohibited. Besides being all of this, "bull sessions" are the greatest pastime the world has ever known.

The "Y" Survey

VOL. 1 MONDAY, MARCH 20, 1933 NO. 6

NEW Y. M. C. A. OFFICERS ELECTED

As a result of the election, the following men were chosen to head the Y. M. C. A. for the coming year:
President, R. D. Lynn.
Vice-President, W. H. Cranford.
Secretary-Treasurer, C. B. Lawter.
The new officers will take over their duties on April 5th.

There will be a special program at the "Y" meeting next Thursday night. The Thornwell orphanage boys and girls will come over to give a specially arranged program, which will be given under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor of the institution. At some later date, the "Y" will give a return program to this organization.

Let's all be there.

Dr. F. D. Jones, member of the faculty, gave an interesting message at the "Y" meeting last Thursday night. His subject was "The Student and the Church." In the course of the talk, Dr. Jones told how, when a boy leaves home, he has a close contact with the church, but in just a short time his interest is lost. This is not true in every case, but it is true in a large number. The four years of college life turns many men away from Christ and the church. Why is this? There are so many things to take up his time that he hardly has time to even think about worship. We do not do this intentionally, but before it is noticed, we are in this mood. Naturally, while at college new ideas will be brought out. There are so many things that must be harmonized. The real problem is how to get the student's interest to stay in the church.

Dr. Jones dwelt on three main points. They are as follows:
1. "I do not see how a person can be a Christian and not be in the church."
2. "The value of the church is unlimited."
3. "Loyalty to the church."

The Ministerial club met yesterday and carried out the regular program. An outstanding speaker is expected to be present for the next meeting. Plans are not yet definite.

The honorary Christian leadership fraternity, Delta Chi Alpha, is pushing forward with special plans that will soon take definite shape.

The fraternity was recently chartered on the campus, as the Gamma chapter. Thus far there are three colleges that have chapters, University of South Carolina, Wofford and P. C.

Total Of Seventy Get No Demerits

A total of seventy members of the student body went through the first semester without getting a single demerit. Twenty-two of this number were seniors, twenty-one were freshmen. The sophomores had fifteen members without a single red mark by their names. The junior class had only twelve. The complete list follows:

Senior class: C. B. Barnwell, N. G. Barron, G. A. Black, Jr., J. N. Dendy, G. S. Dominick, G. W. Ewing, A. D. Ferguson, H. H. Ferguson, J. R. Ferguson, M. H. Hunter, Jr., Henri Jones, C. H. Land, N. The non-fraternity group had a higher average than the student body as a whole or the fraternity group, although both Alpha Lambda Tau and Kappa Alpha fraternities had higher averages.

The senior class led in scholarship with an average of 1.709. The juniors followed with 1.697, followed by the freshmen with 1.255. The sophomores trailed with 1.185.

DISCORDS FROM THE GLEE CLUB

Yes, here we are again, just as fresh as the first breath of spring; has spring ever blown her breath in your face? . . . Yes, she uses May breath.

And what is so rare as a day in June? We suppose it is the band playing up to the exact cadence, or an ice-cube at the equator in August.

Three cheers for our glee club. They have given this column subject matter more times than one.

Wylie did not see the airport on the last glee club trip, but his car did come out of gas.

"Rubinoff" Tommins claims to know a little about violin technique, but we understand that he met a real technician in Elberton. Was it a violin technician, Tommins?

The audience was greatly amused when "Tiz" appeared with his suspenders lowered . . . and Burns acted childish in Gainesville that a lady mate a few years his senior took him for a laddie of nineteen.

Odom seems not to have reached the age of discretion. It is reported that he mistook a college graduate for a high school girl.

After making his first "da," Boo Elliott was accused of having a voice like Rudy Vallee, and Forehand claims that a sweet young thing asked him if he was bashful or just dumb. We notice that Forehand is not publishing what his answer was. Either way he could have gotten him in bad.

Al. Montgomery is reported to have become very fond of fig newtons on the last trip. No, Sir Isaac was not involved.

"Bad Eye" McCutchen must have looked mighty suspiciously around one town in Georgia. This fellow told his date to watch "Mc" when he left so as to be sure all the silverware was present.

JACK ROBINSON

"It happened before you could say Jack Robinson," means, as you know, it happened quickly. According to an old English story Jack Robinson was noted for the shortness of his visits. Jack would call at a home and before the servant had time to announce his name he would leave. The present-day expression comes from the old story.

ILLUSION:

A large packing case is exhibited on a raised platform. A young woman climbs into the box. Head, hands and feet protrude, and are held by spectators while the magician takes a crosscut saw and, with the help of an assistant, saws through the center of the box and apparently through the woman.

EXPLANATION:

There are many explanations for this illusion. One method of performing this illusion requires the presence of two girls in the box. One girl curls up in the left half of the box with her head and hands protruding, giving the effect you see illustrated above. The other girl is doubled up in the right half of the box, with only her feet showing. Nobody is sawed in half.

It's fun to be fooled — ... it's more fun to KNOW

Cigarette advertising, too, has its tricks. Consider the illusion that "Flavor" can be achieved by some kind of magical hocus-pocus in manufacturing.

EXPLANATION: Just three factors control the flavor of a cigarette. The addition of artificial flavoring. The blending of various tobaccos. And the quality of the tobaccos themselves. Quality is by far the most important. Domestic cigarette tobaccos vary in price from 5¢ a pound up to 40¢ a pound. Imported tobaccos vary from 50¢ a pound to $1.15.

No wonder, then, that cigarettes differ in taste—since distinctive, pleasing flavor depends so largely upon the blending of the costlier tobaccos.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Try Camels. Give your taste a chance to sense the subtle difference that lies in costlier tobaccos . . . a difference that means all the world in smoking pleasure . . . in pure, unalloyed satisfaction.

SPRING

Just the sun rises before we do and is shining in the window when the first bell calls us to wake, we hear not one note of the long months of late fall and winter. All [illegible] leaves, delicate signs of life that lay hidden all the time. A fresh breeze is rustling through them, and in the window, no more any blast of winter but a gently stirring breath of spring.

"Time to work" the sun smiles gently to us, the lacy leaves signal it, the wind whispers it softly. All through the long night of winter they have been absent, not able to speak any such message to us. Now, after nature's long rest, the sun begins again to make the earth grow with its light and heat; the leaves appear and use the sap to build a larger, better tree; the friendly breezes blow and make us feel like living again.

"What's the use?" I grumbled last night, and quit, but now Spring tells me that this day brings the same difficulties, but that now they are not to be feared. Spring gives the light to see, the power in my veins to make the best of them. Spring, activity, the spirit of GO sifts into the very marrow of my bones.

Outside we see the new life moving incessantly. Nothing is still. Leaves and clouds, birds and ants are hustling in the growing time. There are no loafers—the air may languish in mid-August and birds and insects seem idle—but not now. Once the larders are filled with hard-found food and nests built and young ones raised, there is perhaps time to sit at ease.

Now, in the springtime of life, we must work. Summer of our lives will find it too hard to make ready for the winter. The choicest morsels of life are laid away in spring. In the heat of business as we reach midsummer we will have little time to stop and gather in other interests to carry us through the leisure of later years. It will be too late to pick up tidbits of literature, astronomy, or such then. We must store them up now.

Nature is busy. With ceaseless activity it is making ready for the future. We too must realize that in this springtime we must prepare. For the sake of the future—Work!

WAR OR PEACE

Storm clouds of Mars hover over Europe and the world stands aghast wondering if the winds of peace will blow them away or if they will break throwing that part of the world into chaos.

Should war come, the old story will begin again. Men will gather and pray for successful slaughter. The editors of the daily press will begin venemously to stir men to hatred and manslaughter in the name of patriotism, happy in the receipt of an increasing personal prosperity. Manufacturers and salesmen for military stores will hurry delightedly about their business, in the hope of doubled incomes.

Young military authorities will hurry hither and thither, drawing [illegible] may, with the expectation of receiving for the slaughter of other men various little ornaments ar ribbons, crosses, orders, and stars. Idle ladies and gentlemen will make a great fuss, entering their names in advance for the Red Cross Society, and make ready to bind up the wounds of those their husbands and brothers will mutilate. They will fancy that in so doing they are performing a most Christian work.

Men will march along, snatched from peaceful labors and from their families—hundreds of thousands of simple-minded, good-natured men with murderous weapons in their hands—anywhere they may be driven. They will lighten their souls with songs, will smother despair with ribaldry and wine. They will march, freeze, hunger, suffer from sickness and die or finally come to some place where they will be slain by the thousands for no reason; murdered by men whom they have never seen before, and who have never done nor could do them any mischief.

And when the number of sick, wounded, and killed becomes so great that there are not enough hands left to pick them up and when the air is so infected with the putrefying scent of the "food for powder" that even the authorities find its disagreeable, a truce will be made. The wounded will be picked up anyhow, the sick will be brought in and huddled in heaps, the killed will be covered with earth and lime, and once more the crowd of deluded men will be led on and on until those who have devised the project, weary of it, or those who thought it so profitable receive their spoil. And so once more men will be made savage, fierce, brutal, and love will wane in the world, and the Christianizing of mankind will lapse for years.

The men who have reaped profit from it all will assert that since there has been a war there must needs have been one, and that other wars must follow, and they will again prepare future generations for a continuance of slaughter, depraving them from their birth.

Take the money that has been spent for war and it will clothe every man, woman and child in an attire of which kings and queens would be proud. It will build a school house in every valley over the earth. It will crown every hillside with a temple of worship consecrated to the gospel of peace.

—H. C.

ALUMNI CHAPTERS

The alumni of Oconee county have broken the ice in the formation of alumni chapters. P. C. graduates in other towns should follow suit.

The alumni association at its fall meeting here passed a resolution recommending that local units of alumni be formed and the formation of the Alumni Association of Oconee County is the initial response to this resolution. The men who are responsible for this organization are to be commended for their interest in the school, shown by the effort to band former students together in a compact group.

An organization such as the present alumni association is too bulky for any concentrated effort in the interests of the college; although it is better than no organization at all. Alumni chapters in cities where there are eight or more graduates will greatly increase the usefulness of these graduates to the school. Nineteen towns in five neighboring states have eight or more P. C. graduates residing in them. Former students should look around them for other former students with whom to band and form a chapter.

Students here now, especially those who graduate this spring, will be a great power in carrying on the movement to establish active alumni chapters in every county in the state. With college memories fresh and interest in the alma mater still very much alive, their efforts will stimulate the movement greatly.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

The officers of the day and their orderlies for the week are:

Monday, March 27—Lt. Col. C. W. Adams, with Sgt. T. B. McTeer as orderly.

Tuesday, March 28—Capt. C. B. Barnwell, with Cpl. H. W. Wilson as orderly.

Wednesday, March 29—Capt. G. W. Ewing, with Cpl. J. M. Tolbert as orderly.

Thursday, March 30—Major T. A. Howell, with Cpl. D. W. Boggs as orderly.

Friday, March 31 — Capt. A. L. Woodside, with Cpl. H. E. Bolick as orderly.

Saturday, April 1—Capt. J. B. Copeland, with Cpl. T. F. Carothers as orderly.

Attention is called to the regulations governing unauthorized absence from drill or class. This regulation is in the booklet issued to all cadets at the first of school. The notice was read at drill and posted on the bulletin board at the Armory and the O. D.'s office. The rule will be strictly adhered to in the future.

The freshmen will take up rifle marksmanship next week. It is hoped that several good shots will be found in the class to fill the berths on the rifle team left vacant at the end of this season.

There will be uniform inspection Tuesday morning at drill period. Check is being made on all missing buttons and insignia. There will be no rifle inspection this week.

Derelictions may be given for almost anything. A notice on the bulletin board listed one cadet with a dereliction for "excessive growth of beard."

P. C. Personalities In Rhyme

(Editor's note: If one of these hit at you, do not get sore. You can laugh at somebody else next week).

There was a young man named MacLean
Who got caught in a shower of rain.
He gazed at the sky,
Then started to cry,
For a raindrop had shattered his brain.

Once a young fellow named "Cubby"
Took pains with his clothes, but looked scrubby.
He had oodles of jack,
But in spite of this fact,
He just couldn't help being nubby.

A beetle-browed fellow named "Red"
Got lost and couldn't find his bed;
He stumbled and fell,
Then let out a yell.
He thought he had busted his head.

"Pukky-wukky" is a very nice lad,
But sometimes he is very bad;
He got in jail
And paid his bail,
Now he's very, very glad.

There was a young boxer of fame,
Bolick was the gentleman's name.
His joints were loose,
And he walked like a goose,
But he got there just the same.

WHO'S WHO ON THE P. C. CAMPUS

BEN W. COVINGTON, JR.

COVINGTON

Cheer leader, '31; frosh football manager, '31; varstiy football manager, '32; forensic club; chairman Executive Committee Y. M. C. A. work; Sigma Upsilon; vice-president Red Dragon; president Board of Publications; president Gamma Sigma; president Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity; treasurer Blue Key; assistant editor The Collegian; business manager PaC-SaC, '33; editor The Blue Stocking, '32; glee club, '30, '31.

Ben W. Covington, Jr., was born at Florence, S. C., April 26, 1911. He has lived there since.

When asked what his earliest ambitions were he said, "I always have been more or less interested in law and still am, for this reason: Up to this time money has been the deciding factor in dealing out justice. The man with the funds has been able through those funds to get by. It is the man without money who has had to pay. He has had to put up with injustice. I am interested in seeing justice dealt out fairly, with no regard for money."

Here is Ben's philosophy: "Work as if you were going to die tomorrow and be moderate in all else as if you were going to live forever. In that work, always let service to others be predominant. The only true happiness comes in service to others. Proverbially speaking, do all within your power for the happiness and well-being of your fellowman and expect from your fellowman NOTHING. In this there is no possibility of disappointment.

"One other thing, the only true education that it is possible for man to acquire is throuh his powers of observation of all that takes place around him. Without the eye for keen observation and a thorough understanding of what one observes a person will be mentally blind.

"The hardest job for the college man is the building of backbone that will enable him to weather the inevitable gales of life which follow graduation. Unless the college man of today makes himself a strong individual our nation of tomorrow must crumble."

Covington's ambition is to take a law course, with a political career in view.

He says of the life around him: "Having visited a number of larger and smaller institutions of learning in the South, I am of the opinion that Presbyterian college is without a doubt the finest school of its type a man may have the opportunity of attending. The members of the student body in their personal relationships are cooperative to the point of perfection. My college days have been the happiest of my life to the present time and I feel that I have made contacts here that will be very dear to me in future years."

"The greatest day of my life here at P. C.," says Covington, was the first time a group of men placed confidence in me and responsibility on me to perform some particular duty. This automatically placed me in the service of others and consequently was the greatest happiness I had ever experienced."

GEORGE W. EWING

EWING

Freshman football, '29; varsity football, '30, '31, '32; The Blue Stocking staff, '30, '31; student assistant in biology, '32; Block "P" club; vice-president Chi Beta Phi, honorary scientific fraternity; captain R. O. T. C.

George W. Ewing was born at Orlando, Florida, on April 15, 1912. For the past several years he has lived at Waycross, Ga. In his four years at Presbyterian college, George has been an active and valuable member of the student body. Not only has he made letters in football and track, but also he has made a ood record as a student. He has served as student assistant in biology for the past term; and holds the distinction of being the only man in his class who has never received a demerit during his three and a half years here. In addition to this he was on The Blue Stocking staff for several years. With it all, he is a good sport and a kind friend.

In his earlier years he was interested in architecture and construction. Since that time he has quite changed and now, he says, "My ambitions today consist of only two things. They are: first, to make a success in the medical profession, and second, to enjoy a home of my own."

George's philosophy is, "Pay all my debts of affection, meet all my obligations of friendship, assume no undertaking that I cannot fulfill, and pay my bills one hundred cents on the dollar. I do not believe in arguing. Little is gained from argument. The opposing parties in the wrangle do not seek to learn themselves, and they seldom enlighten others. Every fellow is entitled to his opinion. If he is right he need not argue to prove it. If he is wrong argument will not make him right. Argument only serves to fan the sparks of mental opposition into a flame of anger. To look upon life with faith, hope and good cheer, and keep my mnid and heart free from hatred, jealousy and revenge."

"The greatest day of my life here at P. C. was the day of the Wofford-P. C. freshman football game my freshman year. That day I found myself a part of a machine functioning for a good cause and a great school. It was the first athletic contest that I had ever taken part in."

When asked about his opinion of the life around him, George said, "The life about me is desirable. I think that here at P. C. we have a representation of the average youth of America. I feel that the friends I have made here will be life-long ones."

ESSENCE —OF— BULL

I was sittin' in on a "session" the other day and somehow or other the subject got around to the funny things that happen to drunks. One fellow told a story about a "drunk" who was on a party at a house about ten miles from his own home. A terrible storm was blowing outside, and when time came to leave no one could go because it was impossible to drive a car in such weather. Well—all went along fine until the liquor gave out. All decided that it would be an awful catastrophe to have to drive home the next morning without a drink. So our friend, the "drunk," went out into the blizzard, got into his car and somehow managed to drive the ten miles to his home. There he obtained a quart from his own private stock and drove all the way back to the party. He was then satisfied because he had some liquor to keep him warm on the cold trip homeward when daylight came.

That one reminded me of a funny incident that happened to a friend of mine. This fellow got "tanked up" and, having nothing better to do, went home. Again, having nothing better to do, he went to bed. Just before Morpheus seized him in the wily clutche of drunken slumber, someone in the next room dropped some books on the floor. Once, and then [illegible] thought that he had fallen out of bed and rolled under it. He got up, secured a flashlight, and looked under the bed for himself.

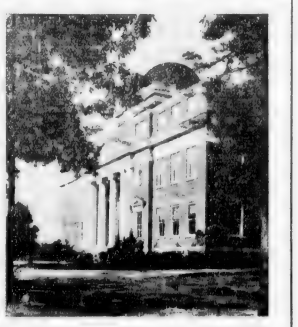
So much for drunks.

Now let's have some yarns about our illustrious professors. A couple of funny things happened last week. You know the professor who is noted for his absentmindedness. I don't want to mention any names, but anyhow in the abnormal psychology class the other day the subject got around to absentminded people, and Dr. ——— said that he was riding along in his automobile on a recent trip and looked at his watch to see how much gas he had.

I don't know whether you thought that was so funny or not, but the next one is keen. Stop me if you have heard it.

The abnormal psychology class went down to Columbia last Monday for a clinic at the insane asylum. We enjoyed a good lecture, and saw a number of typical examples of certain kinds of insanity. We were then shown through the institution. We passed through a couple of wards and then came to a recreation parlor where a number of nuts were playing cards, etc. Dr. "Bug" Davis, who went on the trip out of personal interest, walked up to one of the tables where the inmates were playing bridge.

"Playing contract?" he asked in a somewhat amused tone.



"Uh, huh," answered one of the nuts.

"That's pretty good," said Dr. Davis, giving us a sly wink. "Why, I can't even play that game myself."

The nut looked up at him and grinned wisely. "It takes a man with brains to play this game," he said.

ILLUSION:

The magician exhibits a flower pot with hinged sides on a table in the center of the stage. He opens out the sides to show that this container is empty. Closing it up, he places a screen between it and the audience. After a short period of magic incantations he removes the screen. The astounded audience sees a beautiful girl, covered to the shoulders in lovely flowers, rising from the "empty" container. Where did she come from?

EXPLANATION:

The girl was hiding behind the drape of the table. There is a trap door in the bottom of the flower pot, with a hole large enough to allow her to crawl through. The flowers, called "magicians' feather flowers," are a regular part of a magician's outfit. The flower girl wears a rubber tunic and a bathing cap to keep the flowers compressed into small space. She slides the tunic down and the flowers expand when she emerges.

IT'S FUN TO BE FOOLED
...IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

A trick frequently worked in cigarette advertising is the illusion that mildness in a cigarette comes from mysterious processes of manufacture.

EXPLANATION: All popular cigarettes today are made in modern sanitary factories with up-to-date machinery. All are heat treated—some more intensively than others, because raw, inferior tobaccos require more intensive treatment than choice, ripe tobaccos.

The real difference comes in the tobaccos that are used. The better the tobacco, the milder it is.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

That is why Camels are so mild. That is why Camels have given more pleasure to more people than any other cigarette ever made.

It's the secret of Camels' rich "bouquet"... their cool flavor... their non-irritating mildness.

Give your taste a chance to appreciate the greater pleasure and satisfaction of the more expensive tobaccos.

Opening Diamond Series Divided

Presbyterian Wins First Game With Erskine, 8-4. Lose Second By 2-1 Score.

The Blue Hose baseball team broke even in its first series of the season last week. P. C. won the first game Wednesday against Erskine, 8-4, and lost to the same team Thursday by a 2-1 count.

In the first contest, J. Montgomery was the leading hitter, followed closely by Jack Wood, who got two safe blows out of four trips to the plate. Montgomery got three out of five, one of them a homer in the fourth inning with one man on base to knot the count at two-all. Erskine again forged ahead in their half of the fifth when Moffatt scored from second on McCaw's single. In the eighth stanza P. C. chalked up four runs and added two more in the final inning to win, 8-4.

With one out in the eighth, Odiorne singled, stole second and came home on Holcomb's sharp bingle. Bolick was hit by a pitched ball to put two men on base, and Montgomery was safe at first on Bolton's error on the third strike, to fill the bags. Nettles rapped out a hit to score all three men.

P. C. got a total of eleven hits to five for the Seceders.

Erskine Wins Second

In the second game Erskine took the lead in the first inning and held it throughout the contest, although a rally by the Blue Hose in the ninth frame came near tying the score.

P. C.'s score in the last inning came when Johnny Ferguson singled, went to second on an error by Simonton and scored on Bissett's hit to center field. Odiorne's long fly to center field resulted in a double play when Bissett started home on the hit, and Holcomb flied out to the pitcher to end the game.

This game was the first collegiate contest hurled by Harry (Up-a-tnatum) Nettles. He allowed seven hits, all well scattered, struck out three men and gave no free passes.

Tuesday and Wednesday the Hose play Newberry at Newberry. The first home game of the season will come Thursday when Clemson comes here for two games.

Coach Johnson has announced a change in the schedule. The games with Erskine scheduled to be played here April 17 and 18 will be played on April 18 and 19.

Mr. Beck's message will be of special interest to local business men, who will be invited to hear the distinguished visitor.

Presbyterian Students Refuse To Let All Fools' Day Pass Unnoticed

The students were sadly disappointed Saturday morning when the mellow tones of the college bell failed to call them to breakfast. The cause of the trouble was not located until "Gong-Kisker" Montgomery found that some April fool joker had stolen the clapper.

At breakfast Mr. Hunter announced in a voice exhibiting a slight bit of indignation that the bell would not ring and that the boys would have to meet classes on their own initiative.

During the first period an old clapper was inserted in the bell which gave a sound resembling "the bells of Avalon," according to Montgomery. By the end of the second period the clapper had been found. It seems that sometime during the morning Mr. [illegible] had [illegible] utes later he was informed that Dr. Jones had found the heavy instrument in his desk. The clapper was put "one" in the bell as soon as possible and was in working order by the third period.

The boys seemed to be full of themselves Saturday; in fact they were so full of their April fool jokes that even a fellow's best friends would not believe his pal.

Saturday morning Mr. Hunter was hurriedly called to the 'phone by his little daughter. As soon as he reached the 'phone the little one cried in an innocent voice "April fool." "Bob" Wylie was also called to the 'phone in a similar manner. Only in the case of "Bob" they let him try to talk to the [illegible] gone [illegible] Reynolds, Carothers, Underwood, Copeland, Graham, Osman, Yearout, Wood, Ewing, Rampey, Freeman, Peeples, Clark, Parker, Jordan, Pinson, Oliver, B. Varsity Wins By 88-38 Count, and Freshmen 73-49. Clean Sweep Made In Several Departments. Two State Marks Exceeded. Craig High Scorer.

By Fred Ross

The Presbyterian college track teams completely overwhelmed the Carolina Gamecocks here Saturday to win a double-header by large margins. The varsity took the University men into camp to the tune of 88 to 38. The freshmen won 73 to 49.

The Blue Hose showed a complete superiority in all departments except the shot put, the hurdles and high jump. P. C. won ten first places to Carolina's four.

Tom Craig, Carolina's sensational sophomore, was high scorer with 16 points to his credit. He took first places in the shot put and high jump and second in the javelin and discus. Osman and Yearout of P. C., and Smith of Carolina, tied for second scoring honors, annexing ten points each.

Besides being high scorer, Craig almost threw the shot out of the lot. He hurled it 45 feet 4 inches to better the state record by about four feet. Craig has been throwing the shot this distance consistently all year and he is likely to hold the record the morning after the state meet.

Powell Freeman of P. C., also bettered a state record when he tossed the javelin 180 feet 1 inch. This is the second time Freeman has smashed the javelin mark, having thrown it 182 feet in the Florida meet.

Mauney, of Carolina, placed second in the 220, and third in the 100-yard dashes, and Smith won two first places in the hurdles, to be the only Carolina men to even place in the track events. Osman, Graham and Clark made a grand slam of the 440 and 880. Oliver, McDuffie and Patton took all three places in the mile, as did Jordan, Parker and Redmond in the two-mile.

Frank Carothers and Red Underwood continued to scale the bar in the pole vault at a height good enough to win. Bill Clark gave the P. C. fans a pleasant surprise when he won second place in the high jump. George Ewing twirled the discus 124 feet 9 inches to win a first in that event. Paul Yearout won the 100 and 220-yard dashes, the 100 in 10 seconds flat, and the 220 in 22.6.

The freshmen presented a well-rounded team, with Wilbanks the big gun. Wilbanks took four first places, annexing 20 points to be high scorer of the entire meet. Guerard took three firsts to score 15 points.

MEMORY

[illegible] has not yet explained fully his remarkable faculty of memory — he only knows that it is a means of recording previous concepts, that it is essential to the development of the mind as it ranks high in the scale of mental connection. Memory is, of course, a part of the psychic power of human life, a definite spoke in the wheel that makes for the richness of existence. And though man can not wholly explain this abstract thing that is so important to humans as realizes its uses and he knows its peculiar workings. Primarily it is for the retention of knowledge to aid in the "great struggle," but it is said it keeps all impressions, some more vividly than others, and if developed highly enough can bring forth things stored away for years.

"What beastly things our memories insist on cherishing," a writer has said and is it not true that our memories do seem forever the unpleasant and the rather sordid events in our lives? But it is quite natural that they should retain these so-called beastly things for they are impressive and their vividness marks them indelibly and their clearness cannot be lost. When some sudden or open looking we might say to ourselves, "Forgive and forget," and then forgive, but try as we might we find it impossible to forget. Even though it is natural to remember unpleasantness we should snuff it and smother it until we can no longer hear its obstinate cry.

The little nothings buried in the dim recesses of memory, when called to mind, can sometimes bring enough happiness to make up for all the disagreeable events. A song played on an unforgotten yesterday when heard again can fill me with a joyous reverie. A flower seen unexpectedly may call up a faded memory and give the heart a sudden warmth. What is more pleasant than talking over old times, of recalling with someone places we have been and little things we have done? Most of us get a sort of thrill out of hearing a familiar voice say, "Do you remember that time?" And it is memory that gives us the joy of recalling the little things that one call forgotten — the little things that are happiness and joy and the glory of living.

We must be careful and keep a memory of right and love, and never [illegible] to crowd out what is [illegible] cherishing — evil and deathly [illegible] and hatefulness, and futility.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

In view of the fact that a series of programs on "world topics" that had meagre attendance has just been concluded, it has occurred to me that perhaps through an open letter some of the importance of this subject could be emphasized.

Too few of us realize how urgent it is that the public keep itself informed on current civic issues. We are supposed to be a democratic people and the government the voice of the people. How many of us would understand why, if the United States should declare war tomorrow? Very few, I am certain, yet someone has said war is almost inevitable within the next two months. Such broad statements are foolish, of course, for if our peace-loving people will stop predicting and preaching war and playing with the instruments of war, there will never be one.

It is public opinion that runs our country largely today. The trouble is that the opinion is coming from such a handful and they are looking toward their own interests. It is the duty of the people to express themselves if they agree or disagree with any current movement. They must not shrink from expressing themselves.

It is most important that we keep up with the international questions of the day for the interests of our nation are so widespread. The fate of our republic lies in the hands of us, her citizens and future citizens. If the people are to control the fate of the nation it is up to them to be informed so as to know how and what to do.

When Socialism, foreign missions, the Russian-Japanese conflict, Communism, Sovietism, and many other topics are mentioned, too many of us are prone to snicker and fool ourselves into believing such affairs do not concern us. We should stop for a moment to look about and perceive the horde of sects and orders forming in the under-currents of our country.

The public gripes at the government to bring them out of the present economic situation. It is up to the people themselves to go to work and devise their own salvation. It is up to them to review the plans of brilliant men with receptive minds either to reject or to accept them.

We have recently been given a "new deal." The cards are on the table. It is up to us to pick them up and look them over and by wise playing come out the winners. —H. W. C.

ESSENCE —OF— BULL

You fellows on the campus sling a little more bull of the printable kind next week. I hardly know what to write. Stop using such obscene language in your bull sessions. I might forget and write some of the stuff.

Oh, well, I might as well get down to work and write this mess. You have no idea how hard it is to write a funny story that you have heard somebody else tell, and make it sound as funny as it should.

Do you know that if you could travel faster than the speed of light, you could take a trip out into space, stop, turn around, and watch yourself leave. Yeah, it's true, all right, but that brings out the age-old maxim: "If the dog hadn't stopped, he would have caught the rabbit."

The seniors are on the last lap of the race. In a few more months they will be battling this world for the cup of coffee and "zip" and biscuits that they've been hollering about for four years. Some of these seniors are getting serious about the proposition, too. As a matter of fact, I have heard one or two of them criticise the spontaneous spirit of the upperclassmen and call it childishness. I reckon everybody has to pass through that stage of life when he is a senior in college and feels called upon to uphold the dginity of the position. However, we poor devil who haven't reached that elevated stage yet, it's very unpleasant. It's getting so a fellow can't even have a little harmless fun and turn a weary moment into a happy one without being upbraided by one of the gentlemen of dignity for showing his age."

I'm not talking about all of the seniors, just a few who realize the fact that they are seniors just a little too much.

Those of you who didn't hear Dr. McSween's talk in chapel last Thursday missed something. It was the best of its kind I have ever heard. He gave several logical, sensible reasons why a fellow should not drink. An open-minded student body appreciates a straight-from-the-shoulder talk like that one.

I reckon you've got enough of this. It'll take you till next week to shovel it out. Good day, gentlemen.

P. C. Personalities In Rhyme

Two little love-birds flitting around;
Powell and Bee taking in the town.
Amorous gazes,
Soft-spoken phrases,
In each heart does rapture abound.

A squealing laugh, a resonant bass,
She's leading him on a wild goose chase.
Agnes and Tom
Arm in arm.
They certainly have a terrible case.

There was a young fellow named Kay,
He fell deeply in love one day.
Now he can't do his work
And he's gone beserk
On account of that gal, Anna May.

(The exchange editor sent the following in for publication):
There once was an amateur poet,
If anything happens he'll know it,
But if it's on me
Just please don't tell "Wee"
For he'll make a smart rhyme and then show it.

This is what I think about it:
The exchange editor has lots of class
Not to speak of unlimited brass.
He made up a rhyme
That was better than mine.
Therefore, he's a bigger jackass.

LETTER FROM RETILING "Y" PRESIDENT

[illegible] are always younger, more able and efficient hands to take responsibilities of the class, the [illegible], or the generation that moves into the world — and eventually eternity: for such is the Will of Divine.

[illegible] administration of the Young [illegible] Christian Association for 1932-[illegible] has finished its work — not thoroughly and probably not satisfactory. However, if we have accomplished [illegible] thing we are glad, for through the [illegible] year we have had the Christian [illegible] rests of the student body at heart, [illegible] under the circumstances our bit [illegible] been our best.

[illegible]ere in this space, I personally wish [illegible] express to the student body, the [illegible]or and freshman cabinets, and the [illegible]ulty adviser my deepest appreci[illegible]n for all that you have contributed both in spirit and in labor during [illegible] past year. There shall never be [illegible]Y" president elected who will have [illegible]etter-spirited, harder-working cab[illegible] than the one I have been privi[illegible]d to work with during '32-'33. To gentlemen I am indebted for what have accomplished this year, and I pray that your efficiency, noble spirit and Christian ideals will quicken the hearts of the men "who tread the halls of Alma Mater when we have passed outward." And to the men who shall lead the Christian activities next year—"you have an honored and sacred task," and my earnest prayer is that you will be faithful, courageous, and thoroughly consecrated to your duty. May He who rules in the hearts of men lead you and give you a vision of the spiritual needs of the P. C. men. I yearn for you the opportunity and satisfaction of realizing this accomplishment.

"I therefore beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherein ye are called."—Eph. 4:1.

(Signed) Barney MacLean,
Retiring President Y. M. C. A.

The last "Y" meeting under the control of the out-going officers was held Thursday night. The freshman cabinet had charge of the program. Hank Wilson gave a review on the subject of Socialism.

On next Wednesday morning the new "Y" officers will be installed. A program is being prepared for this service, and at this time the retiring administration will turn over the Y. M. C. A. work to the new officers and administration.

The next "Y" meeting will be carried out by the new program committee.

At the regular meeting of the Ministerial club yesterday, plans were made to carry on through the month of April a program on "Personal Evangelism." There will be three outside speakers for these occasions.

Col. Cudlipp, who is connected with the Synod of South Carolina, has been for the past week conducting a teachers' training school here. Several of the college boys have attended these classes and found them helpful.

Religious Group Has 13 Members

Non-Denominational Body, Organized In December Seeks To Do Real Christian Work.

The Christian Campaigners is a movement begun here last winter by a group of ministerial students. Its scope is not limited to students but includes everyone interested in the advancement of Christianity.

The Christian Campaigners is strictly a movement, not an organization. It was begun last December and now has 13 members. The purpose is to set Christians to carrying out the real spirit of Christianity and to work for the establishment and enlargement of the kingdom; to stimulate personal work; to emphasize activity and religious or spiritual culture; to stress sincerity and do away with hypocrisy.

This movement is entirely non-denominational in nature and is not meant to take the place of any religious organization on the campus. It is meant primarily to give the students an opportunity to do some real personal evangelism. The credo of the Christian Campaigners contains nothing but the minimum of essentials that should govern the life and conduct of every true Christian.

Each member is supposed to secure a new pledge each month. Meetings are held every Wednesday night. The program at these meetings is made up of Bible study and discussions pertaining to the movement.

A MIRACLE... You sit at home in easy chairs, behind closed doors, while from a sound-proof room . . . perhaps thousands of miles away . . . comes the music that you listen to on the Chesterfield program.

That sealed room in the Columbia Broadcasting Headquarters sends out good music and good songs 6 nights a week to 50 million people from coast to coast . . . with the voice of Norman Brokenshire . . . just about the best announcer in this country . . . to tell you "Chesterfields are milder and taste better."

Why is the Chesterfield Program broadcast 6 nights a week over a coast-to-coast network reaching 50 million people?

Because we want every smoker in this country to know that Chesterfield cigarettes are milder.

We want to tell every smoker from coast to coast that Chesterfield cigarettes taste better. . .

We want everyone to know that they can depend on a LIGGETT & MYERS product.

ILLUSION:
A "strong man" once gave public performances in which he stopped a 9 lb. cannon ball shot from a fully charged cannon. The audience gasped when the gun flashed and the human Gibraltar stepped forward out of the smoke uninjured, with the 9 lb. shot in his hands.

EXPLANATION:
The trick lay in the way an assistant prepared the cannon for the performance. He used the regulation amount of powder and wadding, but placed the greater part of the charge of powder ahead of the shot. The cannon ball was propelled only by the small charge behind it which was just sufficient to lob the 9 lb. ball over to the strong man.

NO TRICKS ..JUST COSTLIER TOBACCOS
IN A MATCHLESS BLEND

It's fun to be fooled— ...it's more fun to KNOW

A performance sometimes staged in cigarette advertising is the illusion that cigarettes are made easy on the throat by some special process of manufacture.

EXPLANATION: All cigarettes are made in almost exactly the same way. Manufacturing methods are standard and used by all. A cigarette is only as good as the tobaccos it contains.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

In costly tobaccos you will find mildness, good taste, throat-ease.

Smoke Camels critically, and give your taste a chance to appreciate the greater pleasure and satisfaction offered by the more expensive tobaccos. Other cigarettes, we believe, will taste flat and insipid to you forever after.

COLLEGE HEADS GATHER HERE

Several Addresses Heard At Session Saturday. Registrars Discuss Entrance Requirements.

During the past week two college associations held annual meetings on the campus of Presbyterian college. The South Carolina Association of Registrars met in the reading room of the library on Friday, and the South Carolina Association of Colleges on Saturday.

At the morning session of the registrars, R. H. Jones, of Winthrop college, presided. After the invocation, Dr. John McSween made an address of welcome, followed by a discussion by G. C. Metz, acting registrar of Clemson college, on "Some Suggested Standards for a College Catalog." Miss Kathryn Copeland, dean of Anderson college, led the meeting in an open informal discussion.

The afternoon session was presided over by Miss Leonora Dorsey, registrar of Coker college. Dr. J. R. Robinson, registrar at Peabody college, Nashville, Tenn., discussed "Uniform Entrance Requirements." Major L. A. Scouty, registrar at The Citadel, led an informal discussion and question box. After a short business meeting the conference adjourned at 4:30.

At the meeting of the college association, attended by presidents of colleges in the state, Dr. McSween, of Presbyterian college, and President Guthmey of Converse college, spoke at the morning session, and President Bates, of Clemson college, addressed the meeting after luncheon.

Dr. McSween spoke on "The Problem of the High School Curricula"; President Gwathmey on "Twelve High School Units for Admission to College"; and Dr. Sikes on "Readjustments in College Programs and Administrations Under Present Conditions."

Four P's Important, Says Cameron Beck

Stock Exchange Official Reminds Audience That Need of World Today Is Leaders.

"For a successful living," said Cameron Beck, speaking in the Presbyterian college auditorium last Thursday morning, " a man must possess the four P's of success: plan, purpose, perseverance, and a passion for right living."

Mr. Beck is personnel director and public relations counsel for the New York stock exchange. He is now engaged in making a tour of Southern schools and colleges. Clinton business men and the senior class of the Clinton high school, besides the college students and faculty, heard the address. It was Mr. Beck's second visit to the campus in two years.

The speaker reminded his audience that the great need of the world today for leaders and that competition today is greater than ever before. It takes more perseverance, more work and study than ever before for one to keep on hold his own in the struggle to reach the top.

"You must keep your eye on three persons: the chap just ahead, whose job you want; the fellow you see every day when you look in the mirror, to make sure that he is not slipping but progressing; and the man just behind you, who may come up and take your job if you do not grow faster than he. The way to succeed is to know more about the job of the man ahead than he does himself, to always prepare yourself for the position just ahead, and always strive to move forward, never be content to stand still. "The cost of leadership is great. It

College Receives Four Gifts

During the past week the college has been the recipient of several valuable gifts from interested friends. Through the kindness of John H. Young, lumber was donated for the construction of a garage to house the college athletic bus.

W. J. Bailey, prominent business man of the city, is the donor of fifty gallons of paint and seventy-five dollars to be used in painting the Cyrus Bailey Memorial stadium.

A large baseball scoreboard has been erected on Young field by the Greenwood Coca-Cola Bottling company for the athletic association.

GEORGIA WINS TRACK MEET

Batcheler, Performing In Field Events for Bull Dogs, Proves Too Much for Local Men. Blue Stocking Superior In Running Contests. Score, 72 to 59.

The University of Georgia Bull dogs, presenting what appears to be the best track team in the South, administered the Presbyterian college track squad their first defeat of the season at Athens Saturday. The score was 72 to 59.

For a while it looked as if the Blue Hose were going to take Georgia into camp, as they had Florida and South Carolina, but the strong right arm of Batchelor was too much. This Joe Purvis of the track amassed 20 points, thereby annexing the scoring honors for the day. He took first places in the shot put, javelin throw, discus throw and broad jump.

P. C.'s relay team continued to bring glory to the squad and to themselves when they ran the one-mile in their fastest time this year. They navigated the distance in three minutes, twenty-eight and seven-tenths seconds. They were not pushed by the Georgia team.

"Red" Underwood came through in a fine way to scale heights heretofore unknown to him to lick David, last year's Southern Conference champion in the pole vault.

P. C. piled up a lead on the track events, but lost out in the field events. The Hose did not score in the shot or discus and tallied only one point in the javelin throw.

Summary:

Mile run: Oliver, Presbyterian, first; Patillo, Georgia, second; Hughes, Georgia, third. Time, 4 minutes, 92.3 seconds.

440-yard dash: Osman, Presbyterian, first; Graham, Presbyterian; Williams, Georgia. Time, 52.3 seconds.

100-yard dash: Yearout, Presbyterian, first; Brown, Georgia; Woods, Presbyterian. Time, 10 seconds.

120-yard high hurdles: Maddox, Georgia, first; Crenshaw, Georgia; Lowry, Presbyterian. Time, 15.9 seconds.

880-yard run: Osman, Presbyterian, first; Clark, Presbyterian; Tom David, Georgia. Time, 2.02 seconds..

220-yard low hurdles: Maddox, Georgia, first; Perrin, Presbyterian; Brown, Georgia. Time, 26.5 seconds.

Shot put: Batchelor, Georgia, first; Chapman, Georgia; Crouch, Georgia. Distance, 35 feet, 4 inches.

Honor Students Attend Banquet

Sigma Kappa Alpha Members and Leading Freshmen and Sophomores Are Feted.

Friday night in Judd hall the college inaugurated a new high light in the school year by giving a banquet to members of Sigma Kappa Alpha, the honorary scholarship fraternity, and to honor students of the freshman and sophomore classes.

Dr. W. J. McGlothlin, president of Furman university, was the speaker, using as his subject, "The Functions of Scholarship."

An informal reception was held after the banquet and the affair was one of the most delightful events of the college year.

Those attending were members of Sigma Kappa Alpha, the faculty, and the first five in scholarship from the sophomore and freshman classes.

Osman Winner In Orators' Contest

To Represent Presbyterian College At State Oratorical Meet At Winthrop April 21.

Tuesday morning, April 4, at a special chapel program, the oratorical contest for 1933 was held. In past years this contest has been a feature of the graduation exercises, but the competition was set at an earlier date to allow the winner to take part in the state contest at Winthrop college this spring.

Three men spoke Tuesday morning, J. E. Osman, J. T. Neely and R. E. Sims. The general condition of the world today formed the topics of all three orations.

First place was given to J. E. Osman, who spoke on "The True Panacea." The theme of this oration was Christ's words, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them." Osman contended that the application of this "Golden Rule" would clear up all the great problems which are facing the world today.

Second place was given to Neely, who spoke on "The Flickering Torch." The topic of Sims' oration was "March On."

The awards for these orations were made by Dr. McSween in chapel Wednesday morning.

Osman, who received a ten-dollar gold piece, will also receive a medal awarded by the Alumni association and will represent Presbyterian college in the Intercollegiate Oratorical contest at Rock Hill April 21.

NEW CATALOGS MAILED

The office crew has been working feverishly daily getting out the new college catalogs. Rhodes and Calvert have been up to their necks in stacks of envelopes, ink, catalogs, and cord.

The first copies of the catalog came off the press Tuesday and have already been sent out to all prospective students on file as well as all institutions and persons interested in P. C.

Robert D. Lynn Heads Campus Organization for Year. McSween Urges Fidelity To the Trust Imposed In Them.

In an impressive service last Wednesday at the regular chapel period, the new Presbyterian college Y. M. C. A. officers were installed.

At this time the history of the year's work was presented to the new president, Robert D. Lynn, with remarks from B. E. MacLean, the retiring president. A desire for more devoted work was stressed by Mr. MacLean as he turned over the duties of the office to the new officers.

Mr. MacLean thanked the student body for the trust they had placed in his hands during the past year, and reviewed the accomplishments of the Y. M. C. A. during the year. The history of the organization and its work dating from 1913 to the present, as compiled by the cabinet, was the basis for his remarks.

In a few words Mr. Lynn thanked the students for the privilege given him and the other officers. An assurance was given by the new president that the duties would be fulfilled as best they possibly could. He urged that the entire student body back him in the new undertaking that he and the new cabinet had just begun.

Dr. John McSween, president of the college, issued the charge to the new officers that they be true to the calling of the offices to which they had been elected. Dr. McSween also commended the outgoing officers for their splendid work during the past year.

The new officers are: President, R. D. Lynn; vice-president, W. H. Cranford; secretary-treasurer, C. B. Lawton.

Mr. Lynn has not yet announced his cabinet.

(A letter from the new "Y" head appears under "The 'Y' Survey" on page three).

Rifle Team Wins From Wofford

In their first shoulder to shoulder match of the season, the rifle team defeated the R. O. T. C. team from Wofford college, 858 to 833, Thursday night at the armory.

All four positions were fired, with P. C. ahead on all except the standing. Seven men fired for each team, with the first high five being taken for the score.

T. H. Wingate was high man for the night, shooting an exceptional 181 out of a possible 200. For Wofford, Montgomery was high man with 178. T. F. Carothers and Hart Odom were next for P. C., with 171 each.

A return match will be fired with Wofford Wednesday at Spartanburg. There is also a contemplated match with Clemson at Clemson some time in the near future.

Pan-Hellenic Finals Set For May 12-13

At a recent meeting of the Pan-Hellenic council it was decided to hold the annual finals on the week-end of May 12 and 13, two weeks before commencement. The program includes a formal dance on Friday night, an informal tea dance on Saturday afternoon, followed by a Saturday night dance.

"Jelly" Leftwich and his Duke university orchestra will furnish the music.

This annual affair is considered one of the outstanding events on the social calendar at Presbyterian [illegible] and Friday.

ADOPTED AT FACULTY MEET

Cuts Down Number of Positions Any One Student May Hold. Thereby Distributing Honors Over Larger Field of Candidates for Various Offices.

By Alman Tommins

A point system for the regulation of student activities was passed last week by the fcaulty and will go into effect immediately.

Professors H. E. Sturgeon and J. H. Davis, acting as a committee for the faculty, submitted their report on the point system for student activities at the regular faculty meeting and their recommendations, with slight changes, were adopted.

The purpose of this system is to limit the number of activities that an individual may engage in and thus expand the total number of students participating in the various activities. R. O. T. C. officers are not included in the regulations.

Diamnod Men Win Week's Final Game

Presbyterian Divides Bill With Clemson, While Indians Take Both Contests In Newberry.

The Presbyterian college baseball team beat Clemson in a slugfest on Young field Friday for its single win of the week and the second victory in six starts. The score was 8 to 3.

P. C. got 12 hits and the Tigers got nine during the fray. J. Montgomery, catcher, had a perfect day at bat with three hits out of as many tries. Sherman and Miller led the Clemson attack. Sherman got three out of four, and Miller got two safe blows in four trips to the plate. Harry Bolick hit a long homer to left field in the third inning with Holcomb on base to give the Blue Stockings a three run lead. Sherman and Proctor, of Clemson, hit for triples.

The Blue Hose scored in the first, third, fifth and eighth stanzas. The Clemson tallies came in the second, sixth and eighth innings.

Clemson won the first game of the series on Thursday, 13 to 7. Twelve hits, five costly errors, and eight bases on balls accounted for the Clemson scoring. P. C. knotted the count in the sixth with six runs off of six hits, but Clemson again took the lead in the seventh and was never headed.

NEWBERRY WINS TWO

In the first game of the week, at Newberry, the Indian sluggers got to McCutchen for 11 hits. These, coupled with eight P. C. errors, gave Newberry 14 runs, while the Hose could cross the plate but four times. Boozer, Indian first sacker, was the best hitter of the day, with three hits out of four tries. Bolick and Bissett led for the Calvinists with two out of four.

The second game was close, with Nettles and Ingram putting on a nip and tuck slab duel that left the outcome in doubt until the eighth inning when Dennis advanced on a sacrifice by Aycub, and scored on Boozer's long fly to centerfield. The final score was 1-0.

Montgomery featured with the willow, getting a homer and a triple out of four times at bat. Holcomb poled out a triple to pave the way for the tying run in the sixth inning. Newberry broke the tie in the eighth, however, and P. C. did not get going in the final stanza to head them.

Furman plays here today and to[illegi]ow, and P. C. goes to [illegible] on a [illegible] Tuesday and Friday.

With comprehensive exams and the point system here at once — to say nothing of the depression, sophomores don't believe they can take it.

THE SPIRIT OF AMERICA

"We'll build all this again — better than before."

Such is the spirit of those cities of Southern California affected by the recent earthquakes. Their homes demolished, their office buildings, schools, churches, and many other public improvements of immense value become a scrap heap, these people answer the dare of nature's brute forces. Their's is the spirit of the little peasants climbing back to their Vesuvian vineyards after lava and ashes have had heir pillage. This spirit is that of their own pioneer fathers who fought their way westward, erected that great "queen of the Pacific"—San Francisco, only to have her dethroned by a similar subterrean storm.

It is the spirit of man who stands his ground against the forces of nature. Whether it be planting grapevines or building skyscrapers, man asserts his determination to live where his soul desires, where the earth gives him a livelihood and yields him the fruits he expects from his labor.

So such a small trifle as fifty million dollars damage with a casualty of over a hundred lives does not discourage Southern California from establishing her cities and towns just as lavishly as if there had never been and would never be such a disaster. Even more so should the American Spirit be not downed by the quake of the economic depression.

It is up to American citizens to answer the dare of fate in crushing their industrial and financial powers until the debris of their unthought impregnable prosperity lay shattered at their feet. They must forget the past, rekindle the passions and fire the spirits of their forefathers, whose blood flows in their veins. They must take the tools of progress and labor to build another lasting economic structure upon the firm foundations which their fathers have laid. They must reunite in an undaunted spirit of toil and fellowship and strive for a mutual goal: America — first in peace and prosperity.

THE SOPHOMORE EXAMS

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

Last week it was announced that all sophomores will be required to take a series of five exams, each to last two hours, based on the first two years of college work.

For the last decade it has been something of a fad for colleges to give intelligence tests, questionnaires, etc., by the score. There was nothing particularly objectionable about this, as the tests did not take up more than a reasonable length of time.

It seems, however, that later a few higher-ups decided to go a step further. This, apparently, is the result.

The first question that might be asked is, Will the tests benefit the student in any way? Obviously, he has a right to expect something in return for the use of ten hours of his time. As stated in last week's issue of The Blue Stocking, the purpose is to secure "definite data for administrative guidance." But since the grades made on the tests are not averaged in with the regular scholastic marks naturally most students will work in a half-hearted manner. It can be readily seen that these grades would not be truly indicative of the students' knowledge.

It seems to me that it is a gross imposition on the sophomores to force them to take such an obviously useless examination. Why should they be forced to go to so much trouble merely because of a few who wish to experiment? Apparently every time a prominent educator gets a new idea he has to try it out on thousands of students until either it succeeds or, more often, is proved a failure.

If the passing of this test is made a requirement for graduation here, later, no doubt, someone will get the idea that seniors should be made to pass a test on the four years' work, in order to graduate. Thus it is seen how far this proposition may go, once it is started. Aside from the aforementioned point, many prospective students would avoid P. C. and go to other schools which have no such silly and troublesome frills.

If the great educators in the United States wish to try out some of their fancy experiments, let them perform them on those who are willing, instead of forcing them on college boys.

Apparently, the student is viewed as a mere mechanical thing, whose only reason for existing is to be subservient to the wishes of a few who desire to carry on their modernistic experiments. —C.

BOOK REVIEW

By Frank Guess

PETER ASHLEY

DuBose Heyward, poet and novelist, who can safely be called one of South Carolina's most outstanding literateurs, steps from his role of portraying Negro life and gives the reading world a quietly interesting and very authentic novel of antebellum Charleston and of the low-country landed gentry who formed a definite part of the city's social life. The action of the book covers only a few glorious months, carrying one at last to the hero's departure for the war, and, unlike most novels of that period, excludes entirely the complete and inevitable devastation of Reconstruction days. Heyward pictures the rich, mellow civilization of those people who lived at the height of aristocratic tradition, and using this as a background he draws the character of Peter Ashley, "born with the destiny of going perpetually hungry in that land of plenty. Born with the appetites of the spirit."

The plot is centered around two men. The superb Pierre Chardon, whose wife and children had died while he served in the Mixican war, was given Peter by his sister as a companion for his loneliness, and he lived as philosophical onlooker at life — The perfect Southern gentleman with his excellent tastes and his eccentricities. He understood his nephew and realized that sooner or later life would have her claws in him and that she would tear him to pieces, and he must have happiness while he could.

With the opening of the book, Peter returns from Oxford, in England, and quietly takes up a job on the "Courier" while his fellow kinsmen, in patriotic enthusiasm, enlist and gather troops for the Confederate army. Then follow the boy's reactions to existing conditions in his fight with his conscience, his romance with the enchanting Damaris Gordon, his "affair or honor"—and always Pierre in the background trying to protect the boy who is not like the rest, who will question and not accept. Peter had Unionist views and he failed to understand the self-confidence of these staunch Secessionists around him. His impetuous nature led him into stating his views before a crowd of patriots, but afterwards he began to realize his feelings of on-coming patriotism when he said, "This — this is my country. Just give me a little time—and—forgive." At one time he finds an escape from reality at Wakefields, his father's plantation, but those who knew could have told him that the peace of the fields was deceptive. Pierre knew this too—knew that fate would cheat him—that war would inevitably reach out its claws.

The book is not intense and hardly at any time very exciting, though the action covers a highly exciting time when secession was brought about, when Fort Sumter was fired upon. But all of these things, including the seven days of race week and the duel, Mr. Heyward describes so well that they take shape as actual happenings. His characters are good but not strong. Pierre Chardon is to some perhaps more appealing that Peter, and though one understands Peter, one is not made to feel with him. But best of all, the author has attained the spirit of the time and has achieved in writing the flavor and the romantic glamor of the one and only Charleston.

The book can be secured at the Book Store fiction rental library.

MESSAGE FROM NEW "Y" PRESIDENT

The newly elected officers have assumed control of the "Y." it is with the assurance that we attempt to fill the places of those who have gone before. They have performed their duties so well. However, they have left us plenty of material, well organized and outlined, upon which we can start the new year.

In behalf of the recently elected officers, I want to thank the student body for the confidence they have placed in us and to assure you that we will perform the duties that devolve upon us to the best of our ability. But let me beg of each of you that you give the Y. M. C. A. your most earnest support and cooperation for the coming year. For it is with this belief that the organization can function properly and supply the need and service that it is called upon to render. There are any number of ways in which you can do your part. One of these is by coming to the regular midweek meeting and bringing a friend with you. If the meetings are not good enough to interest you, we invite your constructive criticism so that we may be able to better them. Any suggestions that you feel would aid in the "Y" work will be be heartily welcomed.

The cabinet for the coming year has not yet been announced. The various chairmen will be chosen from time to time. The right to drop them will be reserved so that those who do not show the proper interest will be replaced by more zealous members. The chairman of the program committee will be Walker Combs. Any who have suggestions as to programs will please feel free to make them.

The meetings this year will be limited to thirty minutes, so we want everybody there. They will start promptly at 7 p. m. and close at 7:30. If you have a date, come ahead to the "Y"; you will be out in time. I trust that you will give us this support.

ROBERT LYNN,
President.

At the meeting on last Thursday night, Rev. S. P. Bowles, from Thornwell orphanage, gave an interesting talk. The subject that Mr. Bowles used was one of vital importance to every one, especially to college students, "Personal Evangelism."

Beginning tonight at ten o'clock, a prayer group will be conducted in the various dormitories. These groups are being planned for the coming to our campus on April 18-21, of Dr. W. M. Anderson. The Y. M. C. A. officers urge that as many as can possibly do so to attend these prayer groups.

At the regular meeting of the Ministerial club on last Sunday afternoon, officers for the coming year were elected. They are: President, E. M. Gregg; vice-president, C. F. McCutchen; secretary-treasurer, W. Narron. These men will take over their duties on the first of May.

Boltzendorff Plans a Bar In "Y" Lobby

The RAG has just been advised from Columbia that Mr. P. B. Boltzendorff, general secretary of the local Y. W. C. A., has applied for a license to manage a saloon at the collitch. In a recent interview with Mr. Boltzendorff, he expressed a desire to be among the first to sell beer in this section. He is confident that the prohibition law in this state will be repealed at the very first opportunity that the people have to vote on it. He laments, however, that "3.2 per cent beer ain't got no more pep than a cabinet social on the river."

Why is the Stem removed from the tobaccos used in Chesterfield?

That's a very simple question to answer. The stem in a tobacco leaf, like the stem in most other plants, is "woody". It hasn't any of the flavor or the aroma that you want when you smoke. And it doesn't burn right.

So after tobacco has been properly aged, one of the first things to do is to remove the stems.

But what has this to do with your enjoyment of Chesterfield cigarettes? Just this. It means that we start right when we make Chesterfield—the right kind of leaf with the stem removed, the right manufacture —everything that science knows that can make CHESTERFIELD a milder cigarette, a cigarette that tastes better.

That's why people say "They Satisfy."

Tobacco used to be stemmed by hand—Now this machine stems 14,300 leaves every hour.

Wherever you buy Chesterfields you get them just as fresh as if you came by our factory door

MONDAY, APRIL 17, 1933

A lot of people are laughing at the sophomores for the hullabaloo they are raising over the comprehensive exam. It seems a little ridiculous now to hear that is the only occasion they have had to stand up for themselves.

Original stocks like a class in cooking in which there are more men than women. The men are reported to make the highest grades. By their cooking ye shall choose them, girls!

COMPREHENSIVE EXAMINATIONS— AN ESTIMATE

The recent announcement by the administration that all sophomores would be required to stand comprehensive examinations, has caused an outburst of wrathful indignation from the members of the "ill-fated" class, and has led even to the propagation of a now famous petition voicing protest against the unfairness of the tests. A great many "unwilling victims" have become incensed because valuable time will be wasted and they do not care to be sacrificed upon the "altar of education." Excitement reigns supreme and heads seemed to have been lost making mountains out of mole-hills. Several meetings of the sophomore class have been held to stifle the movement against authority. Some of the idle onlookers who gaze at the fray smile in amusement, others think it absurd, and yet others have feelings of sympathy seeing that they themselves could protest under the same conditions.

The first announcement that the examinations would be given came in The Blue Stocking of two weeks ago and references immediately became indecent. A question was drawn up, and even though the issues were slightly muffled it was received as a medium of protest. Dr. Coe, the chairman of the committee on the comprehensive examinations, realizing that the sophomores perhaps misunderstood the matter, explained before the student body the objects of the tests. After listening to a sensible explanation it seemed rather clear that the faculty had not intended "putting anything over," and that the object was primarily in the interest of the student. Yet upon the other hand, there are grounds for protest when one considers the time that shall be given over to the proof of an educational theory which to the average person is unproved. But the fair-minded person interested in the progress of the American educational system feels rightfully that the type of test may be beneficial.

The whole situation, which is, after all, rather unimportant, has been discussed absurdly and uselessly. Student who will admit they came to school for an education seem to be fighting the very thing that tends to a better education, but maybe they are only fighting against the requirement. After all, we can see why any one would be inclined to smile at "unjust treatment."

THE POINT SYSTEM

The idea of the point system is good, but it appears that a better application of points could be devised. A glance at the table does not reveal the basis on which points were charged to various offices. One of the fairest, and apparently the method used, is to charge a higher number of points against those activities which require the most time; but a football player gets seven points, while boxing, basketball, baseball and track men have only four. These sports, particularly track and baseball, take as much time as football, yet fewer points are allowed.

Under the table published the advertising managers of the PaC-SaC and The Blue Stocking get seven points, while the business managers get five. With the responsibility of a publication's finances on his shoulders, the business manager necessarily spends a great deal of time at his work, if it is performed correctly, and the office should carry at least as much point taxation as advertising manager; more properly, more.

It appears that the Y. M. C. A. president should receive more points than allowed in the present schedule. This office is one of great responsibility and requires a great deal of time for its proper dispatch. It should certainly be taxed more than the six points it now has, less than the number for a football player or manager.

Varsity debating, which requires study and practice, was omitted entirely from the schedule. This was probably due to an oversight by those in charge of drawing up the system.

Time and usage may reveal the fact that the system as worked out by the faculty committee is the most practicable. These criticisms are only suggestions for the correction of what at first glance appear defects. They may be far from practicable; they may be of some use.

At any rate, the action taken by the faculty in installing the system is a forward step taken for the best interests of the student.

THE CAMPUS IN SPRING

It is with great pleasure that the students look about the campus these days. If one should say, be it an idle compliment or not, "You have a beautiful little campus," they might well believe him. The lawns raked, neat paths conveniently placed, the shrubbery well kept, and grass over all, unite to make P. C. a place of simple beauty like a maiden at market all clean and neat in freshly laundered gingham.

At the return of nature the trees covered their nudity, spreading luxurious shade over the lawns; wisteria festooned and cascaded over the place; spirea and spreading juniper hedged about; flame-tree and cypress, hawthorne and bridal wreath, all lend their charm and fragrance to the loveliness of the grounds.

Faithfully, between rest on rake handles, accompanied by arguments on religion, the R. F. C. crew slowly but surely, after a week's time, partly spaded and filled in the front of Smyth and filled up some of those "lynching" ditches that have scarred this section of the campus for some time.

The stadium glitters forth in its new coat of battleship-gray and aluminum. It seemed that everything was dressed up for the Easter parade. More and more the student body must realize they have a good deal to be proud of in the college. One thing is that the much-improved campus will excel any its size in beauty.

There will be a holiday from drill Thursday morning. The battalion will form for chapel.

Beginning next week the juniors will go on the range for practice firing. The date and time will be announced later.

Formal announcement, last week, of the retention of Captain Wysor as professor of military science and tactics, and Captain Blanton as assistant, for next year, was greeted with enthusiastic applause by the student body. In their stay here both officers have made a large circle of friends who will rejoice with the students. Captain Wysor has been on duty here for four years and Captain Blanton for one.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

Officers of the day and their orderlies for next week are:

April 17—Lt. J. F. Davis, with Pfc. W. R. Holcomb as orderly.

April 18—Lt. B. A. Lowry, with Pfc. C. B. Lawter as orderly.

April 19—Lt. V. S. White, with Pfc. L. A. McLeod as orderly.

April 20—Mr. Sgt. R. D. Lynn, with Pfc. F. B. Waldrop as orderly.

April 21—Sgt. D. H. McFadden, with Pfc. A. D. Guerard as orderly.

April 22—Sgt. C. N. Plowden, with Pfc. W. B. Morrow as orderly.

There will be rifle inspection Monday afternoon. Rifles will be graded strictly on the appearance of the brass and the condition of the bore. Everyone is advised to know the nomenclature and number of his rifle.

Uniform inspection will be held Tuesday morning at the battalion inspection. Each cadet should have his uniform cleaned and pressed and the buttons shined. It will help the unit's grade as well as his own.

Because of the annual inspection by the war department to be held Tuesday and Wednesday, there will be no classes Tuesday morning.

DR. ANDERSON WILL BE HERE TOMORROW

The entire student body is looking forward to the coming to our campus, a man of outstanding ability, Dr. Bill Anderson. All over the campus the students are talking about this one who is to be here for a period of four days.

In preparation for this meeting, the Y. M. C. A. is sponsoring a series of prayer meetings held in the chapel, every evening at 6:55. The largest group of men ever gathered for a meeting of this sort comes together to pray that God will pour out His Spirit on our campus. Throughout the week the chapel has been almost filled with men who are interested in the welfare of our campus.

The fraternities have had charge of these meetings, a different fraternity leading the program each night.

At ten o'clock every night the bell rings for prayer groups to be held in each of the dormitories. The reports so far are very good as to the results of these groups.

There will be no Y. M. C. A. meeting Thursday night due to the fact that Dr. Anderson will be carrying on his services.

Delta Chi Alpha will hold its state conference at Wofford college on April 29. This is a very important meeting and all the members in the state are urged to be present.

Yesterday afternoon at 5:30 there was a vesper service held on the steps of the Administration building, under the leadership of Delta Chi Alpha fraternity. A like service will be held each Sunday evening at that time, to which members of the student body are invited to take part.

Dr. D. J. Brimm spoke at the regular meeting of the Ministerial club yesterday. The subject was the theme followed out for this month, that of personal evangelism. The message was one of great help to the entire group. Dr. Brimm has been the constant adviser of the Ministerial club, and the members are grateful to him for his splendid help.

The Ministerial club enjoyed a social on last Saturday night. The members met at the gym with their young lady friends, then, as prearranged, went to the homes of four ministers in Clinton. At each of the homes games were enjoyed and refreshments served. The homes visited were those of Rev. C. B. Betts, Dr. D. J. Woods, Dr. L. R. Lynn and Dr. John McSween. This affair was thoroughly enjoyed. A similar social is being planned for next month.

PERFECT BRIDGE HAND

Frank Morrison is reported to have drawn a bridge player's delight in a hand of auction one night last week.

Morrison was paired with Johnny Dillard against Neil Crymes and Calvin Smith when the freak hand was dealt. When he picked up the cards he found thirteen spades. His opponents bid five hearts, but Morrison took the bid at five spades.

Persons in the room at the time assert that there was nothing "funny" about the deal. One man shuffled the cards, another cut them and a third dealt.

Ever smoke "whittle" tobacco?

Well . . . here it is . . . already whittled FOR you. Granger Rough Cut is tobacco whittled right . . . that's one reason why it burns so slow and cool.

©1933 LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

The Granger pouch keeps the tobacco fresh

WHEN we started to make Granger Rough Cut we knew that fine tobacco burnt hot because it burnt so fast. It kept your pipe hot. You could hardly hold your pipe in your hand, it got so hot at times.

Then we remembered that some folks back yonder used to "whittle" their tobacco. So we made GRANGER just like "whittle" tobacco — "Rough Cut." It smokes cooler and lasts a lot longer. And also, you'll find it never gums the pipe.

So far, so good. Now we wanted to sell this tobacco for 10c. Good tobacco—right process—cut right. It was a question of how to do it for the price.

So we put GRANGER in a sensible soft foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke a package. We gave smokers this good GRANGER tobacco in a common-sense pouch for 10c.

GRANGER has not been on sale very long, but it has grown to be a popular smoke. And there is this much about it —we have yet to know of a man who started to smoke it, who didn't keep on. Folks seem to like it.

SOPHS PROTEST SPECIAL EXAMS

of about a hundred questions each, taking approximately two hours to stand would be given. It was brought out that the class would be excused from other classes the two days set aside for the exams, but the students objected, remarking that it would be less trouble and take less time to meet regularly scheduled classes. Some students brought out the fact that it would be a loss of about thirty-five cents to each student for every class missed.

The action of the sophomores was hastened when last Thursday morning, Dr. R. L. Coe, the alleged author of the proposal to give the exams, arose in chapel and defended himself and explained the purpose of the tests. Dr. Coe explained that he had nothing to do with the proposal of the plan and that the chairmanship of the committee had been attached to him during his absence from one of the meetings. He also brought out that the exams would be most helpful to the student in giving him an idea of just what he knew; it would give the professors an idea of how much they were teaching the students, and it would be useful to the national association of educators in preparing data.

After chapel Thursday the petition was drawn up and many of the students signed. All the sophomores were given a chance to sign the document before it was handed over to Dr. Spencer at nine o'clock Friday morning. The class now awaits the decision of the faculty as to what will be the outcome of it all. Following are the objejctions as stated in the petition:

1. No advantage would be derived by the students.
2. Too much time and money would be used by the exams for which the students would receive no good.
3. These grades are not to be recorded on student [illegible]
4. Such exams are [illegible] in the catalog.

Relay Team Goes To Philadelphia

Student Body Goes Without Sunday Night Supper So That College May Be Represented.

The student body at a meeting Wednesday night decided to do without supper for a month so that the athletic association woud be able to send this year's relay team to the Penn Relays at Philadelphia. The vote for the move was unanimous, showing the students body's willingness and faith in their team to place in the meet.

J. E. Osman, captain of the track team and members of the relay team, asserted that the team would train hard and give their best in the event. He also stated that he has attended such meets and that the P. C. squad has a very good chance to carry off the honors in the event as the team's time now is better than the time that usually wins such meets. The exact date of the meet is not known, but the team will leave sometime early this week as the meet will come about the middle of the week. P. C. will be one of the first colleges in the South to be represented in the Penn Relays.

The members of the team are Osman, Clark, Yearout and Graham. One alternate may be carried on the trip.

Students Pass Red Cross Tests

Jim Brewer, swimming coach, has announced the names of those who have passed the Red Cross tests for life-saving this year. Those who passed the tests are as follows: Tom Valley, William Walter, Charles Denny, Edgar Pitman, James Millsap, Earle Freestland, W. C. Morrow, M. D. Gillis, James Carson, Alfred Plowden, Henry Calvert, Fred Hull, R. D. Hannah, and H. M. Wilson.

Brewer also announced that, beginning Wednesday, a week's swimming workout will be held. All who wish to come out for the team next year should report then. Anyone who can swim is urged to come out, as material for back-stroke and breast-stroke is needed. Brewer wishes to start those who wish to try for the above [illegible] and other events in an organized manner so the season as final [illegible] will be able to [illegible] and be in good shape when the season starts.

He took first in the shot put, javelin, discus, 220 low hurdles and tied for first in the pole vault with Wilson and Gillis. Added to this, he garnered second in the high hurdles behind his teammate Guerard. His javelin mark of 161 feet 6 inches was exceptional.

In the dashes, Scott, of Furman, was the big man, managing to nudge Bradley out of first place in both events. His time of 23.2 seconds in the 220 was good.

In the pole vault, one-mile run, and the high hurdles, the freshmen made clean sweeps, although Furman did not enter a man in the high hurdles. In the low hurdles, it looked like a first and second for P. C. until Frowein stumbled and fell on the next to the last hurdle.

In the mile, Forehand came through in his usual good style, winning in the time of 4:56, which is excellent for a freshman meet. There was no two-mile run. Hudson, who usually runs the two-mile, took second in this event. Barrett took third.

FURMAN FALLS BY BIG SCORE

Osman Betters Record

Osman, P. C.'s captain, took a rest in the 440, one of his usual races, and then proceeded to better the old mark of Carter Newman on the 880. This is one of the fastest and oldest records on the South Carolina books, and Osman did a splendid job when he broke it.

Bill Clark and B. Graham showed Saturday that as far as they are concerned, somebody is going to step if they keep P. C.'s relay out of the running in the Penn Relays next week. Bill won first place in the quarter, coming within one-tenth of a second of the state record. Graham was a split second behind him.

Besides Osman's half, the prettiest race of the afternoon was Oliver's two-mile. George was running this distance for the first time and not only won it but ran it in near record time.

Hose On Injured List

Four of the Blue Hose were injured this week. Powell Freeman had a sore arm, Paul Yearout a pulled muscle, Bunt Woods and Bill Clark had bad knees. Yearout did not participate at all, Woods ran only one race, and Clark only one. Freeman won the javelin throw but failed, because of his sore arm, to get the distance he has been getting this year.

Jordan, a [illegible], was in Florence, and did not run.

Carothers and Underwood tied for first in the pole vault for the third time this season.

The team will rest next week-end. The state meet comes May 6.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

It is indeed a fine thing that P. C. is sending a relay team to Penn this year. I am sure the student body will never regret the sacrifice they are making that they might send the team. The benefits to be derived from such a project will mean much to the college.

P. C. has always had unusual athletic ability, especially considering the size of the student body and the available material. Coach McMillian has done marvelously well during the past years in developing such outstanding track teams. In 1930 P. C. carried away the S. I. A. A. championship, reaching a climax in track history. This event gave the school much publicity throughout the South.

The fact that a little Southern college—P. C.—is sending a relay team to the Penn classic has already spread. People are asking, "Where is this place?"

The point is clear. P. C. has a good chance of placing in the collegiate relays. The team has pledged its best and will give its best. Regardless of whether the boys place or not, the fact that P. C., one of the very few Southern colleges ever to participate, was in the relays will mean a great deal in publicizing the school.

BOOK REVIEW

By Henry Calvert

PARNASSUS ON WHEELS

"Parnassus On Wheels" is a veritable treasure house of simple philosophy. Christopher Morley has caught in this little volume a novel theme full of wit and melodrama. The characters of importance are but three, and the story centers about the exploits of a Miss Helen McGill as a traveling vender of literature. The Professor Mifflin, red hair and all, plays not an unimportant part in the story, for it was his parnassus that brought Miss McGill to forsake her domestic domain to keep her brother at home. It is strange, is it not?

The story runs thus: Helen McGill lives with her brother, Andrew, on a farm near Redfield. Andrew suddenly discovers he can write and he writes and does about nothing else. As soon as the first book was accepted he left home continually to find atmosphere for his stories, leaving all the duties of the farm to his sister. "He would come in the parson noting down adjectives for the sunset instead of mending the weather vane on the barn [illegible] McGill, now Mrs. Roger Mifflin, tells [illegible] thing and run off, leaving her by herself. [illegible] along comes a funny little man [illegible] a wagonful [illegible] Helen McGill buys the office [illegible] and leaves to [illegible] and go off herself.

The little professor accepts to go along the first few miles of farmhouses to show her how to sell her wares. They have a very interesting time until the brother finds out what his sister has done and thinks she has been swindled. He causes a lot of trouble for which he gets a black eye from the little prof. In turn he causes still more as his sister continues her journey, by getting Mr. Mifflin in jail.

Miss Helen, supposing that the little professor is on a train on his way to New York, hears of it being wrecked. She at once realizes that she has taken quite a fancy to the little man and fears he has been killed. She rushes back to the little town where she left him to board his train, knowing that the accident happened just outside of the town. She arrives and finds he is in jail. She quickly demands his release and they very roughly express that they like each other a great deal and dive into the sea of matrimony. The ending is a [illegible] and leaves the reader very satisfied.

P. C. Personalities In Rhyme

A fellow named Ravenel
Used to raise lots of hell.
He is crazy about "Cab,"
But thinks more of his lab,
And there he's contented to dwell.

A brilliant young man was Todd.
He's worked exceedingly hard.
He has made his mark
But he's still in the dark
And he'll end up "kicking the cod."

A horsey young fellow called "Scoop"
Worked hard, but still was a stoop.
His nasal voice
When he calls to the boys
Sounds like a chicken with croup.

"Seag" is a very small fellow;
He talks with a bullish bellow.
He is very loud
But attracts a big crowd
'Cause his singing is soft and mellow.

A scraggly two-miler is Bee.
The funniest I ever did see.
He waggled his head
And his feet were lead.
A ridiculous sight was he.

J. ANDERSON CLOSES HIS MEETINGS

[illegible] from last Tuesday through Friday Anderson gave a series of talks [illegible] great interest to the student body. [illegible] large crowds attended these meetings held every morning at 11:45 and [illegible] at night. It has been said that [illegible] largest crowds ever attending religious services here attended those [illegible] by Dr. Anderson. We only wish Anderson could stay with us indefinitely.

[illegible] prayer meetings that have been [illegible] held on in the different dormitories will be continued if those in charge think it best. It will be left [illegible] each individual group as to what is [illegible].

A Talk On Beer

[illegible] at the Y. M. C. A. meeting on next [illegible] Tuesday night, there will be a talk [illegible] on beer and other forms of beverages [illegible] The subject will be discussed by Dr. [illegible] J. Brimm. All students are urged [illegible] to be present for this timely discussion. The meeting will last for only a [illegible] short while. It begins at seven o'clock.

[illegible] There will be a meeting of the Y. M. C. A. cabinet tonight at eight o'clock in Dr. Spencer's classroom. Every member is asked to be there.

I. A. Phifer, of Spartanburg, spoke at the meeting of the Ministerial club yesterday. Mr. Phifer is a lawyer and layman who has had a wide experience. His talk was very helpful.

On Monday night, May 1, the Ministerial club will hear Dr. J. W. Jackson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Columbia. Dr. Jackson will speak on a subject of vital importance to those who are studying for the ministry.

On Thursday night at eight o'clock, officers will be elected for Delta Chi Alpha, Christian leadership fraternity. This fraternity has grown rapidly since its formation into state chapters. At this meeting as one of the prearranged programs, J. N. Dendy will give a report on a book entitled "The Preacher and His Life's Work," by Dr. Jowett.

Representatives will be sent to the national Delta Chi Alpha conference to be held at Wofford college on next Saturday, April 29.

Two weeks ago the Delta Chi Alpha fraternity sponsored a vesper service held on the steps of the Administration building. It has been decided to continue this service, with various members of the student body leading the program. Every Sunday evening at five-thirty you are invited to attend these vespers.

Washington and Lee

A book printed four years before Columbus made his great voyage is now owned by Washington and Lee university and is displayed in the library.

Johan Pruss, in Strasburg, cut the types by hand and set them up to print on hand-made paper and bind it in parchment.

Besides the original volume there is on display also a modern imitation of another old book done by the United States printing office a short time ago. The colored pages of both form a very interesting exhibit.

Hoover's Degree

Ex-President Hoover has received a doctor's degree in engineering from a mining school in Austria. It seems that he has also just finished a four-year course in the University of Hard Knocks. Perhaps he will get his D. D. soon (Doctor of the Depression), eh?

Students of Today

If you think modern schools have low standards, ask Booth Tarkington, noted author. He says that college men today work about twenty times as hard as they did forty years ago when he studied at Princeton. He thinks the present generation much more serious in regard to matters of world importance.—The Florida Flambeau.

"The Queens Blues" publishes this as an extract of a newspaper of 1688. (Why tell the Queens-Chicorans, or co-eds in general; don't they already know it?)

They are to report for work soon after school is out.

A flavor that neither possesses alone

Early in the 17th century, tobacco seed from America was taken to Turkey. Different soil, different climate, different temperatures night and day, and different farming methods produced an entirely new tobacco—small in size, but very rich and aromatic.

Four certain spots are famous for the quality of their Turkish tobacco — Xanthi and Cavalla in Greece; Samsoun and Smyrna in Turkey. And it is principally from these places that our buyers get the Turkish for Chesterfield.

These Turkish tobaccos are blended, in just the right amount, with Domestic tobaccos. It is this blending and cross-blending of just the right amount of Turkish and Domestic tobaccos which gives Chesterfield a flavor that neither possesses alone.

Bethea stated at the inquest that he did not know the gun was loaded.

Chi Beta Phi Elects Officers

T. L. Shinnick Named President For Year. To Select Winner Of Scholarship Key.

At the regular meeting of Eta chapter of Chi Beta Phi, held in the science hall last Wednesday, T. L. Shinnick was elected president for the coming year.

Other officers elected at the same time were: W. N. White, vice-president; Paul Todd, treasurer; Charles E. Carson, corresponding secretary; A. P. Wilson, recording secretary; and T. F. Carothers, marshal.

Mr. Shinnick, the new president, is a junior, and has been actively interested in the study of science since entering P. C. in the fall of 1931.

Committees appointed by the new president to serve during the next year are:

Executive: J. G. Jeanes, chairman; J. C. White, and T. F. Carothers.

Program: J. W. Haney, chairman; James Blake, and R. F. Fleming.

Initiation: D. H. McFadden, chairman; W. H. Cranford, and E. C. Gilmer.

Dan McCormick read a paper on "Television" at the meeting.

A short business meeting was held following the regular meeting to discuss matters called to the attention of the fraternity by the national president, A. C. Blackwell. One of these concerned the selection of the member of the local chapter who is to receive the Chi Beta Phi scholarship key for the most outstanding academic record in the chapter. George K. Smith won the award last year.

The winner of the award this year will be announced as soon as the committee appointed to compare the records of all eligible men has made its report.

Collegian "Copy" Given To Printer

Manuscript for The Collegian, college literary magazine, has been turned in to the printer and it is expected that the magazine will be ready for distribution by May 20, according to information given out by John Osman, editor.

Productions of students at P. C. will fill the entire booklet—about ten short stories, two or three other longer articles, and some poetry will be included to make a magazine of about 20 pages, nine inches by twelve.

One of the greatest difficulties, the editor said, was in getting students to contribute enough material. Publication has been long delayed on that

LOSE BY INCHES TO MICH. TEAM

Osman, On Final Lap, Makes Beautiful Sprint To Move Up From Fourth To Second.

The Presbyterian college mile relay team lost by inches to Western Teachers college, Michigan, in the college event of the Penn Relays at Philadelphia Saturday. Sports writers described the race as the closest of the two-day track carnival.

John Osman, running the anchor lap for the Blue Stockings, gained fifteen yards on the leader to pull from fourth place to second and finish a bare twelve inches behind Pfingst, crack Western Teacher anchor man.

The P. C. captain passed Campbell, of Manhattan, and Speiser of the College of the City of New York, on the back straightaway and ran the second curve abreast of Pfingst, but could not close up the gap on the last straightaway, and the Michigan speedster broke the tape with inches to spare.

The C. C. N. Y. runner pulled a muscle on the final lap.

Manhattan college, a favorite to win, took third, and Maryland was fourth.

The time was 3 minutes 23.3 seconds.

Other schools entered in the event were St. Johns college and College of the City of New York.

A party of five journeyed to Philadelphia to witness the track carnival. A. P. Wilson, T. B. McTeer, A. W. Collins and L. H. Mixson accompanied Professor C. W. Grafton. Mrs. Grafton went with the party to Farmville, Va.

Pan-Hellenic Finals Come On May 12-13

At a recent meeting of the Pan-Hellenic council, "Hod" Williams and his orchestra was selected to furnish the music for the Pan-Hellenic Final dances to be held on May 12 and 13th at Copeland hall.

This orchestra is originally from Chicago, but during the last four or five months has been playing a continuous hotel engagement at Jacksonville, Fla, where they have been heard by tourists with enthusiasm. The orchestra played recently for the University of South Carolina German, and has been engaged for the Mercer finals.

The council is endeavoring to make this affair an exceptionally good one since plans for the last dances were frustrated by general financial conditions. Three hundred bids have been sent out to various parts of this state and others.

Triangular Debate Won By Wofford

Wofford's negative and affirmative teams won their engagements Friday night in the annual triangular debate with Newberry and Presbyterian.

The P. C. squads won one and lost one. The negative team of M. P. Snipes and W. M. Ransom won a decision over the Newberry affirmative at Wofford college. The judges voted unanimously in favor of the P. C. representatives. The Newberry team was Messrs. Niemac and Ingram.

The P. C. affirmative team, Wiley Narron and J. B. Gibbs, lost to Wofford debaters at Newberry.

College Faces Bright Outlook

The college administration has made strenuous efforts in the past several days to "spike" rumors of an unknown origin that P. C. would not open next fall.

In a report sent to the Associated Press it was stated that the outlook for the coming year is brighter than it has been for several years past.

The college faces the new term with a balanced budget, freedom from pressing debt and prospects for an increased enrollment.

The source of the false report could not be determined.

Frosh Trackmen Lose To Davidson

First Loss of Season By Local Team. North Carolina Presbyterians Win By Score 68-58.

The Presbyterian college freshman track team sustained its first loss of the season Saturday afternoon to the Davidson freshman team by the score of 68 to 58.

Displaying an all-round ability, the Davidson men jumped into the lead in the 100-yard dash, first event on the program, and were never headed, although the score was within two or three points of being tied in several places.

There were several good marks made during the meet. Frazier of Davidson, one of the best milers ever seen on the local track, broke the S. C. varsity record on the mile by three seconds, running the distance in 4 minutes 36.9 seconds. His time of 2 minutes 3.8 seconds in the 880-yard run came within four seconds of the varsity record in this event.

Wilbanks of Presbyterian, came through with his usual good performance by scoring 24 points for his team. He threw the javelin exactly the same distance as last Saturday, getting 161 feet 4 inches. He also made his best mark of the year in winning the shot put with 37 feet 3.5 inches. He appears to be the only man to take the place of Ewing next year in the shot.

Winget, for P. C., kept up his winning streak by again annexing first in the 440. He also took third in the 220. The time for the 440 was 54 flat.

Guerard was second high scorer for the P. C. team, taking first in the broad jump and second in high hurdles and the javelin.

Summary:

One-mile run: Frazier, Davidson, first; Forehand, Presbyterian, second; Glass, Davidson, third. Time, 4 minutes 36.9 seconds.

100-yard dash: Evans, Davidson, first; Bradley, Presbyterian; Faison, Davidson. Time, 10.4 seconds.

BLUE KEY PUTS ON STUNT NIGHT

Entertainment Friday Evening At Thornwell Chapel For College Athletic Association.

The Blue Key honorary leadership fraternity at its meeting last week completed plans to sponsor a stunt night in the Thornwell chapel, Friday, May 5. This entertainment is to consist of ten-minute skits put on by each social fraternity on the campus. A program will also be put on by the co-eds. Captain Wysor has agreed to have a crack squad from the military department of the college execute fancy drills. The program promises to be an entertaining one.

The entertainment will begin at 8 o'clock, and an admission of fifteen cents will be charged for the benefit of the college athletic association.

Election of officers for next year was completed at the meeting. Bob Lynn was elected president previously. At the meeting last week Bob Sims was elected vice-president, and Dossey McFadden and Charlie Plowden were elected secretary and treasurer, respectively.

No Junior-Senior Held This Year

No junior-senior function will be held this year, it was decided at a joint meeting of the senior and junior classes Friday.

It was decided some time ago that the customary junior-senior dance would be dispensed with this spring because of the expense, but until Friday it was supposed that the reception and banquet would be held as usual, and the date had been definitely set as the coming week-end. Conflicts with the state track meet and the Blue Key stunt night made it necessary to change the date.

Seniors attending the joint meeting of the two classes voted unanimously to do away with the celebration altogether.

Arnold To Lead Christian Frat

V. M. Arnold, a sophomore, was elected president of the local chapter of Delta Chi Alpha, honorary Christian leadership fraternity, at a meeting of that organization last Thursday. Cecil B. Lawter was elected vice-president, and Chalmers McCutchen, secretary-treasurer.

Freeman Parker is the retiring president of the local chapter. Norton Dendy, C. B. Lawter, and G. A. Black were vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively.

Delegates were sent to the national convention at Wofford college, Saturday. At this convention Cecil Lawter was elected national secretary, and G. A. Black was selected to serve a two-year term as a member of the executive council.

Declamation Prelim To Be Held Tuesday

The preliminary declamation contest for freshmen and sophomores will be held tomorrow at 3:30, according to an announcement by Professor Woodworth last week.

The final contest will be held May

OUR APPEARANCE

We noted with a great deal of curiosity the apparently silent gentlemen who paraded the campus for two days [illegible]. We [illegible] what we [illegible] judge as they seemed to have interested and exam[illegible] the general make-up of the school in quite a thorough manner, and gave us no signs of their opinions, but whatever the impressions were we sincerely hope they were good ones.

We are inclined to wonder just what sort of impressions the appearance and the inside workings of Presbyterian College would give to an outsider who surveys with the wholly critical eye. Certainly the campus itself is attractive enough, though not as well kept as it could be. Our buildings are adequate and modernly equipped. This phase of the college, we believe would meet the approval of most harsh critics; but we ask what of the curriculum, the courses, the methods of teaching? Are they proficient and can they stand up to the best? Does the instruction we get give us the maximum amount of benefit?

Going further, we say those are not the greatest things to wonder about. The impressions that we ourselves would give ought to be of prime importance. They should be the ones that really count, for, in the long run, it's not the college but what we know. And [illegible] we developing our own minds and using them to their fullest capacity? Can we stand [illegible] eye?"

SHAVING CREAM AND TEXTBOOKS

(From The Charleston [illegible] and Courier)

One writer [illegible] a student in South Carolina, say of the University, Clemson, Winthrop, would set up for demonstration purposes, a little factory to produce shaving cream.

Shaving cream is of many varieties, at least twenty, and each and every one of them is much like another. A tube of shaving cream retails for thirty-five cents, and The News and Courier believes the manufacturing thereof, the cost of manufacturing it, container included, is somewhere between three cents and a half and four cents, and a quarter. We believe, too, that a satisfactory shaving cream can be manufactured and marketed in quantity in South Carolina as a school text book can be, and we wish that in the state were a manufactory of skilful, ingenious, enterprising boys and girls with a turn for something besides law, politics and school teaching. Why not output of professionals of such low grade?

WHEN ARE WE GOING TO GET A NAME

The question of a name for Presbyterian College has been discussed pro and con since the founding of the institution. As always is the case, [illegible] have appeared for each side of the question. Many have favored naming the institution, contending that Presbyterian College is not a name but a description.

Just as many assert that the present appelation is good enough. They feel that the traditions that have grown up around the initials, "P. C." would be lost if a change were made.

In weighing the arguments advanced on each side, one finds correct reasoning on the side of those who favor a change. Most alumni, especially those outside of South Carolina, agree that another name would aid materially in distinguishing their alma mater, in the minds of people not closely connected with the college, from other schools supported by the same denomination. "P. C." is well-known in this state, but is meaningless in other states and "Presbyterian" carries even less meaning in the ears of most strangers. When one speaks of "P. C." or "Presbyterian College" to a stranger, he almost always has to go on and explain what and where it is.

Another name would require the same explanation for a time, but after a few years the college would become known by the more distinctive name and we would not have to explain carefully to new acquaintances that Presbyterian College is the name of our alma mater, not a description of its church affiliation.

The Alumni Association has gone on record as favoring a change in name; and the board of trustees has announced its willingness to take the necessary action to make the change if the students favor it. The college administration has long been in favor of the above move. It is now time for the student body to take a definite stand in the matter.

In order for the board of trustees to take action, a student petition must be presented to that body. The next move is for the student body executives to ascertain by a poll of that group whether the men now in school approve or disapprove of the proposal to change the college name. If a majority favors a change, no time should be lost in preparing a petition to be presented to the trustees for action at their next meeting.

If the majority does not favor a change, the entire matter should be dropped; but with the board of trustees, the Alumni Association and the college administration taking definite stands on the matter, the student body should give an indication of its opinion on the question.

A MANIAC?

(In explanation: Many have been watching with interest during recent weeks the actions of Chancellor Hitler of Germany. Many have been the opinions formed concerning the Hitler dictatorship, the Nazi rule. The following is a presentation of the present view of the world's thoughts toward Germany's new rule).

The scene opens on Europe's asylum. The gates open and a maniac is at large, as he steps through the gate into Germany. The mad one is dressed in military cloak and boots. On his head is a hat of the Bonapartist regime with the Nazi emblem on the band. It is Hitler!

"Ha!" he cries, "I am Napoleon!" He draws forth a blade and slashes right and left. What is this malicious weapon, this glittering, leering, diabolical blade? It poises in mid-air and he recognizes it as Race Hatred.

On goes this imbecile; but, surprisingly, men gather to his side and follow him, flashing blades fashioned after the maniac's sword. The Nazi regime is under way! Germany takes [illegible] Russia.

SOCIAL CONTACT

Many views have been taken as to the most important thing in life or in living on this earth with the others of our species. Many men in various walks give us varied opinions on the subject. Some will tell us that the acquisition of knowledge is in the last analysis, the principal object. Others who, it seems, could have as near as "intellectual" philosophy, tell us the happiness should be the end of all our doings, and others, with a very cynical smile, attempt to show that our aims in this life are vanity and for naught. But common sense tells us all of these, we reason to ourselves that as long as we live on this earth we must live with our fellow men, and somehow it is quite logical that the real thing is learning to get along with others.

We are all of us aware of what social contact is. We know that it is our friendly intercourse with each other, yet there are so few of us who can practice it. So few of us realize the easiness of living in harmony with others. We are too ready to find fault in others; we are too anxious to condemn and to reform. It pricks man's vanity to be denounced for his mistakes, to be called down openly for what he has done. It usually makes a man mad to be proved wrong in an opinion. So why do we not let each one handle his own mistakes and prove the fallacy of his own arguments to himself. If it takes that to live in harmony we should practice it, for, after all, only the little things that the tranquility of peaceful contact fail to see and call things really spoil cordiality.

MOTHER'S DAY

Next Sunday, May 14, is the day set aside by the nation as Mother's Day. It is the day that we send mother a telegram, or candy, or some other token of our love; and wear carnations in her memory.

President Wilson, in 1914, signed a proclamation designating the second Sunday in May of each year as the day on which the nation is to show its love and reverence for motherhood. Mother's Day has been observed each year since. On this day mother is placed on pedestal and feted by her sons and daughters, until she wonders if they really are her children. Is this John, who has not written since he got married; or Mary, who has not had time to visit since she moved three miles out in the country; or Bill, who never writes from college unless he needs money? They have not been so attentive since about this time last year.

Be Careful Now

The Coker "Periscope" tells the girls where to get the correspondence course, "How to Get a Farmer in Ten Lessons." It sounds dangerous, and they might publish other courses too.

Creighton university has a large class for the training of radio announcers. Let's hope they don't make any more mechanical voices to crank out the merits of Ulikem fags.

Sixty men at Eastern Illinois State Teachers college are banded to promote what is known as the 50-50 club. It's the old idea of the Dutch-treat date with a new name. The co-eds, whom it concerns mostly, seem to take kindly to the idea.

This technocracy thing is getting out of hand. As evidence, read the answer of a student in a southwestern college who wrote the following gem when asked what technocracy was: "Technocracy is a new science used in X-ray to kill germs."

The Cadet Journal (St. Joseph's college) recently published the plainest cartoon in the history of collegiate journalism. It consisted of a two-column white space, in the center of which was a single black dot. The caption of the original drawing read, "The Turning Point."

Maybe it doesn't prove anything, but although there are more women than men enrolled at Ken State college, Ohio, five of the six students to receive an "A" average for the first semester were men.

TIRED FINGERS

Tired fingers, so worn, so white,
Sewing and mending from morn 'til night.
Tired hands and eyes that blink,
Drooping head too tired to think.

Tired arms that once had pressed
A curly head to a mother's breast.
Tired voice so soft, so dear,
Saying, "Sleep well, darling, mother's near."

Tired fingers, so worn, so true,
Sewing and mending the whole day through.
From break of dawn 'till setting sun,
A Mother's work is never done.

The tentative appointments for the advanced course and the ranks for next year will be issued on May 15. These appointments will hold good as long as meritorious qualities are shown in the work.

The freshmen will compete in rifle marksmanship this week. Several good scores have already been turned in, with Tom Upshur leading the field with an average of 91 out of a possible 100 on the four positions.

Looking Around

Yale Debates Winthrop

Two of the Yale debating team came all the way from New Haven to tilt with the Winthrop team on the query, "Resolved: That women in politics are a fiasco."

As usual, whenever men try to outargue the ladies, no decision could be reached.

Track Medals

You may not be able to eat track medals, but you can imitate John Lewis, a former Olympic star, and put them in your mouth if you have big gold ones and need dental work. The dentist melted them up and took part of the metal to fill the teeth and part to pay for the work.

"Trousers are unbecoming the dignity of co-eds. They shall not wear them," said Dean French, of the University of Idaho.

AN APOLOGY TO THE CO-EDS

As chairman of the entertainment committee of the Blue Key fraternity, I wish to apologize for the action taken at the college stunt night.

Your program was reviewed before it was given and it was a very good program. We fully understand you were not advertising beer, and in fact know that the 3.2 you mentioned referred to a joke and not to beer.

Blue Key thanks you very much for your interest and help, and we are very sorry that you were offended.

FOR McSWEEN TALKS TO FROSH CABINET

Freshman "Y" cabinet was addressed by Dr. McSween on last Wednesday night. The meeting was held in the College President's home. The topic for discussion was that of "Stewardship." After the discussion, plans were made for the receiving of new members on the campus next fall. When the meeting came to a close, Mrs. McSween served refreshments.

Membership cards have been ordered and will be issued within several days to all men who signed the Y. M. C. A. membership cards. They will be useful in obtaining recognition at other Y's. For further information see one of the "Y" officers.

There will be one more Y. M. C. A. meeting held this year. Next Thursday night will bring the scheduled program to a close.

New officers have taken over their duties in the Ministerial club. For the next year this group will be headed by the following men: President, E. M. Gregg; vice-president, C. McCutcheon; secretary-treasurer, W. Narron. All students who are planning to enter the ministry or any phase of Christian life are expected to attend the scheduled meetings held each Sunday afternoon.

Dr. D. J. Brimm addressed the Ministerial group yesterday on the subject of "Consecration." A number of points were brought out to show the essential need of absolute consecration in one's life.

SUPPOSE YOU TELL ME WHY YOU SMOKE GRANGER"

"WELL, it's like this. Back in the old days, when men wore high hats and frock coats, they had plenty of time to think things out, and they had sense, too. They used to sit down on a log and take the time to whittle their tobacco from a plug, to be sure of having a cool smoke.

"In those days, a man named Wellman, right here in Quincy, Ill., made about the best tobacco you could get. He knew how to keep the flavor fine and mellow.

"Well, sir, the people who make this Granger Rough Cut acquired Mr. Wellman's method, and they must have known how the old boys used to whittle their tobacco to make it smoke cool. Yes, sir, this Granger is the real stuff. The same mellowness and fine flavor that Wellman used to hand out to his friends. And it's whittled into big shaggy flakes all ready for the pipe. 'Rough Cut' they call it—'cut rough to smoke cool' is the best way I can describe it.

"Regardless of price, Granger is about the best pipe tobacco I ever smoked. That's why I smoke it, and that's why they call it America's Pipe Tobacco, sir."

Now we wanted to sell Granger for 10¢. It was just a question of how to do it for the price. So we pack Granger in a sensible foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke the package. We give smokers this good GRANGER tobacco in a common-sense pouch for 10¢.

GRANGER has not been on sale very long, but it has grown to be a popular smoke. And there is this much about it—we have yet to know of a man who started to smoke it, who didn't keep on. Folks seem to like it.

The Granger pouch keeps the tobacco fresh

A. D. Ferguson is the winner of the Chi Beta Phi scholarship key for 1932-33, it was announced last week by T. L. Shinnick, president of the local chapter.

The key is given each year to the member of the local chapter who has maintained the highest average in science for the four-year course.

Beside his scholastic attainments, Ferguson is active in many branches of student activity. He was captain of the rifle team during the past season and is a frat lieutenant in the R. O. T. C. unit. Ferguson is majoring in chemistry. He is from West Point, Ga., and is a member of Alpha Lamda Tau social fraternity.

G. K. Smith, who is now studying at Johns Hopkins university was the winner of the key last year.

TRACK TEAMS ENJOY ANNUAL FISH FRY AND STEW THURSDAY

Coach Lonnie McMillian on Thursday afternoon took the members of his Presbyterian varsity and freshman track teams on a fish stew and fry at Lake Murray.

The boys spent the afternoon fishing and swimming or looking around until Lew Hatton let them start at the piles of fried fish and the huge pot of stew. Besides, there was ice tea, punch and oranges to go around several times.

Bob Perrin worked up his appetite by landing a 5½ inch buss, and put on an endurance eating contest with Professor Sturgeon. After everybody had watched them a few [illegible] brought the pot with several gallon[illegible] for the picnic, among them Messrs. Platt Prather, John T. Young, R. E. Sadler, Peek Cornwell, Slim Rayner, Chick Galloway and Baldwin's Grocery. Jack Anderson and Elwood Dillard fried the fish, and Charlie Cooper piloted the Izaak Waltons to where the big follows were.

The following men were able to go on the trip: Osman, Yearout, Woodruff, Lynn, Ewing, McDuffie, Jordan, Parker, Freeman, Underwood, Perrin, Oliver, Clark, Rampey, Cranford, Dominick.

The various stunts put on by the social fraternties, co-eds, and military department went off with great success and enthusiasm when held in the Thornwell chapel a short time ago. Because of the success of the event it is hoped that the auditorium will be filled.

This fraternity also decided that the "stunt night" shall be made an annual event.

This program of amusement promises to be one of the outstanding events on the college calendar what with growing enthusiasm year by year and the friendly rivalry between organizations to put on better acts. It is being rumored that a follies as is put on by other schools will be given.

The student body is very much interested at present about this event and it is certain that the show will be continued in future years

"Stunt Night" To Be Given Again

Blue Key Entertainment Will Be Repeated At Florida Street School Friday Night.

It was decided by the Blue Key fraternity at their regular meeting last week to give the "stunt night" again, in the Florida Street school next Friday evening. It is almost certain that the popularity and reputation of this event has been widespread.

The various stunts put on by the social fraternties, co-eds, and military department went off with great success and enthusiasm when held in the Thornwell chapel a short time ago. Because of the success of the event it is hoped that the auditorium will be filled.

This fraternity also decided that the "stunt night" shall be made an annual event.

FOR SERVICE TO COLLEGE

Ferguson, Land, MacLean, Covington and Woods Get Recognition By Faculty For Meritorious Work During Year.

Five men were selected by the faculty last week to receive the Block "P" award, given annually by Presbyterian college to men outstanding in various branches of student activity. The men are H. H. Ferguson, student body president; C. H. Land, PaC-SaC editor; B. E. MacLean, Y. M. C. A. president, and J. O. Woods cheer leader and glee club president, and B. W. Covington, Jr., former editor of The Blue Stocking.

The award, which consists of a gold watch charm in the form of a block "P" and a certificate signed by the president of the college, was made for the first time two years ago, and is the highest honor that a Presbyterian college student may achieve as an undergraduate.

It is given annually to those men who, in the opinion of the faculty, have performed outstanding service for the institution as a member of the staff of some publication, member of the glee club or orchestra, the Y. M. C. A., the debating team, or the student body, or in some other non-athletic branch of student activity.

The faculty voted to give G. A. Black, Jr., honorable mention for his work with the Y. M. C. A. in organizing and training a freshman cabinet. He will not, however, receive one of the charms.

A presentation ceremony, at which the awards will be made, is to be held as one of the final chapel programs of the school year.

The men who received the honor in 1932 were: L. C. Jackson, editor of The Blue Stocking; B. H. Boyd, editor of the PaC-SaC, and R. H. Gillespie, Y. M. C. A. president.

H. H. Ferguson is the retiring president of the P. C. student body. He is a member of Blue Key, national service fraternity, and of Kappa Alpha social fraternity. He has always been active in campus life and served three terms as a member of the student council before being elected to head that body. He is from York, S. C.

Land is editor of the 1933 PaC-SaC. He came to P. C. from Thornwell orphanage and during his stay here has made many friends. He has been on the yearbook staff for the past three years. He is the third PaC-SaC editor to receive the block "P" in as many years.

MacLean headed the work of the Y. M. C. A. this year as president of the "Y" cabinet. He came here his junior year from Presbyterian Junior college, Maxton, N. C., and has since been active in all student affairs. He was associate editor of The Blue Stocking and assistant business manager of the PaC-SaC. He is a member of Blue Key. MacLean is from Carthage, N. C.

VACATION

As the end of the college year approaches and the last issue of The Blue Stocking is published, I think it quite a fitting time to commend the staff for its fine work during the past semester, and also to praise the first semester grades which did so well with the paper.

The circulation department has done well during the past few months, especially in the increase of the number of copies going out. Their untiring efforts, and many hours put forth every Monday and Tuesday in mailing out copies to subscribers is very praiseworthy.

The editorial staff has done splendid work. The editorial page really has been readable and interesting. The discussions on morals and student problems; the book reviews, and the limericks, and other features have been good. The news articles, both sport and incidental, were well written and accurate.

Most laudable has been the work of the advertising department through whose medium the paper owes a large part of its success. Of course the nearly full page ads have taken up a great deal of space, but that aided much in making the publication of the paper possible.

The editor deserves to be commended highly for his management.

And here's to greater success next fall!

OOFUS GOOFUS

THE OFFIS BOY

Since this is the last issue of the year, Oofus Goofus feels called upon to gather up a few loose screws, so to speak; and perhaps give cause for grievances, which, unfortunately, must wait several months before retribution may be taken.

The most important rumor of the past several days concerns the discovering of a mammoth home brew "factory" in the attic at Laurens. Almost every minute of Hotel Laurens (radio in every room and not a bath in the house) is reported mixed up in the deal. Ye ex-student councilman knows more than he should about the goin's on; and a harmless-looking senior whom no one ever suspected of any wrong doing is fast becoming famous as a "Beer Baron."

The Barons should bring suit against the state legislature for ruining their business with 3.2.

For the first time in the history of the school, the degree of B. P. will be awarded to a graduate this spring. W. J. McCutchen is the man so honored.

It seems that the B. P. refers to the method of securing credits rather than the degree following a particular line of study.

The rapidly increasing number of married men in the student body gives one an idea for a name.

Why not call it Benedict College?

But then, someone would shorten the moniker to B. C., and the Blue Hose would come to be known as the headache boys.

Even more interesting would be the complications if Presbyterian became Coligny. Some wise bird would think of C. C. right at the start; and we shudder to think of what would happen to the Blue Hose.

Doug Patton and Bob Reeder pulled off an excellent practical joke and incidentally proved that Barnum was right. Twenty applicants answered their advertisement for thirty hogs to raise green gourds in south Georgia all summer at two and a half per day.

One pseudo-dignified and otherwise perfectly normal senior said, "To hang with the other job I have, I'm gonna raise gourds."

He didn't bat an eyelash when, in answer to his question, he was told that the vegetable was to be sent to Northern breweries to be made into gourd brew, a green-striped liquid which sells in foreign markets for ridiculous prices.

Only twelve days, four term papers, one test and the April payment of fees before it will be all over until next September— for all except the juniors, who are doomed to swelter in the Alabama oven called by some Fort McClellan, but described by those who have been there in more descriptive and less polite terms.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

R. O. T. C. NEWS

Officers of the day and their orderlies for next week are:

Monday, 15th—Lt. J. C. White, with Corp. J. P. Todd as orderly.
Tuesday, 16th—Lt. W. N. White, with Corp. J. M. Tolbert as orderly.
Wednesday, 17th—Lt. H. D. Wilson, with Corp. P. W. Yearout as orderly.

All seemed fairly well pleased at the marksmanship ability of the junior class as a whole. It was stated that as a group the scores turned in were much better than in years previous. No record of high score has yet been turned in.

All juniors are requested to turn in shirt measurements to Sgt. Young Monday or Tuesday. The order has to be made up and gotten off.

The men selected for the advanced course will be measured for uniforms next week.

All men who have not turned in shoe sizes to Hipp and Adair are urged to do so at once.

JOKES

Proud Mother: "Yes, he's a year old now and he's been walking since he was eight months old."

Bored visitor: "Really, he must be tired by now."

"I see in the paper that a man is run over every thirty minutes in London."

"Poor guy."

"What is your daughter's average income for the year?"

Father: "Well, I should say about 2:30 o'clock every night."

"What makes you think that I was drunk last night?"

"Nothing, except that you were trying to get the cuckoo clock and the canary to sing a duet."

"I saw the doctor that you told me to see."

"What did he tell you?"

"He asked me who sent me and when I told him he asked me to pay in advance."

Pawnbroker's Sign

Why does a pawnbroker display three brass balls over the door of his place of business? The insignia was taken from that of the Italian bankers, generally called Lombards, who were the first to open pawnshops in England for the relief of temporary distress. The greatest of the Lombards was the celebrated and eventually princely house of the Medici of Florence. They bore pills on their shields. From the pills came the pawnbroker's brass balls.

Summer School Begins June 5

Students who intend to take advantage of the summer courses to be offered here beginning June 5, should sign up at once and indicate which studies they desire to take, Professor R. L. Coe announced today.

It will be necessary for the school authorities to know at once what courses prospective students expect to take so that arrangements may be made for them.

Applications are now being received at the registrar's office. A list of the courses wanted shoud be submitted with the application. Students who are contemplating attending the school but have not yet fully decided should also hand in to the registrar a list of the courses desired.

Yes, I have heard about two words; and now and then three words—but "They Satisfy" means "To gratify fully."

Why do these two words "they satisfy" fit Chesterfields? Because Chesterfield Cigarettes are milder. Because Chesterfield Cigarettes taste better.

Chesterfield's way of blending and cross-blending fine Turkish and Domestic tobaccos brings out better flavor and aroma.

Track men who received their awards were: Captain J. E. Osman, J. O. Woods, Bob Perrin, T. F. Carothers, G. W. Ewing, B. A. Lowry, J. B. Copeland, Bothwell Graham, R. E. Sims, M. P. C. W. Adams, retiring president, acted as master of ceremonies and introduced Dr. McSween as the first speaker. Dr. McSween gave as the qualifications of an athlete courage, control and co-operation. "Self-control," he said, "is a prime requisite in life as well as in athletics. It is the most important thing learned on the field of athletic competition."

The courage to face great odds and the spirit of teamwork were the other qualifications he gave for an athlete.

Mr. Jacobs, Professor Sturgeon, Mr. Elchelberger and Dr. Peake then made short talks, and Coach Johnson spoke before presenting the block "P" certificates.

In his speech Johnson paid high tribute to Coach Lonnie McMillian. He described the track mentor as one of the outstanding track coaches of the South, and certainly of this state, and pointed for proof to the marvelous record of McMillian-coached teams.

"ALL FOR P. C. — P. C. FOR ALL"

VOLUME XV — PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE, CLINTON, S. C., SEPTEMBER 25, 1933 — NUMBER 1

Presbyterian-Clemson Battle To 6-6 Draw

MANY NEW MEN NOW ENROLLED

One Hundred and Fifteen Have Entered P. C. Since Last Term. Freshmen Number 103.

The second largest freshman class in history, together with seven upperclassmen from other schools and a few who had attended Presbyterian college previously but were not here last year, makes a total of 115 additional students, the first week's enrollment indicates.

The class stands well in quality as well as in quantity. Among the 103 "rats" there are six men who stood as valedictorians in their own high schools, and other who made fine scholastic records.

Numbers of them bid fair to make names for themselves in college sports if they continue to strive as they have done in high schools.

"They seem to be about the happiest looking bunch of freshmen I have ever seen," commented Dean Brown. "Two or three of them were all set to go to some other college until they saw how things looked here. They changed their minds and seem to have been glad ever since."

Several incidents have pointed to good sportsmanship of the class. One freshmen, calling the doctor to bandage an ugly bruise, remarked about the rat run, "Well, I wouldn't go to a school that didn't have it."

The new students are not from any one state or locality, but represent different sections from seven states of the South.

South Carolina, naturally, has the largest share with 83, and Georgia follows with 14. North Carolina has five and Florida three. Alabama and West Virginia each claim two, and one is a resident of old Virgina.

Even with this wide distribution, most of the new students have run up against fellows they remembered having met on some common ground in sports or at summer camps. .

And sometimes the opposite is true. A few of the freshmen here have met men from the same home town or city where they have lived for years without ever knowing each other.

Besides these new students, there are two sophomores whose faces were seen on the P. C. campus year before last, but not last year. N. F. Baskin and Meyer Frank are the men.

Three co-eds also decided to come back for more classes here. Beatrice Highsmith, Jamie Little, and Christine Peake are the three returning prodigals who will continue their work in the upper classes.

Entertain New Men At 'Y' Reception

The annual freshman reception given by the Y. M. C. A. and the College Dames was held at the home of Dr. McSween September 16..

The affair was in honor of the new students, and guests included faculty members and their wives, the student body and many young ladies of Clinton and nearby towns. In the receiving line were Robert D. Lynn and Miss Duncan, W. H. Cranford and Mrs. John McSween, Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Brown. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hunter received the guests at the entrance to the lawn.

Y. M. C. A. Cabinet Greets New Men

The Y. M. C. A. cabinet made unusual efforts to entertain the freshmen during their first few days on the campus. The "Y" recreation room in the gym was supplied with different types of games at the disposal of all new men. There were ping pong tables, jig-saw puzzles, checkers and dominos, that were enjoyed by the students. Refreshments were served on several occasions during the first week.

All trains and busses were met to bring the new students to the campus.

Professor Spends Summer Abroad

Swedenberg Doing Research In English Literature At British Museum Library.

Professor H. T. Swedenberg, who has resumed his teaching activities here after an absence of two years, spent an inetresting summer in England doing research work at the British Museum library.

The great museum library, which already contains four to five million volumes and requires a mile and a quarter of new shelf space each year to take care of the additional books, is an excellent place for research. Swedenberg said he found more material than he could cover, and in three months search never failed to find any desired volume.

It takes an artist to get an entry to this huge institution. The reading room is reserved for students doing research work, and to be admitted one must have a ticket. Professor Swedenberg secured his ticket from the American University union, an organization whose purpose it is to help and direct American students wtih their research in foreign countries. This union has on file catalogs from all the outstanding colleges in the United States, and of course a P. C. catalog was in this file.

While in England Professor Swedenberg visited several places of historic and literary interest, such as Exeter, Oxford, Greys churchyard and Canterbury. He says it is well worth the time and money and is valuable experience to any student interested in English history and literature.

The title of Professor Swedenberg's dissertation is "English Neo-Classic Epic Theory, 650-1750." He has also done work on this subject at the University of North Carolina.

Blue Key Group To Hold Meet

Blue Key, national leadership fraternity, will hold its first meeting of the year next Tuesday night at 7:30 at the Clinton hotel.

The meeting will be in the form of a luncheon and all student body members as well as those in the faculty are expected to be present. The members who will attend this meeting will include: Capt. R. E. Wysor, Dr. F. D. Jones, M. W. Brown and W. A. Johnson in the faculty, and D. H. McFadden, C. N. Plowden, R. E. Sims and R. D. Lynn in the student body.

It is expected that President McSween, due to his illness, will not be able to attend this initial meeting of the fraternity. The fraternity hopes within the next few months to tap those men on the campus who have shown themselves to be outstanding leaders on the campus.

College Head Continues Ill

Dr. John McSween, who has not been able to return to his office since the opening of school, is still ill, although his condition is greatly improved and he expects to be up soon.

The college president has been confined to his home for the past week and previously was a patient in the Hays hospital for a week. Troubled with laryngitis during a large part of the summer and ordered by his physician to remain in bed, he came to his office on the morning of September 12, the date school opened for new men, but was forced to return to his bed. The doctor then ordered him to the hospital, where he remained for a week until brought home several days ago.

Dr. A. E. Spencer has acted in the president's place during his absence.

The student body joins with the faculty and other friends of Dr. McSween in wishing him a speedy recovery.

R. O. T. C. Dept. Handles Absences

Carrying on a system worked out last year, the R. O. T. C. department is handling the absences from classes this year, at a request from the president. Captain Wysor, explaining the system in chapel Monday, said that no one must leave the city without first getting permission from the military department. Requests for leave must be filed at least 24 hours before the time the student expects to leave.

Absences for each week will be posted on the bulletin board the following Monday. Any explanation for these absences must be made at the office of the P. M. S. and T. before 4:30 Monday. No excuse for absence will be accepted except in case of emergency, unless satisfactory explanation is filed before the absence occurs.

STOREY IS ATTENDING LEEDS, IN ENGLAND

Henry Storey, former P. C. student, is now attending the University of Leeds in England. He is continuing the study of architecture, which he began at the University of Florida.

While here, Storey was a member of Beta Kappa fraternity and The Blue Stocking staff.

Annual Rat Parade Enjoyed By Frosh

All Students Join In Boisterous Celebration As Sophomores Welcome New Men.

Tuesday evening the sophomores extended their annual warm welcome to the freshman class. The juniors and a few seniors aided the sophomores in lending hospitality "de la plus grand chaleur." The sophomores were greatly outnumbered and had it not been for the kindness of the aforementioned classes in assisting the hosts, the guests could never have been so well taken care of.

As the hour for the annual event approached, freshmen hastened to prepare their faces and other anatomy for the gala events of the evening, and noise like radio applause could be heard emitting from the dormitories as the upper-classmen warmed the new students to the excitement at hand.

The verdant ones, besmutted and roughly attired, gathered quickly to the area around the flagpole as the college bell tolled the zero hour. The vigilance committee was on hand with all the necessary implements, so the party was not held up. The guests were immediately lined up along a beautiful long heavy rope as they answered to the roll call.

A band composed of members of the entertained class furnished music for the "grand march" and soon struck up that old familiar tune, "We'll Ride Ole Clemson on the Rail."

The band led the parade, followed by the "president's car" with Bolick as guest of honor, and Bird at the wheel.

As the human train was paddled to the square and around it, the city merchants passed out refreshments which consisted of candies and orangeade. After this pleasant repast the guests were led to the monument where an entertaining program was given.

The onion-eating contest was won by default. Kapperman, unable to devour the delicious fruit as fast as his opponent, surrendered the prize of "five smackers."

Rat Robert Bolick gave an unhitherto surpassed exhibition of that pastoral pastime—hog-calling.

Tank Team Begins Pre-Season Work

Candidates for freshman and varsity swimming teams began practice early last week.

The team is beginning its work early so that new material may be thoroughly trained in the pre-season period, through light workouts. Both back-stroke and breast-stroke material must be developed.

Dossey McFadden, Hank Wilson, Tom Valley, Al Walters and Henry Calvert are old men who have reported. Valley is a back-stroke candidate, while the others are working on the American crawl.

Prospects for the freshman outfit are as yet uncertain, although a few first year men have reported. Last year's rat team won the state championship.

Freshmen Form Reporters' Club

Five freshmen with journalistic aspirations met Wednesday morning after chapel and formed a Freshman Reporters' club for the purpose of training new students to fill positions on the staff of The Blue Stocking left vacant by old men.

The men applying for membership were J. E. Patrick of Covington, Ga.; F. S. Love, of Rock Hill; S. F. McGinnis, of Charleston; R. R. McLees and R. R. Miller, both of Clinton.

These men will act as cub reporters until they have written a certain amount of copy, and then they will be considered as candidates for staff positions.

CATS TIE SCORE LATE IN GAME

Blue Stockings Outplay Opponents Throughout the Contest. Vaunted Clemson Attack Does Little Against Line.

Displaying the same P. C. fighting spirit of past years plus a new passing and running attack, the 1933 edition of the Blue Stocking varsity outfought a much heavier Clemson team at Riggs field Saturday and gained a 6-6 tie decision with the Tigers.

Outweighed nearly twenty pounds to a man, the P. C. team, which entered the game as the under dog, had the Clemson team back on their heels for three quarters of the game, loosening up only once, in the third period when Clemson took over their marker. Led by the sophomore Higbe, the Hose had the Tigers bewildered during the first half by means of a brilliant passing attack and off-tackle plays which had the Bengal moaning.

At the opening kickoff, Bolick received the ball on his twenty yard line and went to the twenty-five, where Yarborough tackled him. On the second play Higbe got loose and went to the Clemson 40-yard stripe before he was stopped. From there P. C. drove the ball to Clemson's 34 before being forced to kick. The Tigers got the ball on their 15 but were forced to kick three plays later and P. C. began another drive which carried them to the 20-yard line where Clemson took the ball on downs. It was during this drive that P. C. made their initial first down. Clemson again kicked and Higbe brought the ball from the 45-yard marker to the 37. There the Hose began another drive, but the Tiger defense stiffened and the ball went over. The first quarter ended without the pigskin having left the Clemson end of the field.

A short time after the second period began, Captain Sims intercepted a Clemson pass and behind beautiful interference raced to the Clemson four-yard line. However, P. C. was penalized for clipping and the ball was brought back to the 29-yard line. On a pass from Perrin to Forehand on the next play, a Clemson player interfered with the receiver and the pass was called completed on the 22-yard line. Then the Tigers took the ball on an incomplete pass and immediately fumbled, Sims recovering for P. C. Perrin broke loose on a beautiful spin through the middle of the line and

Physical Exercise To Be Required

There is being renewed this year the much-discussed compulsory physical training, but according to Coach Johnson the program will be much more interesting than formerly.

A student may enroll for boxing, tennis, swimming, gym work or basketball. Clark is in charge of boxing, Norment and Gregg are in charge of tennis. Brewer, who is also the swimming coach, will look after the swimmers; and Meyer Frank will be in the gym.

Compulsory physical education was tried for a while last year and then dropped because of lack of interest. Several improvements have been made this year, however, in that the students have more different athletic activities from which to choose. The students must report three times a week, each absence counting one demerit.

Will Assist With Y. M. C. A. Work

E. L. Nelson, who has just completed two years at Columbia Theological seminary, will help with the Y. M. C. A. during the coming year. His work will be devoted especially to the freshman cabinet.

Mr. Nelson will finish work for his B. D. degree here and will then resume his studies at the seminary. He is originally from Hazel Green, Ala.

"There is a Divinity that shapes our ends; rough hew them how we may." Some of the freshmen may not think it was a Divinity that shaped their ends on Rat Run, but we believe that most of them will tell you that they were rough hewn no end.

BEGINNING

The Greeks had a word for it. They called it Alpha back in those days, and that was some 2,000 years ago. Today we have a word for it. We call it—"beginning." Like the Greeks, we have a term to mark the starting point—the send-off for a new phase of activity. And like the Greeks, we know what the beginning implies. We are aware of the many complications to follow, and we know that once we begin there is no turning back. Complications which mean disappointments, joys, sorrows, maybe a little failure, and possibly success.

Our word "beginning" is derived from the Anglo-Saxon words meaning in English "open." And from them we take a hint. Before us there is an open road to travel, an open page to write on. And we are to start out facing the open way with a premonition of some deep holes and a few black scars but they don't worry us at the present for we are beginning, and above all, the party must start in good spirits. Yes, good spirits are essential.

There is always a little excitement at the start, for who knows what is to follow. But excitement comes generally with those who are new at the game. The old ones are inclined to look on with a possible air of boredom, but still they are not quite alien to this spirit.

They say that a play, to make a good impression, must have a good beginning and a good ending. Let us make this a play, start out with a sort of bang. Let's give them the caviar, and if what follows somehow doesn't please them maybe at the end we will have the camels. But the end is a long way off and the beginning is at hand.

THE OLD P. C. SPIRIT

In the annals of the history of P. C. there are numerous examples of the famous "P. C. spirit," that spirit which has enabled P. C. to put out many championship teams. Great as are these examples, there is one this year that will rank along with the rest of them in the years to come. It has come in time to show the freshmen who perhaps have not learned the full meaning of "P. C." spirit" that this spirit is something real, not just a passive thing but absolutely and powerfully active.

There is a man on the football team, a senior now, who has built himself a name on the campus and on the athletic field as a real and active possessor of the P. C. spirit. He has, without a lot of show, made himself admired and respected by the student body and the administration. Honors that would have turned other heads he has accepted with modesty, and offices that he has filled have been well-filled.

Now, however, more than ever before, he shows himself worthy of the esteem given him. He had, through hard work, established himself a place in the backfield where, without doubt, he would have made a name for himself. He had begun to be recognized by sports authorities as a hard-hitting and hard-blocking back. Great predictions were made for what he would do this year. Then the line showed up weak. Coach Johnson needed a big man with real ability to stop up a tackle left vacant by one of the varsity men who graduated last year. Here is where the P. C. spirit showed itself. Without a murmur this man, scheduled for great things in the backfield, slipped into tackle and, showing the usual ability, helped Coach Johnson in one of the biggest problems he has had in several years. It doesn't seem so much for a man to do when you first think of it, but ponder over it a while and you will know that we are right. Keep an eye on this man, too. Unless we miss our guess he is going to make a name right where he is now. And, as we said before, P. C. won't be downed with a spirit like that.

A SUGGESTION

Recently a New York church tried the experiment of leaving its doors open to the public at all times. For a month the building was kept open night and day, and a sign was placed near the entrance inviting inside all who desired shelter from the bustle of the surrounding city. .

Attendants kept accurate count of the number who availed themselves of the solace offered in the great edifice for meditation and prayer. At the end of the month a check-up revealed that more people had entered the building outside of church hours than had attended regular church services during that time.

This should give an idea to those in charge of the local churches. College boys often feel the need of some place where they can "get away from the crowd" and fight out for themselves some of the battles which are always taking place within, and feel in closer contact with Him above who always takes the part of right in these battles. His own room does not offer such a solace. A dormitory room can never be private. But open doors at any one of the several beautiful churches in Clinton will offer welcome refuge to the boy in those moments when he wants solitude and communion with Him.

WATCH ARROWS

Resolutions to do better work are in nearly every mind as the new college year begins. In the past these resolutions have been too often broken by too many of us. Because of some little misstep or mistake at the beginning or because some of us are a trifle late in getting started, we develop complexes and lower our ideals.

The most of us who do this could have, with a very small amount of extra effort, climbed up to the original ideal instead of choosing to lower it.

Most of us are very much nearer than we think to the staircase of success, if we only take the first step and keep on toward the top. We should begin this year's work manfully and planfully—not playfully.

It will not pay to leap at the start unless we can keep steadily going on. It is the latter that gets one there. And it is the planning of the work and budgeting of the time that means progress. Just to drive ahead, not knowing where one is headed is foolish.

To waste time for want of planning it toward the best uses spells thriftlessness. It is worth while to have something to do and there is a joy in being occupied, of which joy the idle know nothing. Someone has said, "Happy is the man who knows he was born to work, who knows he can work, and that by work well done he can keep on climbing as other men have done to more enjoyable and profitable work."

There are times when strength and safety come by standing still, be it ever so hard for men of energy and enthusiasm to stand still. Rushing hither and thither in uncertainty is often giving play to our desire to be doing something rather than the exercise of calm judgment.

By carefully budgeting our time and by applying ourselves to the budget, plenty of time for recreation will be found, and under this systematic schedule sufficient study will be done. Every man should adopt a budget to suit his own mental resources and desires for recreation and rest. To successfully plan our work we must consider the past and reap the profits of experience.

We cannot always force ourselves all day of all our lives at the same pace. We must slow down occasionally in order to rest and take mental stock of ourselves and our progress. But if we do not keep the spirit and enthusiasm always growing our whole plan fails.

All this planning and budgeting and character forming is not only for our own good but for the world at large. We are influencing those about us daily; and for this reason alone we must learn the habits of patience and happiness in our labor.

THE SAGA OF AMMONIA SULFIDE or VIRTUE IS ITS OWN REWARD

A CONTINUED STORY
By Frank Johnston

It happened one fine evening last August. There was no excuse for it, it merely happened—one of those bolts from the blue, as it were. And as the saying goes, thereby hangs a tale; not a pretty tale as one is apt to find while browsing thru some classic tome, but a tale nevertheless. A tale such as one seldom hears, but once hearing never forgets. There is no doubt the tale is true, for I heard it with my own ears, which have not deceived me in many years. It is necessary, proper and altogether fitting that at this time we let you in on a deep and dark secret. And that, my friends, is the names of those dear and gentle folk who fought, bled, waded thru rivers of deepest gore, bit, clawed, scratched and finally died that this tale might come, bringing solace and comfort to you.

First, we have our hero, a necessary evil, for without a hero no tale is complete. This chap will henceforth be referred to as Beowulf Swedengraft—a man of valor. A man among men, brave and gentle, as you will learn later; but, alas, our hero is a trifle vain. He walks around in constant awe of his own prowess.

And then a villain of darkest hue, a scoundrel and a fiend in human form, whose very countenance frightens the stoutest hearts, causes weak men to faint and strong women to grow pale. This child of the devil is none other than that sad-eyed monster, Grothelvitch Brayumski.

Last and least in importance, our heroine, little Ammonia Sulfide, the heiress of old Barium Sulfide, a chap with many, many dollars and a few odd scents.

That August evening we were seated, in the drinking room (drawing room to you) of old Barium's home. Just the five of us, old Barium, Grothelvitch, Beowulf, little Ammonia and myself. We had talked of many things, such great minds as ours not being wont to dwell on common things, when for no good reason little Ammonia changed the subject to jewels. We had whiled away some time on this interesting topic, when Grothelvitch aroused himself from what seemed to be a lethargy, but was in reality only one of old Barium's armchairs.

He spoke in that oiiy voice which only villains have, and we hung on to his every word; no small task, since he was very excited and his words seemed to tumble from his mouth.

"My friends," he began, "this fragment of paper that I hold in my hands is the key, and the only key, to the great field of diamonds that our friend, Sinbad, has told us of in the account of his many travels."

"Hold on," cried Barium, "you know very well htat the tale of Sinbad, the sailor, is only a myth, a tale for those who are still children at heart."

"No, my friend Barium, Sinbad was a living, breathing man, even as you and I. Why, this document was written in his own hand and signed and witnessed by all the Arabian knights."

We examined the bit of parchment and found that it was in truth the chart to lead us to the lost valley made famous by Sinbad.

By this time old Barium had that glint in his eyes that comes to captains of industry when they are on the trail of a bit of easy money. He was simply bubbling over with enthusiasm, so it was necessary to call in the butler to clear away some of the superfluous enthusiasm before we could go farther.

"Grovelvitch," said old Barium, "I will furnish the financial backing necessary if you will lead us to this place of fabulous wealth."

"Very well, but it will take some little time to get ready to leave. You must put your affairs in order, for we go to a place where the hand of man has not set foot since old Sinbad was there."

All the arrangements were placed in the hands of Grothelvitch, who up to this time had seemed to be a perfect, if somehat morose, gentleman. He had bought an old windjammer from Sears Roebuck and we were planning to leave the last day of September. Little Ammonia insisted that she be allowed to christen the "Hydrophobia," our staunch little craft. As the "Hydrophobia" had no figurehead on which to break the 3.2, she broke the bottle over the head of old Barium, who was the only dead timber in the expedition.

We set sail on a bright and clear day and all was well until we were about three days out of New York, when we were caught in the teeth of a most horrible storm. Then winds moaned thru the rigging of our ship as though all the imps of Satan were loosed upon us. We weathered the first day of the storm with no ill effects, but at midnight, when the storm was at its height, there arose a great shout from the lookout.

(To Be Continued.)

Why do we say "Always Luckies Please"? Well, one reason is that every Lucky is made of choice, ripe tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop. Another reason—Luckies are always round, firm, fully packed—with no loose ends to sputter and spark. Careful examination and inspection by over 60 precision instruments and 17 alert scientists guarantee unfailing uniformity. That's why Luckies draw so easily, burn so evenly—always mild and smooth. And that's why—"Always Luckies Please!"

THE OFFIS BOY

Latest word from the Boss demands that this be a column of fun, fact and fiction. But the orders do not say upon which of the three emphasis is to be placed. Depend on your correspondent to devote most of his effort to fun and fiction, and resort to fact only when it is very, very interesting.

Fiction is familiar; but fact is vague and does not often come within the realm of this scrivener.

Speaking of fact, the most interesting news of the summer comes from Fort Gaines, Ga., where Benjamin Gay, Fort Gaines pitcher, broke his arm in three places while trying to throw a curve ball.

If some of those freshmen can run half as fast, minus the incentive, as they did "rat run" night when the incentive was very much in evidence, the track team should have little to worry about in the dash department.

When word went around that the sophomore class was looking for a freshman to drive "the president's car" in the rat parade, two ambitious candidates for immunity from the gauntlet applied for the job and presented drivers' licenses in proof of their fitness for the position.

(For the benefit of the uninitiated, "the president's car" was the wheelbarrow which Pilot Bird trundled downtown).

This week's nuisance: Upperclassmen who are so anxious to get certain freshmen in their fraternities that they protect them from punishment at the rat parade.

PRESBYTERIAN-CLEMSON BATTLE TO 6-6 DRAW

was stopped on the two-yard line. After three unsuccessful tries at the Clemson line, which tightened up considerably, Perrin passed over the goal line to Forehand, who came from the midst of Clemson players to spear the ball high in the air. It was a brilliant catch and accounted for P. C.'s score. The try for the extra point went under the bar.

The whistle for the half blew two plays after the kickoff.

Soon after the third period began, Clemson started their only sustained drive of the day and went down to the P. C. five-yard line, where Stephens took the ball over. The try for the extra point failed.

From then on the game was all P. C.'s, the ball staying in Clemson territory nearly all the time. The game ended with the ball on the Tiger 25-yard line.

All the P. C. team comes in for praise. The line played heads-up ball, and especially was this true of the ends. These positions were considered the weakest before the game, but Yearout and Forehand came through in great style. The backfield showed up well, with Perrin and Higbe doing most of the ball carrying and Bolick and McCullough doing splendid blocking. For Clemson, Stephens and Troutman were the outstanding players, both doing some fine work.

Turkish tobacco is packed thousands of tiny leaves to the bale. It averages 400 leaves a pound.

Why—

Tobaccos grown in this country are "seasoned" with tobaccos from Turkey and Greece

THE ANSWER IS VERY SIMPLE:

TOBACCOS to taste right in a cigarette need to be flavored or seasoned just the same as you might season a steak or a pudding.

No tobaccos have ever been found that equal the spicy aromatic tobaccos of Turkey and Greece for this purpose. That's why we send 4000 miles for aromatic tobaccos from Samsoun and Smyrna, Xanthi and Cavalla.

When blended and cross-blended in just the right amounts with Chesterfield's mild ripe Domestic tobaccos, the result is a rich flavor and a fine fragrance.

Chesterfields are seasoned right—they taste right. May we suggest you try them.

PAC-SAC WORK GOES FORWARD

Contracts Let For Printing and Pictures. Art Work Complete. Class Pictures To Be Made Next Week. Staff Announced.

Work on the 1934 PaC-SaC is more advanced now than progress on the yearbook has ever been this early in the fall.

Contracts for printing and photographic work have been let and already a theme for the annual has been worked out, and the art work virtually completed. The taking of individual pictures will be started next Monday and will last one week. B. B. Redmond, editor, has announced that every student must have his picture made during that week if he desires a cut in the 1934 book. The photographer positively will not return to the campus later for individual portraits.

Foote and Davies, of Atlanta, has been awarded the contract for printing and Nichols Studio, of Clinton, will do the photographic work. Both firms held contracts last year. .

Editor Redmond has announced his staff as follows:

Hastings Wyman, senior editor; T. H. Wingate, assistant editor; J. W. Combs, sport editor; A. M. Tommins and Georgia Bee Blakely.

From the junior class: J. M. Seagle, junior editor; C. B. Lawter and D. W. Boggs, photographic editors; K. F. Mills, George Dunlap, Harry Bolick.

Dr. Sam Fulton Visits Campus

The chapel service this morning was conducted by Dr. Samuel P. Fulton, distinguished alumnus of the college.

Dr. Fulton was a member of the second graduating class of this institution and for the past forty-five years has been engaged in missionary work in Japan.

Dr. Darby Fulton, son of Dr. Samuel Fulton, also is an outstanding member of the P. C. alumni body. He was a missionary to Japan for some years, but more recently has been connected with the foreign mission board of the Southern Presbyterian church, of which he is now executive secretary.

Dr. McSween Now Back At Work

Dr. John McSween, who has been ill for some time, returned to his duties as college president this morning and conducted the chapel service.

The college president has been unable to work since the beginning of school, September 12. He has been troubled with laryngitis.

The student body joins with the large circle of friends of Dr. McSween in rejoicing over his recovery.

One Man Is Whole Works

A one-man organization, probably the only one of its kind in existence, was discovered here recently.

C. B. Lawter, ministerial student, is the president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, and the entire membership of the local chapter of Pi Kappa Delta, forensic fraternity.

Every other member of the chapter graduated or failed to return for the present session, leaving Lawter in complete charge.

Rushing Season Almost Over

Silent Period To Begin Tuesday Week. Scholarhip Regulations Are Explained.

With but one week left, rushing season for all fraternities on the campus is drawing to a climax. A number of social functions and entertainments have been the order for the past two weeks.

At the close of the rushing season next Monday, there will be a period of 24 hours, which is called "silent period." During that time the Pan-Hellenic council forbids that any freshman shall be approached on the subject of fraternities. This period is given so that the freshman can really decide what he wants to do.

The number of fraternity men returning to school this year is about the same as usual. Pi Kappa Phi suffered the greatest loss with sixteen men not returning. Kappa Alpha came next with a loss of twelve. Beta Kappa lost ten; Alpha Kappa Pi, eight; Alpha Lambda Tau, six; and Pi Kappa Alpha, four. There are 87 fraternity men back, however, ten more than last year. As the above figures show, some of the frats suffered much more than others.

Rushing season has taken on a new slant this year in face of the ruling of the administration that any man with a scholarship who pledges a fraternity has forty dollars deducted from his scholarship. This ruling is making it necessary for fraternities to go very slowly in their selection of men.

Autumn Tennis Matches Begin

An early season tennis tournament "for fun" starts early this week with twenty upper classmen and six freshmen participating.

This tournament is not to be confused with the annual tournament for the selection of a team to represent the college, which will take place early in the spring. According to E. M. Gregg, tennis daptain, the present tourney is "for fun only."

A champion and consolation winner will be selected in each division.

First round pairings are as follows:

Upper classmen: Tiller vs. Arnold; White vs. Charles; Tommins vs E. Gregg; Harmon vs. Pitman; Potter vs. Calvert; Levi vs. Martin; Adams vs. Hannah; McCutchen vs. Plaxico; Barrett, F. Gregg, Norment and Estes draw byes.

Freshmen: Duckett vs. Daniels; teenberger vs. Bolick. Mann and Crew drew byes.

Play will begin immediately and matches will be run off at the convenience of the participants..

Leadership Frat Holds First Meet

The Blue Key fraternity held its first meeting of the new year at the Clinton hotel last Tuesday evening.

The meeting was in the form of a luncheon and proved a most enjoyable affair.

An informal discussion took place in which plans for the coming year were discussed.

Due to unavoidable circumstances, three of the faculty members were unable to be present at the initial meeting of the fraternity.

Kennedy Gives Views On NRA

Economics Professor Says Congress Must Leave Roosevelt Full In Control.

Dr. J. B. Kennedy, professor of economics and sociology, is of the opinion that the National Recovery Act will work only if congress stays out of the picture.

"The system will work if the next congress will let Mr. Roosevelt alone and not try to take away the powers granted him at the last session," he said.

The only difference beween the system as it is practiced in this county and in communistic Russia is that we are not forced into it but asked to cooperate. Mr. Roosevelt asked the public to join him and it did. We, the public, as well as those at the head of the plan, do not know the outcome. It is, without a doubt, a sure way to secure the desired end, but whether it will work or not depends on the length of time the president is allowed to remain in his role of virtual dictator of the country.

Mr. Pat Hurley, the secretary of war under Hoover, in a statement issued last week urged the people to support the system 100 per. cent. He is the first of the Hoover cabinet members to publicly comment on the NRA. He said, "The economic policies of the president are entitled to co-operative action that transcends partisan policies."

Both parties are supporting the plan. Those that are opposing seem to be politicians, seeking publicity in a new way.

The English are opposed to the plan. They say that they do not believe it will go through.

Large Number Men Out For Band

This year's band is the largest ever to be assembled at Presbyterian college, ten more musicians than last year having joined.

The band is now an entirely separate unit from the R. O. T. C. in general. This means that it no longer forms with the companies or drills with them as it did formerly, but practices and drills by itself under its own officers.

This organization has been gradually improving during the past few years and it is expected that the one this year will be the best the college has had in quite a while. This year the organization is better rounded out than in preceding years. The fact that all of last year's men are back with the exception of one, should not be overlooked when speaking of how much better the band is going to be this year.

A trombone section, which has been lacking heretofore, will feature.

The band is planning on doing some intensive work during the next several weeks in preparation for the homecoming game to be played here with Newberry on November 11.

Elmore To Head Ministerial Club

At a meeting of the Ministerial club last week Leonard Elmore was elected secretary-treasurer of the organization to replace Wiley Narron, who did not return to school.

E. M. Gregg is president of the group, and C. F. McCutchen is vice-president.

GRAFTONS STUDY AND WORK IN LOUISVILLE

C. W. Grafton, assistant professor of English here last year, is now living in Louisville, Ky., where he has a position in the claims department of Booker and Kinnaird, a large Kentucky insurance agency.

Mr. Grafton taught English here during the past two sessions, while Professor Swedenberg was on a leave of absence. He graduated in 1930.

Grafton's brother, Arthur, is also in Louisville. He is practicing law in the offices of Woodward, Hamilton and Hobson. The former instructor came here is attending law school at night, national relations by night speakers.

Corrections

The Wofford-P. C. football game scheduled for October 28 will be played at Spartanburg instead of Clinton.

Through an error the schedule printed in last week's issue of The Blue Stocking, stated that the game was to be played here.

Through an oversight, the tennis team captain was omitted from the student directory last week. E. M. Gregg is captain of this sport.

Glee Club Starts Early Practice

Twenty-one Old Men Report To Dr. Huntley for First Drill. Plan Trip Before Christmas.

The glee club will start intensive practice this week in an efort to have the organization perfected for a tour before the Christmas holidays.

At the first meeting Tuesday night twenty-two new men were present and more are expected to enroll soon. These, together with the old men, will give a membership of about fifty.

Many of these new men should make the club this year, especially those who sing in the second bass and first tenor sections, because of vacancies left by men graduating and failing to return.

The time set for future practices is 7:00 o'clock on Tuesday and Friday evenings. All practices will be held in the college chapel.

Dr. S. M. Huntley, director of the club, stated that the program this year would be one of as much variety as possible. He believes that such a program will be received much better by the audiences than a straight classical or light number program.

H. J. Montgomery explained that work was being started at a date this year much earlier than usual in order to be able to take at least one trip before Christmas. Heretofore the club has taken its time in preparing the program and hit the road sometime after the first semester examinations. This session it will be possible to make an early trip.

Men reporting as candidates for the glee club are as follows:

First tenor: C. M. Hudson, R. W. Forehand, H. J. Montgomery, G. E. Plunkett, R. C. Bolick, H. B. Seawright, G. L. Cleckler, J. Collings.

Second tenor: W. S. Horne, W. F. Guess, E. W. Winn, G. Dunlap, T. P. Valley, J. W. Haney. L. A. McCall, J. P. Charles, J. McCaskill, E. R. Montgomery, W. L. Coe, J. McClary, O. A. Matthews, J. R. McAlpine..

First bass: J. W. Combs, H. S. Odom, J. B. Gibbs, T. T. Upshur, A. P. Wilson, B. M. Folk, J. R. Barringer, A. E. Lake, Jr., H. W. Calvert, Allen Johson, Paul Harman, D. M. Mann.

Second bass: C. R. Johnson, A. M. Tommins, C. W. Graham, B. B. Underwood, T. L. Estes, P. M. Tiller, T. McCutchen, Jr.

First 'Y' Program On Citizenship

Beginning the year with a series of programs on citizenship, the "Y" held its first week-night meeting Thursday to a fair-sized group.

Three members of the student council conducted the program, assisted by Calvert at the piano, and a trumpet-trombone trio of Harman, Robert Clark, and Tommins.

After H. J. Montgomery led in two songs and Frank Carothers read a scripture passage, R. R. Potter spoke briefly of college life as a tension existing between the urge to do wrong against the duty to respect common good.

Campus law is much like the kite string. It may seem to hold the kite down too much, but when the string is loosed, the kite flounders and falls. So with law

J. Walker Combs, chairman of the "Y" program committee, explained the plans for coming programs and stated that topics such as health and international relations by noble speakers.

BLUE HOSE TIE LENOIR RHYNE

Night Game At Hickory Ends In 7-7 Deadlock. Perrin Scores In Last Three Minutes. Bear Forward Line Strong.

Playing their first night game in two years, the Presbyterian College Blue Stockings were at a distinct disadvantage against the Lenoir-Rhyne Bears and failed to show their expected power, allowing the North Carolinians to fight them to a 7-7 tie.

But for a last minute drive, the Blue Hose would have met defeat. Lenoir Rhyne pushed over a touchdown in the third period and made the try for the extra point good. They succeeded in subduing drives by P. C. until the last three minutes. Then, led by Perrin, Higbe and Bolick, P. C. started at the 50-yard line and drove down the field to the 10-yard line, where Perrin broke loose and took the ball over. Horne kicked the extra point and tied the score.

The dew on the ground made the shellacked ball very hard to handle and both teams made numerous fumbles. That and the unexpected strength of the Bear forwards, kept the Hose away from a score in the first half.

The Bears entered the bame as the underdogs, but fought P. C. on even terms during the entire game. Especially good for them were Newton and Padgett. This pass combination chalked up the score for the Bears.

In first downs, P. C. led by a slight margin, ten to eight. A good crowd of two thousand people were out to see the struggle.

Howard To Play P. C. Here Friday

Friday the Presbyterian football team plays its first home game of the season.

Howard university, Birmingham, brings an eleven of which little is known hereabouts to oppose the Blue Stockings next Friday on Johnson field. It is P. C.'s first S. I. A. A. rival of the season and Coach Johnson, who has been confined to bed for some time with a cold and did not accompany the team to Hickory, will be back on the field to direct his players in an effort to turn in a victory over the initial S. I. A. A. foe.

Although little can be learned here of the actual strength of the Howard clan, the result of its recent clash with Auburn points to an eleven of great defensive power. Only by taking advantage of breaks in the final minutes of the game was the Southern Conference eleven enabled to put over two touchdowns and win 19-0.

Howard is an opponent new to the Hosemen and to football fans in this vicinity. A large crowd is expected to attend the contest.

Many New Men Enrolled At P. C.

Presbyterian college enrollment last week reached 283 for the new year's work. Of this number 115 are freshmen and upper-classmen from other colleges, which gives the institution the second largest first-year class in its history.

While South Carolina naturally has the largest number of students, seven states are represented in the student body. This state has 83, Georgia 14, North Carolina 5, Florida 3, Alabama 2, West Virginia 2, Virginia 1.

There are 26 co-eds included in the student body, practically all of these young women being residents of Clinton.

A NEW ATTITUDE

One cannot fail to notice the change that has come in the attitude of the student during the past few years. He has come to regard his college career more as a serious proposition than as a hey-dey of glorious good times. In short, the "devil-may-care" spirit of a past day seems to have disappeared and an intelligent attitude taken its place. Though there is a definite and decided change, we cannot attribute it all to a transition in the student's attitude. The type of person who now comes to college is partially responsible. In a time when it means usually a struggle for anyone to go to college, only the deserving ones go. It is certainly true that the college now presents a student body of more intelligent and serious-minded people than formerly. However, there will always be, no matter how much we change for the better, a few people who are conscious of no thought at all.

Several years back our country was sailing along very nicely on high winds with no signs of an economic storm. But the inevitable happened, and when the storm broke it was nothing short of a calamity. And America became "depression-conscious." Before there seemed to have been a plentiful supply of money, but now it was hard to get. Everything has been affected by the economic strain. Industrial enterprises have fallen through, agriculture has gone to the depths, and colleges have come in for their share. Enrollments have been cut down considerably. Thousands of people have been deprived of college for lack of funds. But many boys and girls who really wanted an education and did not have the means have made the way themselves. And these hardships have made them learn to take full advantage of their opportunities, because these opportunities were hard to get. They have permitted themselves a little intelligent thinking.

Yes, the passage quoted on the present generation has changed its attitude. It sees and considers the dim distance as in the upheaval of the present. The generation is learning that it must take its education seriously. The depression has done a lot of harm, its effect pale as pranks, cards, Bad Bat's give the devil his due and [illegible] made "A" more the desired standard generation."

OUR FACULTY

DR. JOHN H. DAVIS

As I entered one of a conversation between a friend and a freshman here, "Who is that man, and teaching, or what's he?" Instead of the usual answer for newspaper reporting, that idea was born. Then I never asked. I was one of those "in the know" but do they KNOW him? Well, this column is a result of the thought, and Dr. John H. Davis, head of the department of biology in our East section.

Dr. Davis was born near Fayetteville, N. C., in 1901, but was moved soon after to Laurens, S. C., where his father, a Presbyterian minister, was head of an educational institution. From Alabama the family moved back into the valley of Virginia, and from there to Eustis, Fla., where our subject graduated ("without much merit") from high school.

In the fall of 1919 young Davis entered Davidson ,only to drop out a year and a half later, to take up the teaching profession —at a one-man school of seven grades.

In 1921 he again entered Davidson, tis time to complete his work. He received both his B. S. and B. A. degrees at the 1924 commencement, because of special work done at the 1923 University of Chicago summer school. He was a student at the University for the 1924-25 session.

As Davidson began its 1925-26 session, we find on its faculty the name of John H. Davis, B.S., B.A., M.A. In this position he remained four years.

During the summer months he was doing research work among the Black Mountains of North Carolina, and in the summer of 1929 he returned to Chicago to write his thesis on "Vegetation of the Black Mountains." In December of that year he became John H. Davis, B.A., B.S., M.A., Ph.D.

With the beginning of the 1930-31 session of Presbyterian college, Dr. Davis began his work here, as head of the department of biology. His summers are still given over to research, but now among the vegetation of Florida. Dr. Davis has also been collecting valuable geological material for a future P. C. museum.

Since early childhood Dr. Davis has been in contact with educational institutions and so speaks with authority on the matter of the college of "yesterday," and "today."

"Since my college days I have noticed very little change in the ways and customs of colleges," he said. "In fact, almost all of the changes I have noticed have taken place during the past two years. Boys seem to be more serious now. They seem to have grown to realize the value of a broad foundation among many lines, a deeper interest in the everyday events of the newspapers."

"The youth of today are, without a doubt, far better morally than ever before," was his answer to my question on that matter.

It is quite interesting to note the organizations of which Dr. Davis is a member. As an undergraduate he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa; Sigma Upsilon; Gamma Sigma Epsilon (national chemical fraternity); and Theta Upsilon Omega (national social fraternity). As a graduate student he is a member of Sigma Xi (national scientific fraternity); American Association for Advancement of Science; Ecological Society of America; Botanical Society of America, and the South Carolina Academy of Science.

During the summer of 1931 he was married to Miss Emma Adcock, of Orlando, Fla. They have one daughter.

THE SAGA OF AMMONIA SULFIDE or VIRTUE IS ITS OWN REWARD

A CONTINUED STORY
By Frank Johnston

CHAPTER TWO

Synopsis: The courageous and mercenary band, led by old Barium, Swedengraft, and the rascal, Grothelvitch, had begun its journey to Sinbad the Sailor's land of diamonds. They had been at sea for several days when the monotony was broken by the lookout, who let out such a whoop as to frighten even the author out of the few wits he had remaining and to cause him to drop his typewriter in the inkwell.

The typewriter has been fished out of the inkwell and put in good shape by Swedengraft who, besides being an excellent hero, is very handy with a cleaning rag; and now you may go on with the story.

Naturally we were all quite disturbed when this terrible cry broke out. I assure you the lookout had a truly remarkable voice, and he had let out a blast that sounded like a soul in torment. He had a wonderful pair of lungs and that awe-inspiring, ear-splitting shriek, caused cold shivers to run hither and yon. Not both places at the same time, but first hither and then yon.

We dashed out on the deck like bats out of torment, and as she had been aroused from her slumber, little Ammonia looked somewhat of a bat herself, one of those eerie creatures of the dismal darkness who flit about in the blackest night, seeking their prey.

"What manner of noise is this," cried Swedengraft, "why all this hullala, this screaming and wailing?" Beowulf spoke in his most flowery language, because he was a very learned man and it was his custom to exercise his vocabulary and air his knowledge.

"What's wrong," cried old Barium, who was at best a simple soul, having taken a correspondence course in the school of hard knocks.

By this time the lookout, half crazed with fear (the other half being a natural trait), had managed to make his way from the crow's nest and fainted on the quarter deck. Maybe it was the half deck, but the poor chap is now unconscious, so we had better get him out of it.

"Get hold of yourself, old man," said Beowulf. But the chap was too far gone for this, so we had to take hold of him ourselves. We took him down to the captain's cabin and poured a shot of gin and bitters down him. He blinked, sat up, and we could see the demon fear creep back into his eyes.

"Tell us your story, old chap," said old Barium. The lookout gave a great sigh and began.

"When I signed for this voyage I had just finished school where I was known as old Ironhead. I was a mean tackle of no ability—a tackle of no mean ability."

"Now, old man, we are not interested in that," interrupted Grothelvitch. "What was the cause of that foul screaming, those hair-raising screeches and those diabolical yells?"

"Oh, those?"

"Yes, those."

"Well, sir, it's this way. I was seated in the crow's nest peacefully smoking my pipe and thinking of my lost Lenore, who married a home-loving fellow, a steam-mitter, to be exact, and kicked me higher than a kite."

"Go on with your story, you fool," snarled Grothelvitch (pay particular attention to this snarl, for it is the first indication that our Grothelvitch is a fiend incarnate).

"Well," continued the lookout, "I was sitting there looking off into space, having nothing better to gaze into, and I was not doing so well because it was as dark as the proverbial pit. Suddenly, I heard a gentle murmur

"Like the lapping of tiny wavelets upon some some distant strand.

"And each one, gently whispering, as it kissed the sun-warmed sand.

"Excuse me, my friends. my mother said I should have been a poet. It almost broke her heart when I took to the sea, for in my own words

"The sea is a cruel master, and oft times takes the life

"Of those brave souls who gain her gold by tears and worthy strife.

"But to go on with the tale. This gentle murmur had grown louder and was steadily coming nearer. Looking off the port side, I saw a most wondrous sight. There is no other way to describe it—

"A phantom ship, her bare ribs showing, riding the troubled sea.

"And over the waves a mournful voice meant only for me,

" 'Turn back, you fools, while yet you may,

" 'Or you shall not love to see the day.'

"And then the most fiendish face peered through the rubs of the phantom ship and a gruesome hand flung this note at my feet."

With these words our brave lookout, Hawkins, fainted. We pried the note from his hand and read.

WAKE FOREST GETS $85,000 BUILDING

Work has been started at Wake Forest to replace the ruins of Wait Hall with a new $85,000 administration building.

Century-old Wait Hall housed the administrative offices until it was burned on the morning of May 5, 1933.

The modern fire-proof building of oversize red brick and slate roof will contain eleven classrooms, and halls for literary societies and music in addition to offices for college administration.

So round and pure and Fully packed WITH FINE TOBACCOS

"it's toasted"
FOR THROAT PROTECTION—FOR BETTER TASTE

that's why Luckies draw so easily

You've noticed it and you've appreciated the smooth, even-burning quality that is so much a part of Luckies' character . . . Round and pure—fully packed with the world's choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos—and no loose ends. That's why Luckies draw so easily, burn so uniformly.

JOKES

Shimnick: "I am always moved at the sound of music."

Shealy: "Let me play something for you at once."

Coach: "Get in there and fight. Show a little speed."

Reeder: "But, coach, I'm a little stiff."

Coach: "I don't care if you're a big stiff. Get in there and fight."

College senior: "Professor, what would you advise me to read after I have graduated?"

Professor: "I would suggest the 'help wanted' page."

"I hear that Billory is a great bird lover."

"Yes, he does know a lot of foul stories."

"Joe, how is your room heated?"

"By hollerin' down and cussin' Sylvester."

An object in possession seldom retains the same charm that it had in pursuit.—Pliny the Younger.

Billfuzz: "Do you believe a woman is entitled to a man's wages?"

Fishback: "That depends on whether they are married or not."

"Who was it that said 'it takes two to make a quarrel'?"

"I am not sure, but it could not have been a married man."

Diner: "Here's a piece of rubber in my hash."

Waiter: "No doubt. The motor is replacing the horse ever [illegible]."

"Did you know that I have taken up story-writing as a career?"

"No; sold anything yet?"

"Yes, my watch, my saxaphone and my overcoat."

"From what I hear, your wife is a bit of an angel."

"Oh, rather. She's always going up in the air and harping on something or other!"

Suitor: "Er—I—er—am seeking your daughter's hand—or have you any objection, sir?"

Father: "None at all. Take the one that's always in my pocket."

A Question

She: "How many men owe their success in life to their wives?"

"Yes. And how many more men owe their wives to their success in life."

"Special care has been taken in the selection of a staff for the PaC-SaC this year in order to get one that will work," Redmond stated, "and with the proper co-operation of the student body, we expect to make the 1931 book one to be proud of and a credit to the school and the staff."

The theme of the book is being kept secret and the editor smiles and says nothing when questioned concerning details.

KENNEDY GIVES VIEWS ON NRA

Kennedy was hopeful that it will not be found necessary to resort to this method in order to increase purchasing power. The President has already issued statements to the banks to be more lenient with their loans. He does not, however, want them to lend carelessly.

So far the NRA plan has made great progress and if it continues to improve conditions we may not have to resort to inflation after all.

Saturday, Oct. 7—Captain D. H. McFadden, with Sgt. R. M. Perrin as orderly.

There has been a misunderstanding concerning the explanation of absences. The only time an explanation is needed is when a class is missed.

A student does not have to get permission to leave the cmapus when he will not miss any classes.

Of special interest to freshmen and sophomore military men is General Orders No. 9, which was put into effect last fall:

1. The following credits will be given members of the Basic Course who, through effort and efficiency, win and retain advanced ratings in the corps.

a. To those students made Corporals five additional points will be added to their semester grades.

b. To those students made First Class Privates three additional points will be added to their semester grades.

2. To earn the above credit the student must hold the rating at the close of the semester and must have held the rating for at least one month.

"I'd rather be right" _about Cigarettes

Of all the ways in which tobacco is used the cigarette is the mildest form

YOU know, ever since the Indians found out the pleasure of smoking tobacco, there have been many ways of enjoying it.

But of all the ways in which tobacco is used, the cigarette is the mildest form.

Another thing—cigarettes are about the most convenient smoke. All you have to do is strike a match.

Everything that money can buy and everything that science knows about is used to make Chesterfields.

The right home-grown tobaccos—seasoned with just enough aromatic Turkish—are blended and cross-blended the Chesterfield way.

Then the cigarettes are made right—firm, well-filled. Chesterfield uses the right kind of pure cigarette paper.

There are other good cigarettes, of course, but Chesterfield is the cigarette that's milder, the cigarette that tastes better. Chesterfields satisfy—we ask you to try them.

"ALL FOR P. C." P. C. FOR ALL"

VOLUME XV PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE, CLINTON, S. C., OCTOBER 9, 1933 NUMBER 3

MEN CHOOSE VARIED WORK

Everything From Undertaking To Diplomatic Service Picked By Students Here As Life Work.

Vocations which are chosen by the students of P. C. range all the way from the somber job of undertaking to the almost as sad, but more hopeful profession of medicine, according to data recently compiled by the registrar.

Other vocations chosen are: journalism, chemistry, consular service, insurance, pharmacy, banking and social work.

Almost half of the students enrolled are planning to enter one of the four professions: law, the ministry, medicine and teaching. One of the number will combine two professions and become a medical missionary. Five of those studying medicine will take up dentistry.

Two students intend to take up art as a life work, and one is planning a literary career. Two expect to become tobacco growers upon graduation and 122 are undecided upon their life work.

One hundred and sixteen of the two hundred and eighty-five students on the class roll intend to devote their lives to one of the professions. Practically half of this number are preparing themselves for the practice of medicine. Of the fifty-three who are studying medicine, five are taking pre-dental work.

The next most popular choice among the undergraduates is the profession of teaching. Thirty-seven signified their intention to pursue this line of work.

Next in order of popularity comes the ministry. Sixteen students planning to take their place in life as preachers of the gospel. One of these is to be a medical missionary.

Eleven men are studying to become lawyers.

Other lines of work which proved popular are: Journalism, with eight men signed up; the study of English, eight; business, five; chemistry, five.

Art, librarian, textile work, tobacco planting, are each the choice of two men. Banking, commerce, the consular service, public accounting, insurance, literary pursuits, lumbering, pharmacy, salesmanship, secretarial work, scientific research, social work and undertaking will each be taken up by one man. One hundred and twenty-two are undecided as to what life work they will take up.

Honorary Frats To Start Year's Work

All of the eight honorary fraternities on the campus will begin activities soon, the several leaders of the groups announce.

Blue Key, national service fraternity, has already held several business sessions and its first regular monthly luncheon. Other groups have not begun to function for the present session yet, but expect to get underway soon.

Of the eight honorary societies, only six may be called active. They are Gamma Sigma, journalistic; Sigma Upsilon, literary; Chi Beta Phi, scientific; Delta Chi Alpha, religious; International Relations Club and Blue Key. Pi Kappa Delta, forensic; and Lambda Phi Gamma, musical, are one-man affairs and cannot be active until other members are taken in.

The presidents of the honorary fraternities are as follows: Gamma Sigma, J. Walker Combs, Jr.; Sigma Upsilon, H. S. Odom; Chi Beta Phi, T. L. Shinnick; Delta Chi Alpha, V. M. Arnold; I. R. C., C. N. Plowden; Blue Key, R. D. Lynn; Pi Kappa Delta, C. B. Lawter; Lambda Phi Gamma, A. M. Tommins.

The dramatic club, which was active last year, expects to have another good year. Hart Odom is at the head of this organization.

NEW STUDENTS ENROLLED

Lon Belle Neighbors, a senior from Clinton; and W. P. Chalmers, a freshman from East Point, Ga., are recent additions to the student body.

Many Faiths Represented

Eight different denominations are represented in the P. C. student body. Presbyterians, Methodists and Baptists are the most numerous, with the Lutheran, A. R. P., Congregational, and Christain denominations represented.

Only thirteen students are not members of any church.

The representation of the various churches in the student body is as follows: Presbyterians 190, Methodists 36, Baptists 32, Lutheran 7, A. R. P. 4, Episcopal 1, Congregational 1, Christain 1.

New Men Choose Frats This Week

Silent Period Begins Today To Last 24 Hours. Freshmen To Select Lodges Tomorrow.

Rushing season with all its attendant pleasures in the way of socials and smokers comes to an end with the silent period beginning at dinner today and ending at four o'clock Tuesday when the freshmen expecting to pledge to a fraternity meet in Dr. Spencer's classroom.

Freshmen will there hand in on a slip the names of the fraternities they would like to join in order of preference. The faculty commmittee headed by Dr. Spencer will match those slips with the lists handed in by each frat of the men it wishes to pledge, and will post the results on the bulletin board as soon as possible.

Each of the six national fraternities on the campus is expected to pledge a number of the new men. The fraternities represented are: Alpha Tau Omega, Alpha Kappa Pi, Beta Kappa, Kappa Alpha, Pi Kappa Alpha, and Pi Kappa Phi.

While new men are pledged now, they are not actually initiated until mid-winter, and then only if they have passed a satisfactory amount of work. Two E's are sufficient to prevent initiation until after another semester's work has been done.

McMillian Begins Basketball Work

Couch Lonnie McMillian is not wasting any time in getting his basketeers in shape for the coming season. For the past week, all basketball men who are not out for football have been working out regularly in the gym.

Most of the men now working out are sophomores, with a couple of old men reporting along with other men going out for the sport for the first time.

Last year, after rocking through a mediocre schedule, the Blue Hose varsity team was wrecked because of an infraction of training rules, and an entirely new line-up of comparatively inexperienced men finished the season. This year Coach McMillian means to avert a repetition of such a misfortune by having the team in good shape early and with capable reserves on hand.

Many '33 Graduates Are Now Employed

Fifty-three of the sixty men who graduated here last spring now have jobs or are doing graduate work.

Of the men who are working sixteen are teaching, twelve have positions in various businesses. The others are variously employed; some are serving as second lieutenants with the Civilian Conservation Corps; some are salesmen and one is a chemist.

Thirteen men are doing graduate work. Eight of these are studying for the ministry. Barney McLean is at Louisville Seminary and the others are at Union or Columbia. Only one man, so far as could be learned, is studying law. Several are studying medicine, one of them, B. W. Covington, is finishing up his pre-medical course, is finishing up his pre-medical work at his alma mater.

Rothwell Graham, III, is attending the University of Virginia law school.

Seniors To Get Class Cuts Again

Five Absences From Chapel Allowed Each Senior. Announce List of Men Receiving Cuts.

The official list of senior cuts has just been released by the commandant's office.

The rules governing senior cuts will be practically the same as those in effect formerly. Following is an excerpt from the rules of the faculty: "Students will be allowed cuts during their senior year upon the following schedule: for each "B" made during the last semester of his junior year he will be allowed two cuts during the first semester of his senior year; for each "A" made during the last semester of his junior year he will be allowed three cuts during the first semester of his senior year; for each "B" made during the first semester he will be allowed two cuts during the second semester. For each "A" made during the first semester of his senior year he will be allowed three cuts during the second semester. In no case shall he be allowed more than three cuts in any one course during a semester."

An innovation is being made this year in the form of chapel cuts. Each senior is allowed five chapel cuts in addition to his other cuts.

Of great advantage to the members of the graduating class is the ruling that senior cuts do not count double before and after a holiday as do ordinary unexcused cuts. For each class missed due to sickness one free cut will be deducted.

Mrs. Brown, the registrar, stated last week that she thought the senior cuts were a good thing because they spurred the student on to do better work. There are very few times that the student is encouraged by some extra privilege on the campus.

Capt. Wysor, the commandant, is in favor of exempting all seniors who shall make a grade of slightly more than the present standard from examinations in both first and second semesters instead of exempting them from the second semester exams only; and in doing away with the present system of free cuts. He also stated that the records show that the student with the most free cuts very seldom takes many of them, whereas the one with a few cuts always takes most of his.

The free cuts for the seniors for the first semester are as follows:

Georgia Bee Blakely 6, J. W. Combs, Jr. 20, C. W. Copeland 4, Sarah Copeland 15, K. R. Corbett 4, W. H. Cranford 4, M. P. Freeman 5, E. M. Gregg 14, J. W. Haney 7, F. Johnston 10, H. L. Kemp 8, C. M. Students Organize S. S. Class At State Training School

An early morning Sunday School for several groups of children at the State Training School is being held by Dr. F. D. Jones and members of the P. C. student body.

Classes of the inmates are under E. M. Gregg, L. O. Elmore, and C. M. Hudson. E. L. Nelson is to help at the work in general.

Notice

Yearbook pictures will be taken in the Pac-Sac office beginning tomorrow morning at nine o'clock.

Every student is urgently requested to have his picture made as soon as possible since the photographer will be on the campus only one week.

For the information of new students, the Pac-Sac office is located in Spencer hall, the first door on the right as one enters the dormitory from the Plaza.

INJURED

TOLBERT-TACKLE-

Jess Tolbert, who suffered a fractured shoulder in the Howard game Friday. He is expected to be in shape for the Wofford game on October 28.

Freshmen To Play In Columbia Friday

Blue Sox Team of Unknown Strength Gets Initial Test Against Carolina.

The P. C. Freshmen football team is slowly rounding into shape in preparation for their opening game with the Carolina Biddies in Columbia on Friday. The entire squad is thirsting for a victory and the prospects are that the contest will be a good one.

Coach Lonnie McMillian states that because of injuries to several members of the squad it is impossible to give the starting line-up for the game, but that the backs and ends will be comparatively light and the line of moderate weight.

The Carolina freshmen team will average about 160 pounds, with the line slightly heavier than the backfield. At scrimmage last week the Biddies lined up as follows:

First team: left end, Johnson, 170; left tackle, Gaffney, 175; left guard, Roberts, 150; center, Tomlin, 154; right guard, Turner, 158; right tackle, Robelot, 174; right end, Overton, 161; quarterback, Reynolds, 148; halfback, Bargeron, 158; halfback, Jeffcoat, 154; fullback, Derrenbacher, 160.

McSween Talks On Citizenship At 'Y'

Speaking of citizenship at the Thursday night Y meeting, president McSween laid down the ideal relation between student body and faculty. This proper relation, the one P. C. strives to attain must be one of mutual trust, confidence, sympathy, and love, he said.

Dr. McSween first read ten verses of the thirteenth chapter of Romans in the modern-day language of Moffat's translation, commenting that human law required respect for constituted authority.

College is a miniature of real life, he said, and here the authority of the church has been delegated to the trustees, and handed down from trustees to faculty, and by the faculty to the representative student council.

Regulations are few, because the student body is made up so largely of gentlemen of the potential Christian leaders in the world.

"Congenial relationship with the faculty is easy," said the president, "because members of the P. C. faculty were selected for their influence upon college men as well as for their ability to teach."

College citizenship, as he summarized it, is truly successful only if we practice the command of Christ that we "love one another."

HOWARD WINS OVER P. C., 13-0

Passing Attack of Alabamians Proves Undoing of Blue Stocking Eleven. Presbyterian Offense Fails To Click.

Displaying a versatile running and passing attack, the Howard Bulldogs of Birmingham, Ala., outplayed a lighter Presbyterian college team here Friday afternoon on Johnson field and smashed their way to a two-touchdown victory over the Blue Stockings. The score was 13-0.

At the beginning of the game, the two teams seemed to be well-balanced, but early in the first period, after P. C. had made their initial bid for a touchdown, the superiority of the Bulldogs began to show. They were at an advantage during the entire game.

The first Howard touchdown came indirectly from their punting. After several exchanges of kicks, Guttery, for Howard, punted from the 48-yard line and the ball rolled out of bounds on the P. C. half-yard mark. The Blue Hose punt went to the 32-yard line. From there, the Bulldogs began a drive. It was broken up on the P. C. 28-yard line but immediately afterwards they recovered a costly fumble by Perrin. A pass, Guttery to Grant, was good for six yards, and on the next play, Macomber passed to Everett, who stepped over the goal line for the tally. Stewart made the try for the extra point good.

The half ended three plays after the score.

Coming out in the third period, the Blue Stocking fight for a time and played the Bulldogs back on their heels. But the rally was short lived. Howard again worked the ball down the field by superiority in the punting division. Snell this time punted out of bounds on P. C.'s one-yard line. Perrin punted out to Williams, who returned to the 28-yard line. After both teams had had to give up the ball on downs, Ewing passed to Everett, who was stopped on the one-yard line. Ewing then carried the ball over in one try. The kick for the extra point failed.

As the fourth quarter began, Coach Johnson ran in a sophomore backfield. And, surprising enough, they proved to be the only ones who could do anything with Howard's line. But they were not in there long enough to push over a counter.

The P. C. first string backs didn't play their usual standard game. All credit goes to Perrin, who was the mainstay in the Blue Stocking offense. The usually dangerous passing combination of Perrin to Higbe was smothered completely. Not a single completed pass was chalked up to P. C.'s credit. In the line, Robinson and Reeder played fine games, with Robinson particularly outstanding. While he was in the game, he broke through the strong Howard line time and again, throwing the runners for losses.

During the last half of the game,

Estes In Finals Of Tennis Tourney

Out of the twenty men who entered the intramural tennis tournament, Tom Estes is the only man who has yet reached the final bracket on the winning side. On the consolation side of the tournament no matches have as yet been played.

Estes drew a bye for his bracket. Next he won over Norment, 6-2, 6-0. Gregg who defeated Barrett 6-0, 6-0, in the second bracket lost to Estes in the third, 7-9, 6-1, 8-6. In the match the last set was very close.

In several brackets on the winning side of the tournament the contestants have played only a few matches. Those who still are in the running to play Estes for the championship are: McCutchen, Levi, Calvert, Potter, E. M. Gregg, Tiller, Charles, and J. C. White. Some of these players have yet to play their initial match.

In the Freshman tournament Daniel won over Steenberger 6-2, 10-8 to enter the final bracket. The winner of Mann vs. Crew will play Daniel for the championship. No matches have yet been played on the consolation side of the tournament.

THE COLLEGE RACKET

"The college racket" some people call it—this thing of granting scholarships and other inducements to high school students proficient in some special line.

Not so long ago public opinion was aroused against the practice of "subsidizing" college athletics and the granting of athletic scholarships; but until recently nothing has been said of the practice, now prevalent, of giving special inducements to students proficient in other lines. Musicians, orators, and exceptionally bright students now have their prices in the college market.

Whether a scholarship be given for ability in broken field running or for proficiency on the saxaphone, it all amounts to the same thing; and it has now advanced to a point where colleges bid against one another for the patronage of certain students. High school graduates with exceptional ability, if they are wise, sit back and consider offers from several colleges before casting their lot with one of them.

Like any industry, colleges prosper according to the quality of the output. Good raw material results in a good finished product. Therefore, the cry has been, "Get better material—for athletic teams, orchestras, debating teams, etc." The result has been the development of the present system, with the "champions" usually going to the most prosperous institution submitting a bid since a school not a strong financially cannot compete with it, stronger brother.

Times have changed. Formerly, students had to meet certain requirements, scholastic, financial and otherwise in order to enter college; and the student was concern whether he would be accepted to enter the college of his choice. Now the entrance requirements—scholastic, financial and otherwise—are modified to suit the needs of educational students, and all sizes and conditions of men will get three square meals.

Very soon on the campus it will be considered a desirable asset.

That is as near as an intangible something like "P. C. spirit" can be defined: The determination to do the seeming impossible—and doing it.

It is more than doing one's best. It is doing what it takes to succeed. If one's best is not enough, to rise to heights beyond the best, and accomplish the desired end.

WORLD'S STAGE

By Walker Combs, Jr.

After some months of the N. R. A. program, four things have been found by the President's confidential advisers, commonly known as the "Brain Trust." These came out of the discussion completed last week, which was for the purpose "of finding facts, not political excuses," and are, as given in last week's issue of the Sunday New York Times:

1. That the N. R. A. program for industrial recovery has slowed down at the crossroads.

2. That the $3,300,000,000 public works program is not measuring up to anything like the expectations of its sponsors.

3. That the agricultural adjustment program has reached some very critical phases.

4. That the Treasury probably will have to postpone until a more propitious time its purpose of refinancing several billion dollars of Liberty Bonds at lower rates of interest.

Nevertheless to say, these have the administration worried. To remedy it, they are appealing for a further expanse of credit. Private capital, in their estimatoin, is what must come to the rescue if the program inaugurated is to continue at the breakneck speed at which it began.

Whatever may be said of the good that the program has been to the country, it is certain that some of those backing it have as their idea the return to conditions of 1929. The expansion of credit which they suggest will aid tremendously in boosting conditions to that level. But such an artificial, unstable condition as that is not to be desired, in our humble estimation.

That the condition in 1929 was unstable, that it could lead only to one thing, the crash that actually occurred, cannot be denied. Any aim to return to those conditions is not wise. To make such a return would not be progress, but a recession. It would again end in crash.

True Americans never should consider a "return" to prosperity. It should be "on" to prosperity, not back to it. Certain basic institutions upon which we have depended, if they have succeeded in giving the world wonderful periods of plenty, have always followed with depression. These must be changed. Some of them must be done away with, to be superceded by others, more practical, more secure.

And the credit system seems to be one of those things. Of course, there is always need of credit. No progress can be made swiftly without it. But at that time, it must be regulated, it must be controlled. It must not be allowed to return to the abnormal conditions of 1929. The American people must learn to live as they can afford to. They must learn that if they live beyond their means, there will come a time when they hardly possess the means to exist. They must learn that a steady normal existence is better than abnormal conditions fluctuating between plenty and utter destitution.

In general, American people are ultra-conservative. All people are, after a manner, thus. We try to live in the traditional fashion, according to plans which our ancestors found useful. We fail to realize that just as styles of dress used by them are not useful in our day, nor as methods of transportation used by them have been superceded in this modern age, so should our codes, likewise outgrown, be changed for those which would suit our conditions better.

For some unknown reason, these old institutions which we have outgrown are sweet to us. We regard any upheaval rather dubiously. But whether we have the initiative to remedy those things which are wrong (and many are obviously so) they are certain to be transplanted some day by more useful elements. And by changing them as soon as it becomes evident they are needed, much evil may be avoided.

Balanced reading list for the week: "Reinach's Apollo," an illustrated history of art. Very good.

"South Moon Under," by Rawlins. A most unusual novel. Life in the backwoods of Florida. A Book-of-the-Month Club choice this year.

"The Nationalist Program for China," by Chao-Chun Wu, former Chinese ambassador to the United States. An authority on Chinese affairs. The book gives the background of the Manchurian situation.

"Francois Villon," by Lewis. The biography of the vagabond poet of France. This is the hero of the story, "The Vagabond King."

"In Brightest Africa," by Akeley. A travel book by one of the greatest African hunters and explorers. Mr. Akeley is buried in Afria, where he spent most of his life. Most interesting.

"In Abraham's Bosom," by Paul Green. One of the writer's best plays.

"A Wanderer Among Pictures," by Lucas. An interesting study of the art collections of the world.

"Man's Prehistoric Past," by Wilder. A study in the evolution of man.

Christopher Morley

Christopher Morley was born in 1890, the son of the professor of mathematics at Haverford college, in Pennsylvania. There the boy went to school and graduated in 1910. The same year he went to England as a Rhodes scholar to study at Oxford. He wrote his first book, "The Eighth Sin," a collection of verses, in England. In 1913 he embarked on a publishing career at Garden City, New York. During his sojourn of nearly four years he married and published his first novel, "Parnassus On Wheels." For the next few years he did magazine and newspaper work, and had several books printed. The best of Morley as a poet is in, "Chimney-smoke" and "Parson's Pleasure." The best of him as a writer of imaginative prose is in two novels, "Where the Blue Begins," and "Thunder On the Left." Morley is a serious man, with a rich view of sentiment and humor, and the products of his versatile brain are generally amusing and entertaining.

A CONTINUED STORY
By Frank Johnston

Synopsis: Chapter two ended with Ironhead Hawkins, the lookout, falling in a faint at the sight of the ghost ship. As he fell his head struck the mainmast, splitting it evenly. The pieces dangled over the sides to give even balance to the boat.

Chapter Three

We had all gathered around Grothelvitch as he pried the note from the hand of old Ironhead Hawkins, but when he read that terrible message our very blood ran cold. He spoke like one in a dream and we fell back when he read those terrifying words from the grave.

"You are in the land that time forgot—only at the sacrifice of some one of your number who will be allowed to pass thru my empire and to pass on your way." The note was signed by old Sinbad the Sailor himself and naturally we were somewhat put out by such a spoke in our wheels as it were.

We turned to where little Ammonia had been working over the lookout, Hawkins, and found to our amazement (and to the author's delight, since it gets one of the characters out of this story) that the poor chap was dead as a door nail. We didn't know at that time just how dead a door nail was, but it's a beautiful figure of speech and has been used since time immemorial, and so it is good enough to describe the passing of old Ironhead from this vale of tears and sorrow to a better land (maybe).

Since old Ironhead's passing away had given us a free passage thru the land of forgotten men we had no trouble for the next few days or none to speak of. Old Barium got too much of the spirits of 89 in him one day and fell down an open hatch, breaking both legs, but on the whole the next few days were very pleasant. Little Ammonia was not feeling very well since the death of Hawkins because his beautiful poetic feeling had taken quite a hold on our unblushing heroine. She had been confined to her cabin for some time pining away. You have head of a lonesome pine, no doubt, and that was exactly what she was doing, pulling the act of the lonesome pine.

* * * * *

(Those stars denote the passage of two whole weeks. Wonderful indeed is man to make a machine that manufactures stars that make time pass as though it were only a wisp of cloud borne on the wings of the tempest).

On a quiet and peaceful day in the latter part of the month of September we sailed into the port of the little village of Zasrasterlog which, if you look on the map, you will have one h— of a time finding. We tied the Hydrophobia fast and set out in search of a guide to lead us to the village of Golretsarsaz, which was the last point of civilization from which we were to begin our long trek into the interior.

We finally secured a guide, an old Chinaman, Jump-hi, who said he knew the interior like the palm of his hand. This was an exaggeration no doubt, but as he was highly recommended, and we were assured by Jump-hi himself that he was a graduate of the National correspondence school with an M. A. degree in tracking and guiding, we outfitted our safari in three days and set out into the deep and dark unknown.

what makes a cigarette taste better

WHAT makes anything taste better? It's what is in it that makes a thing taste better.

CHESTERFIELDS taste better because we buy ripe tobaccos. These ripe tobaccos are aged two and a half years—thirty months. During this time the tobaccos improve—just like wine improves by ageing.

CHESTERFIELDS taste better because they have the right kind of home-grown tobaccos and Turkish Tobaccos "welded together."

We hope this answers your question.

The presence of the deadly gas came when Brewer, who has charge of the pool, was attempting to regulate the purification mechanism. The chlorine valve was opened two much and Brewer was overcome before he could close it.

Companions in the room shut off the gas and dragged Brewer into the open. Other men in the room were not slightly affected.

Howard Wins Over P. C., 13-0

P. C., led by Quarterman and Williams, made a desperate bid for a touchdown, but the whistle blew with the ball on Howard's 20-yard line.

For Howard, Guttery and Everett played jam-up games. Their defense against P. C. was all that coaches could ask for. The whole team seemed to be in good condition and they certainly lived up to the report that they were plenty dangerous. The fine blocking on end runs made it possible for the strong backs to get away for long gains.

One of the English professors told his class in advanced composition to hand in a theme on the subject, "Distressing Conditions of the Day." Fowler received a note from a co-ed in Bible class asking him to wigg his ears.

He is the ear-wiggling champion of the campus.

When Dr. Brimm called the roll the other day and found that a member of the class was away attending the world series, he said something that sounded suspiciously like, "This is a fine time for anybody to go to baseball game."

CAROLINA TEAM DEFEATS FROSH

7-6 Is Score of First Contest for Presbyterian First Year Men. Blocked Kick Accounts for Biddies' Score. Harvin Hurt.

Today the thirteenth proved an unlucky day for P. C.'s rat team when two blocked kicks enabled the University of South Carolina Biddies to defeat the local eleven by a 7-6 score.

The first blocked kick accounted for Carolina's touchdown in the second quarter when Johnson broke up Thompson's attempted punt and his teammate, Overton, covered the ball in the end zone for a score. In the final period, after Thompson had scored for the Blue Sox on an end run, Tomlin blocked Thompson's try for extra point.

The score was the same as the Carolina-P. C. frosh score in 1931, the last time the two teams met.

Late in the contest, P. C. tried a drop kick from the Carolina 25-yard line. It started squarely between the posts, but curved to the left and missed being a field goal by about eight feet.

J. B. Harvin, of Manning, started at fullback for the Blue Hose, but received a broken nose in the first quarter when he hit the line with his head up and Gaffney met him with a high tackle.

First Period

Gaffney kicked off for the Biddies and Thompson punted back to Carolina territory. Gaffney retaliated with another punt. It sailed high into the air and fell through the arms of a P. C. back calling for a fair catch. Derrenbacher recovered and the ball remained on the P. C. side of the 50-yard line the rest of the opening period.

Just before the quarter ended, Jeffcoat shot a pass to Johnson for 15 yards, putting the ball on the P. C. 22. Score: Carolina 0, P. C. 0.

Second Period

Three plays put the ball on the P. C. 10-yard line with first down and goal to go. Derrenbacher got six yards in two jabs at left tackle, then fumbled on a third line play. There was a scramble and when the dust cleared, P. C. had the ball. Thompson punted on the first play from behind his own goal. Johnson rushed in and blocked the kick and Overton fell on the ball for a touchdown. Jeffcoat kicked from placement for the extra point. Score: Carolina 7, P. C. 0.

Third Period

The game rocked along the third period between the Carolina 20 and the Presbyterian 27 until Bulwinkle recovered a bad Carolina snap from center on the Carolina 18-yard line. A line play advanced the ball two yards, then the quarter ended. Score: Carolina 7, P. C. 0.

Fourth Period

A few plays later, Thompson took a short snap and scooped back. The play was developing similar to the pass plays that had almost accounted for touchdowns. Possible receiver pulled to the left, calling for the ball. Thompson made a circle and went through an opening at right end for a touchdown. Tomlin blocked Thompson's placement in the try for extra point.

Carolina made two first downs on a penalty, but did not threaten the remainder of the game. Jordan blocked Gaffney's punt and Freeman recovered for P. C. on the Carolina 41. A pass from Thompson to Jordan, good for 26 yards, put the visitors on the Carolina 15. Thompson lost six yards at left end and regained two at center. A third play put the ball in position directly in front of the Sims Named Best All-Round Man At Camp. Many Other Honors For P. C. Men.

In keeping with an ancient custom, the Presbyterian college unit was outstanding at the R. O. T. C. camp this summer.

The best all-round man, several first place track men, runners-up in both singles and doubles of tennis, a heavyweight boxing champion and the two second high-scorers in rifle firing were among the P. C. contingent at "Camp Clemson."

At the makeshift camp established at Clemson college at the invitation of Clemson officials when the lack of funds made it necessary to discontinue the camp at Fort McClellan, many difficulties were encountered in providing training. However, it was time well spent; and not a single man who attended the camp would refuse a chance to go back.

Bob Sims, who won the heavyweight boxing title, besides winning the broad jump, tying for first in the high jump and placing in the shot put, was voted by the camp commanders the best all-round man at camp.

Sims won the boxing title by defeating Drafts, of The Citadel, in the finals with a last-round knockout.

As a team, P. C. placed third in the track and field meet. Powell Freeman, Bob Lynn, and Bob Sims scored practically all the points. Freeman won the javelin throw handily. Lynn

Dr. Rhame Speaks At 'Y' Meeting

One of Presbyterian college's own men, Dr. D. O. Rhame, Jr., of Clinton, came back to preach to the student body at the Thursday night "Y" meeting.

In speaking on "Citizenship and Public Health," Dr. Rhame based his remarks on the fact that Christian citizenship centers on us both rights and obligations.

"It is distinctly our obligation," he said, "to care for the health of those unfortunate children whose parents are unable to provide proper food and medical attention.

We, the youth of today, must soon face the problems of public health when we reach our full responsibility." He said that diseases which sap the vitality of the community, such as hookworm and pellagra, must be checked.

Wise public health measures are necessary for the good of society, he declared, some necessities to leadership

Plan Special Train For Citadel Game

Seek Arrangements For 200 To Accept Low Rate Transportation To Charleston Nov. 4.

A movement is on foot to obtain a special train to take students to Charleston November 4 for the Presbyterian-Citadel game.

At a student body meeting last week about three-fourths of the student body signified their intention to attend the game if the train could be secured. As this is written, nothing definite has yet been decided concerning the special as but few men had signed up for the trip.

Meyer Frank, spokesmen for those backing the movement, said that the transportation could be secured at a two dollar per passenger rate if two hundred boys made the trip. This includes transportation to Charleston, leaving here Saturday morning and returning Saturday night after the game. A special admission price to the game could be secured, he said.

At the student body meeting it was brought out that it would be necessary for a holiday to be declared on the day of the game if the quota for the trip was to be secured. At that time it was thought that little trouble would be experienced in obtaining the extra holiday.

A student body petition requesting the holiday has not yet been presented to the faculty; and no official action has been taken. However, several professors have expressed hteir opinions on the matter unofficially and have brought out points which indicate that difficulty will be met in having the petition pass the faculty.

The annual football holiday was taken for the P. C.-Clemson game the first of the season. The only other holidays allowed are for Thanksgiving and Christmas; one day for Thanksgiving and two weeks for Christmas. Any unscheduled holiday would have to be made up on one of the regular holidays.

A day taken from the Christmas period would make the holidays start on Saturday or end on Monday. Either way would be inconvenient, so doubt is felt that the proposition will pass.

If the plan is successful, it is planned to have the college band at the game.

Band To Attend Wofford Game

An announcement came out last week that the band would go to the P. C.-Wofford game in Spartanburg on October 28.

As a reward for the work the members of the band have been doing this year, the college authorities have decided to send them to the game, which is Wofford's home-coming, and one of the maidens on the Blue Hose schedule. The trip will be made by bus.

Council Election For Tomorrow

The election of a junior student councilman to replace F. E. Jordan, who has moved off the campus, will be held tomorrow.

Two men were nominated by the council for the post, but three of them withdrew. The ones still in the race are C. F. McCracken and L. A. McCall. Those nominated, but who withdrew their names are H. S. Odom, A. W. Harrison and F. A. McCrackin.

Sigma Upsilon To Meet Wednesday

This week, Sigma Upsilon, honorary literary society, will holds its first meeting of the year.

The meeting will be held Wednesday night at 7:00 o'clock in Dr. Spencer's Bible room.

All members and pledges are urged to be present at the meeting which is [illegible] undertaken as soon as possible. The [illegible] of the [illegible] H. S. Odom, president; J. W. [illegible], vice-president, and F. A. [illegible], secretary.

TWENTY-SEVEN MEN PLEDGED BY FRATERNITIES ON CAMPUS

One-Fourth of Freshman Class Sign Up With Greek Letter Clubs. Stringent Scholaship Regulations Responsible For Small Number Joining.

Twenty-seven new men are now officially pledged to the six social fraternities on the campus, according to the list published at the end of rushing season last Tuesday.

Each of the Greek-letter orders gained several pledge brothers. Kappa Alpha secured most, with seven. Pi Kappa Alpha tapped five; and three lodges each took four. Those three were Alpha Kappa Pi, Beta Kappa, and Pi Kappa Phi. Alpha Lambda Tau added two.

Pledges are slightly less numerous this year than last, partly because of new scholastic regulations. Fraternity men feel, nevertheless, that they have acquired much valuable timber in this fourth of the freshman class.

Last year, the pledges numbered almost half of the first-year class.

The rules for scholarships, affecting only men who have entered P. C. this year, read to the effect that a substantial reduction will be made in the aid for fraternity men holding other than "valedictorian" or "designated" scholarships.

The fraternities and their new pledges are as follows:

Alpha Kappa Pi: S. B. Campbell, Jr., T. B. A. Jones, J. R. McKee, J. P. Mansfield.

Alpha Lambda Tau: J. L. Dabney, E. E. Stanton.

Beta Kappa: Alan Alexander, E. S. Buchan, M. H. Jacobs, W. H. Poole.

Kappa Alpha: L. W. McLeod, C. L. Moore, W. R. Sims, Jr., J. B. Smith, F. T. Wallace, W. R. Wallace, Jr., J. P. Weeks.

Pi Kappa Alpha: Thomas Barringer, A. C. Daniel, Jr., A. C. McSween, F. W. Oxley, W. O. Poulnot.

Pi Kappa Phi: J. C. Belk, J. A. Kendall, C. W. Wannamaker, Jr.

Pledge Dance November 10

The date for the pledge dance to be given by the Pan-Hellenic council in honor of the new members of the various clubs, has been tentatively set for November 10, according to C. W. Graham, president of the council.

The affair will be held the night following the Home-coming game with Newberry here.

Seniors Excused From Final Exams

Faculty Decides To Continue Present Ruling. Tests Likely To Be Required In Future.

This year's seniors narrowly missed having to take final semester exams and, in all probability, the 1935 graduates will not be so fortunate, it was learned recently in an interview with Dean M. W. Brown.

It was planned to make a change in policy for this year and allow no exemptions; but later the faculty decided allow the present rules to remain in effect, for the present session, at least. Under the schedule now operating, all seniors with a final semester's average of "B" will be excused from the May examinations.

The faculty rules on the exemption of seniors from their final semester exams are as follows:

"Seniors may be excused from final examinations in May in such courses in which they have a grade of "B" or better, and have not missed more than 12½ per cent of the scheduled recitations during the semester. Computing this 12½ per cent, absences incurred by college activities shall be counted one-half.

"Seniors taking required work of the freshman and sophomore years are required to complete all class work and to stand the final examinations in these courses."

Few colleges in the United States are continuing the process of exempting students from examinations, it was learned.

Chi Beta Phi In Initial Meeting

Chi Beta Phi, honorary scientific fraternity, held its initial meeting last Monday night in the science hall.

This fraternity was fortunate this year, as all of the old members returned. They are planning to have several outside speakers this term. The meetings for which speakers will be imported will be open so that the student body at large can take advantage of the opportunity of hearing these men. At the meeting Monday, it was decided to hold future meetings on every other Tuesday night at 7:30 in the science hall.

The officers of the fraternity are: T. L. Shinnick, Jr., president; W. N. White, vice-president; A. P. Wilson, recording secretary; C. E. Carson, corresponding secretary, and J. P. Todd, treasurer.

Thirty Men Go Out For Speaking Club

Starting what bids fair to become a revival of interest in public speaking, thirty men met with Professor Swedenburg and organized last Thursday evening.

H. Wyman was chosen president of the newly organized group, and H. M. Wilson, Jr., vice-president. Cliff Johnson is to act as secretary of the organization.

Weekly meetings are to be held at [illegible] Thursday evenings at [illegible] Kennedy's [illegible]

Many Men Work On Campus Jobs

According to the business manager, 37 men are partially paying their college expenses this year by helping with the work of the college. This figure includes only those who hold working scholarships.

The dining hall claims the greatest number of men out of the 37. Fifteen are working as waiters this year.

Twelve men fill positions as assistants this year. These men are those who help in the library and the laboratories and those who correct papers for the professors.

The [illegible] department gave employment to six men. These are the ones who direct the classes in [illegible], [illegible], [illegible], and [illegible].

Two men are working their way by expenses by serving as mail orderlies. One of these goes down town twice [illegible] and [illegible] to mail while the other puts it in the boxes.

[illegible] we have this year a college carpenter, Sam Hughes, Jr., in his own words, is "the general utility man."

WE EXTEND OUR SYMPATHY

How often we read in newspapers, dailies or weeklies, a local news item somewhat like the following:

"James Blank, of this county, has just been elected president of the senior class at "So-and-So" college. He graduated at the local high school in 19—. He holds many honors at college. He is a member of Kappa Phi social fraternity and of the following honorary fraternities: Blue Key, Sigma Upsilon, Gamma Sigma, and the International Relations club. He is very popular on the campus and is on the publication staff of the college paper.

"While Blank attended the local high school he was president of the student body, and secretary of the Hi-Y club.

"His many friends here will be glad to hear of this most recent honor."

Our editorial heart goes out to the person who has to write this stuff. How he must long to write such an article as his conscience and knowledge tell him to write.

Written according to the dictates of his own feeling, it might read like this:

"James Blank, of this county, has just been elected president of the senior class at "So-and-So" college. (Just why, I do not know). He was given a diploma at the local high school in 19— because he had reached the public school age limit of twenty-one. He has the names of a great many organizations under his name in the annual because it will impress the homefolk.

"Kappa Phi social fraternity pledged him last year because the club was in bad shape financially, and needed new members. He got in Sigma Upsilon, Gamma Sigma, and I. R. C. because his initiation fee was all the societies needed to pay for their club pictures in the annual. He would be a member of Phi Beta Phi and Pi Kappa Delta, but these societies require a certain amount of work before allowing a man to join.

"He is now on the staff of the college paper, although he has never done any work thereon, and he is considered popular on the campus probably because he has no scruples against spending money.

"While Blank attended high school here he was president of the student body and an officer in the Hi-Y club. There were only ten students in the ... as his father were mayor and chief ... of the town.

"Most of his acquaintances here don't give a hoot about his "honors," but I have to say so because the policy of the paper is to please its readers, and to antagonize them. Besides, Blank's father now owns the largest store in town and buy a great deal of advertising space."

Exiled Profs Flee To U. S. Colleges

Eighteen German Professors, Exiled By Hitler, Now Teaching In American Universities.

New York, Oct. 9.—At least eight [illegible] Princeton, N. J.

The New School for Social Research, opened to open this year by Dr. Alvin Johnson as an experiment in higher education without athletics and [illegible] has been [illegible] and signed up Dr. Albert Einstein, famous German scientist, as its first and outstanding faculty member.

The new institution's University in Exile was planned this summer when it became evident that a large number of distinguished German educators [illegible] by Hitler would be available and could be landed to [illegible] the most distinguished faculties a scholarly student could hope to study under.

Here are ten of the fifteen who will make up this faculty: Prof. Max Wertheimer, experimental psychology and philosophy; E. Von Hornbostle, musicology, phychology and ethnology; his son, J. Hornbostle, physics; Frieda Wunderlich, economics and sociology; Karl Brandt, agricultural economics; Emil Lederer, labor and social problems; Gerhard Colm, public finance; Arthur Feiler, international politics; Hermann Kantorowicz, jurisprudence, and Eduard Heimann, economics.

Dr. Johnson asserted that "the University in Exile is not a charitable enterprise," inasmuch as all of the fifteen could have obtained positions elsewhere, many every one having had offers of chairs in universities outside Germany.

Claude Lawson came through with a good race in the quarter when he pulled out of a bad pocket on the back straightaway to come in third.

In tennis Gregg lost only to Boulware, who is Cotton States champion; and Gregg and Copeland lost to Boulware and his partner in the final double match.

In the rifle competition, won by Clemson, J. L. Wilson and E. M. Gregg tied for the second high individual score with 189 out of a possible 200, one point behind the first place winner. P. C.'s team was third in the firing, six points out of first.

Frank Johnston and H. W. Cranford walked away with the "K. P." honors. During a four weeks camp they spent five days working in the kitchen, two more days than anyone else. They "certainly" did their duty the first and last days of the stay.

Davidson and P. C. cooperated in staging one of the numerous dances held. The affair was held almost at the end of the camp and was most enjoyable.

Davidson college won the proficiency cup, given at the end of the camp.

EVERYDAY ASTRONOMY

Venus, the Evening Star.

There are different evening stars at different times in the year. For these fall months it is Venus, the most popular and widely known occasion of great brightness. It will even cast a shadow on a piece of white paper if the sky is sufficiently dark. Incidentally, the so-called Evening "Stars" are not stars at all, but planets; they shine with light reflected from the Sun.

Tonight Venus will set about three hours after the Sun, which means that at Sunset Venus may be seen in the Southwestern sky about 15 degrees from the horizon, measured along the ecliptic.

Although Venus is the closest planet to the Earth (and about the same size) we know very little about it. In fact, we are not sure that we have ever seen it. For Venus is hid under dense clouds, which reflect the sunlight and keeps the planet [illegible] perpetually.

Venus goes through phases like the Moon and they are very interesting to see with the aid of a telescope.

The best time to observe Venus is the instant she is exactly above the spot where the sun went down. Right when you leave the dining hall after supper glance up about 25 degrees almost straight out the Place (a little to the left) and look at this spectacle of the heavens, except the sun and Moon the brightest object in the sky.

PLANS LOOK TO ALUMNI EVENT

Many Former Students To Be On Hand For Homecoming Day Nov. 10. Newberry To Oppose P. C. On Gridiron.

With the event still three weeks away, elaborate arrangements are now being made for the annual Presbyterian college home-coming day here Friday, November 10.

Several hundred alumni and friends of the college are expected to be on hand for the annual Homecoming Day, which features a football contest between P. C. and her nearest neighbor and traditional rival, Newberry College.

In this game a feud of many years standing will be renewed. For as far back as the oldest alumnus can recall athletic rivalry has been keen between the two institutions, and since the college athletic world turned its attention from baseball to football the annual setto between the two has grown to a tradition at each school and supporters of the two teams are always on hand in large numbers when a mixup is scheduled. This year is no exception, and interest is running high, even this early in the season.

The quarterly bulletin of the college has just come off the press and is being mailed to a list of approximately eleven hundred alumni and friends of the college reminding them of the Homecoming and the Alumni Association meeting to be held that day. W. L. Jones, alumni secretary, has charge of the publicity for the event and states that a large crowd is expected. Invitations are being sent with the bulletins for the alumni to take their meals in the college dining hall on that date.

On the night following the game, the annual Pledge Dance, the first social event of the school year, will be held at Copeland Hall.

Efforts are expected to be made by the local Chamber of Commerce to have all merchants in the city to close their places of business for the day in order to allow their employees time off to see the game. Nothing definite has yet been done along this line yet, however.

Eugene Wilson, president of the Alumni Association, has called a meeting of that body to be held immediately after dinner, November 10. At that time the three alumni members of the college Board of Trustees will be elected and new officers of the association chosen. Other officers of the alumni body at present are: W. L. Jones, secretary, and Hugh Eichelberger, treasurer.

Cross-Country Race On P. C. Schedule

Presbyterian college has scheduled a cross-country meet with Furman university and the team has begun practice.

A dozen aspiring track men are working out regularly to get in shape for the jaunt, among them some members of last spring's track squad and a few members of the 1933 freshman team.

The last cross-country team put out here was in 1931. Captained by Turk Osman, this team claimed the state championship by virtue of victories over Carolina and Furman.

Public Speaking Group Holds Meet

The newly-organized public speaking group held its first program of the year Thursday night with about 50 men present. Talks were made by A. M. Tommins, Colin Hudson, and H. Weaman, president of the group.

This body has been organized to provide a place where students may find expression for their thoughts on current questions, as an outlet to the talk, quite a little of which is heard around the campus. The group decided Thursday to hold its meetings at the same time as the regular

Kibler To Play At Pledge Dance

Gordon (Red) Kibler and his Columbia Broadcasting orchestra will play for the annual pledge dance here November 10, the Pan-Hellenic council announced last week.

This orchestra makes its headquarters in Akron, Ohio, and is at present engaged in making a tour of the South, playing for several collegiate events.

Reports from Auburn, where Kibler played recently, say that it is one of the best bands heard there in some time.

Chi Beta Phi Adds Two Profs

Dr. F. D. Jones and Dr. J. H. Davis Become Honorary Members of Local Chapter.

Dr. F. D. Jones, professor of psychology, and Dr. John H. Davis, professor of biology, have been elected to honorary membership in the local, Etta, chapter of Chi Beta Phi, scientific fraternity.

Both men are interested in scientific research, Davis as a biologist and Jones as a phychologist. Dr. Davis is especially interested in the flora and fauna of the Carolinas and is collecting material for a Presbyterian college museum. He has made a special study of vegetation in the North Carolina mountains, the results of which were published in the Journal of the Elisha Mitchel Scientific Society under the title of "Vegetation of the Black Mountains of North Carolina; an Ecological Study."

Dr. Davis is next to the youngest member of the Presbyterian faculty in point of service and Dr. Jones is one of the oldest.

Other local honorary and alumni members of Chi Beta Phi are Dr. T. J. Peake, Prof. H. E. Sturgeon, and Dr. D. O. Rhame, Jr.

At a meeting last week at which Dr. Davis and Dr. Jones were issued bids, it was decided to invite an outside speaker to an open meeting in the near future.

McCall Takes Place On Student Council

L. A. McCall was sworn in as student councilman at the student body meeting Friday morning. He replaces F. E. Jordan, who rooms off the campus this year and is therefore ineligible to serve on the student governing body.

The addition of McCall rounds out the membership of the council, which has been short one man since the opening of school this year. The other members are: R. E. Sims, Jr., (president), H. J. Montgomery, (vice-president), D. W. Boggs, (secretary), W. H. Cranford, T. F. Carothers, R. N. Belk and R. R. Potter. A freshman will be added to this number near the end of the first semester to give a full membership of nine.

McCall is a junior and manager of freshman football and an officer in both Gamma Sigma and Sigma Upsilon. He is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity.

C. F. McCutchen opposed McCall in the race, which was run off Tuesday and Wednesday.

Frosh Selected As Cheer Leaders

R. W. Legare and J. R. McAlpine worked as cheer leader at the Frosh-Citadel game here Saturday. They were elected at a meeting of the freshman class Thursday.

The two will act as cheer leaders at all freshman game, and will serve as assistants to the varsity cheer leaders at varsity contests. Varsity cheer leaders are L. M. Sasser, W. Broad and C. C. Crawford.

Wofford Next Foe Of Hose

Johnson's Team In Good Shape For Contest In Spartanburg Saturday Against Terriers.

The football team settles down today to a week of hard practice in preparation for the Wofford game in Spartanburg Saturday.

After being idle for two successive week-ends, the Blue Hose Saturday will face their fourth foe of the season, the second state team and the second S. I. A. A. opponent. They will be trying to even their average in the S. I. A. A. after their recent defeat by Howard college and keep their state record clean. Clemson, the only other state team played, tied P. C., 6-6.

While the Hose were idle, the Terriers have faced several tough opponents. They lost to Davidson, but managed to lick Lenoir-Rhyne, a team that P. C. tied.

Few changes have been made in the Presbyterian line-up since the Howard game. Jess Tolbert, who was injured in the fracas with the Bulldogs, is getting along all right and expects to be in the game Saturday. No other injuries have been reported.

Rex Wilbanks, sophomore quarter, has been running regularly at this post in scrimmage the past few days, and he is expected to get the job at the signal-calling position in the coming contest. Just who he will replace is not certain. Perrin, alternate captain and regular quarter, is likely to remain in the line-up, probably at a halfback position.

McSween Attend Furman Rites

President To Represent P. C. At Inauguration of Dr. B. E. Geer As Head of Baptist College.

On Saturday Dr. McSween goes to Furman university, Greenville, to represent Presbyterian college at the inauguration of President B. E. Geer as the new head of Furman. The inauguration is to be held the morning of Oct. 28 at the Baptist church. There will be a banquet for the delegates, and in the afternoon Furman plays Mercer at the home-coming game. Dr. McSween will not stay to see the game, though, as Presbyterian and Wofford play on the same day in Spartanburg.

President Geer is well fitted to serve as president of Furman. He graduated from the institution and served for several years as instructor in the English department. Subsequently he entered the cotton manufacturing business.

Dr. Geer was highly thought of by the late J. B. Duke, tobacco and utilities magnate, and it was through his influence that Furman benefitted from the Duke fund.

Dr. Geer succeeds Dr. W. J. McGlothlin as head of the Baptist institution. Dr. McGlothlin, it will be recalled, died from the result of injuries received in an automobile accident near Gastonia, N. C., last spring. Mrs. McGlothlin was killed in the same accident.

Delegates Report On Adger Retreat

The Y. M. C. A. meeting Thursday night was taken up with reports from the association's delegates to the "Y" retreat at Camp Adger.

H. M. Wilson, R. R. Potter and E. L. Nelson were the Presbyterian college delegates to the retreat, which lasted from Saturday through Sunday, October 15, at the mountain camp above Pickens. Each made intresting reports of the conference.

Citadel Cadet Has Operation

J. K. Jackson, a halfback on the Citadel freshman football team, was stricken with an attack of appendicitis here Friday night and was operated on early Saturday.

The emergency operation was performed at the Hays hospital. The patient is still at the hospital and was doing nicely this morning.

Jackson is from Swansea, S. C.

Marks For First Month Published

McSween Urges Men In All Classes To Improve Work. Marks Unusually Low.

Reports on the work of the first school month, ending Saturday, October 15, at Presbyterian college, have just been completed and the results sent home. Only reports of the D's and E's of upper-classmen were sent home. A complete report of the freshman class work was sent to parents.

Reports at the end of the first month show an unusually large number of D's and E's. The freshman class especially has dropped far below the standards of last year's class and registered two-thirds as many again of the bad marks.

The freshmen made 87 instead of last year's 75 D's, and 75 E's as compared to 23 for last year.

Sophomores, however, showed a considerable improvement over those of last session, reducing the D's from 75 to 59, and the E's from 35 to 31.

The junior class made a much lower record this fall, while the seniors improved slightly.

Failures in courses appeared 127 times, almost twice last year's 69, and "conditions" increased 15 to total 197.

President McSween, in chapel, pointed to the purpose of the school as a place of learning. He said that men might take one of three attitudes toward one of these marks: he might consider the case hopeless, he might only make alibis, or he might take it as a challenge to do his best to achieve.

He strongly urged every man to put forth honest effort for the sake of his own future and for the sake of those who have given so much in order that one might [illegible] opportunity.

Levi Wins Campus Tennis Tourney

Last Friday afternoon, Alan Levi defeated Tom Estes in the finals of the campus championship tennis matches.

Levi, after defeating M. E. Gregg, 6-2, 6-3, in the semi-finals, went to the finals and won a decisive victory over Estes, 6-0, 6-0.

In the freshman singles Daniels, after three sets, defeated Crew.

Beginning this week the doubles tournament will be held. The pairings for the first bracket are as follows: Weeks and Norment play Estes and Levi, Tiller and Potter play Harmon and Tommins, Copeland and McCutchen play the Gregg brothers. Pittman and Plaxico drew a bye for the first match, and will play the winner of the match of Copeland and McCutchen vs the Gregg brothers.

"Y" Schedules Are Arranged

The following schedule of men who will conduct the Wednesday chapel programs for the coming month has been announced by the Y. M. C. A. cabinet:

Nov. 1, E. L. Nelson; Nov. 8, H. M. Montgomery; Nov. 15, T. F. Carothers; Nov. 22, C. F. McCutchen.

HOSE FROSH LICK CADETS

Presbyterian First Year Eleven Overwhelms Citadel By 29-0 Count In Second Game of Season. Blue Sox Block Well.

Exhibiting a versatile running and passing attack and an iron-bound defense, the Presbyterian Blue Sox ran over a smaller Citadel eleven for a 29-0 victory on Johnson field Saturday afternoon.

From the beginning of the game, the P. C. frosh showed their superiority, gaining at will. They rushed the Citadel men off their feet from the first kickoff, forcing them back to their own goal line. There the Citadel center made a bad pass and the backfield receiver was thrown by the alert P. C. forwards behind his goal line before he could get under way.

With two points tucked under their belts, the Sox went to work and played the Bull Pups off their feet. The P. C. defense was so strong that Citadel could make only two first downs, both of them coming in the final period. One came as the result of a pass from Hall to Jones, and the other from a 15-yard run by Collier. Other than that, the Citadel attack was entirely ineffective.

The P. C. backfield worked well and efficiently. Abbot was the spark plug of the attack, tearing up the opposing line with off-tackle slants. Oxley showed promise of becoming a fine running back. Every time he carried the ball he made long gains behind good interference. Thompson punted for the Socks, making several good boots. He consistently kicked them out of bounds inside the 20-yard line. The line from end to end played jam-up football. Jordan, former Thornwell end, lived up to his reputation for pass catching. He snagged a 20-yard pass from Thompson and carried it over for a touchdown. Another Thornwell boy, Jacobs, showed up well, making three of P. C.'s touchdowns.

The outstanding defensive man on the Citadel team was Dean, scrappy little center. He broke through several times to smear plays before they got started.

From the looks of the game, the freshman team may develop into as good a combination as the great rat team of '31. The coordination of the line and backfield is shown by the fact that they made twelve first

Studes Of '88 Fought Math Three Years

Freshmen take heart! Unless you can swim in a sea of figures and like it pretty well, you ought to be glad that you live in '33, not the good year '88.

An old catalog from the files has in black and yellow (because the pages are yellow by now) that "there are three classes in mathematics, and all are required to pursue the full course."

Freshmen, sophomores and juniors followed along in algebra, plane and solid geometry, plane and spherical trigonometry, on through "conic sections." Sophomores met class five times a week instead of three.

Many other interesting bits came to light from the yellowed booklets, as "Parents are urgently requested to make arrangements to have their children remain in classes continuously during the year."

No queer rules are in evidence to be laughed at. Lack of many regulations was explained by "preferring to help men govern themselves." This policy of the founder, Dr William Plumer Jacobs, has been carried throughout the years. A few other excerpts are:

"Scholastic year extends from the first Monday in September to the first Friday in July." Six weeks vacation!

". . . the town . . . is remarkably free from pulmonary complaints."

"The roads of the village are of the best."

EVERYDAY ASTRONOMY

Saturn, the Ring-Circled Sphere

Have you ever imagined "seeing stars"? Or have you ever noticed in the funny paper a collection of stars, of various size and shape, to represent a severe knock on the head, or something of that sort? Well, among these distorted representations of celestial bodies there is usually pictured one with rings around it. Perhaps you have thought at times that this was just a comical way to picture stars. But no—not at all, because you were looking at a drawing of one of our largest planets, Saturn. That large sphere, 70,000 miles in diameter, is surrounded by rings—four of them, all lying in the same plane. These make the total diameter from tip to tip 172,600 miles, 21 times the width of the earth.

Of what are these rings composed? There have been various explanations offered. Now they are thought to be millions of small particles revolving as though each were a miniature moon. At the time the planet was formed, it must have been a huge droplet of gas from the sun, then was formed also satellites which began revolving about Saturn in the same manner that the moon goes about the earth. Now, if a satellite gets too close to its planet, inside of what is called the danger-zone, that satellite is broken by gravitational force into small pieces, shattered into little bits. Such must have happened to Saturn. Incidentally, according to astronomers, our moon is gradually nearing the danger-zone of the earth, and when it does we shall have, as Saturn, a band of starry light stretching overhead all night long.

Saturn is [illegible] after dark as an orange-yellow [illegible] in the southern sky. Although a calling telescope [illegible] may be seen as [illegible] of these Saturn is the most interesting of all heavenly bodies, at which once seen, [illegible] be forgot.

CLEMSON CADET CORPS PAYS VISIT TO CAPITAL

In sending over half her corps to Washington for the George Washington university-Clemson game, Clemson took advantage of the opportunity to represent the South at the capital.

General Douglas McArthur, chief of staff of the United States army, allowed them the use of Fort Meyer, where they encamped and prepared their own meals.

Such a trip to Washington was quite a privilege for these members of the largest R. O. T. C. infantry unit in the United States. It would have been worth it at any price, but the whole cost for a cadet was only $6.00.

WITH the ALUMNI

This week for a few minutes we take you back to the doings of the earlier graduates of Presbyterian college. Then we shift to some of the later ones.

Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, of the class of '94, is president of Oglethorpe university, Atlanta, Ga. Dr. Jacobs, as most of us know, is the son of Dr. William Plumer Jacobs, founder of Thornwell orphanage and Presbyterian college.

Dr. W. E. McIlwain, class of '07, is doing a great work for the kingdom of God in Florida. Several years ago Dr. McIlwain built the McIlwain Memorial church in Florida and since its completion has borne most of the expenses. He is active with the home mission board of Florida presbytery.

Dr. S. C. Byrd, class of '89, is now professor of Bible, Queens-Chicora college, Charlotte, N. C. Before the consolidatoin of these colleges, Dr. Byrd was president of Chicora college, Columbia, S. C.

John Bright, '28, is assistant professor at Union Theological seminary, Richmond, Va. Mr. Bright graduated from the seminary in '31, and during the '31-'32 session he held a teaching scholarship. During the summer of '32 he was research assistant to Dr. Kyle at Kirjeth-Sepher.

Claude Pepper, '33, is attending Columbia seminary, Atlanta, Ga.

Barney MacLean, president of the Y. M. C. A. durnig the '32-'33 session, is attending the Louisville seminary, Louisville, Ky.

Randolph Carothers, '32, is working in the supply department of the Springs Cotton mills, Fort Mill. Carothers is also bettering his chances of promotion by taking a course through the Inetrnational Correspondence school.

GAMMA SIGMA TO MEET WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Walker Combs, president of Gamma Sigma, local honorary journalistic fraternity, announces the first meeting of the year to be held this Wednesday at 7 p. m. The administration is anxious that all honorary fraternities become active this year. Combs is planning for Gamma Sigma to get to work and start on some real work for the year.

The officers, in addition to Combs, are: T. H. Wingate, vice-president; L. A. McCall, treasurer.

PI KAPPA DELTA LARGEST FORENSIC FRATERNITY

The local chapter, Beta, South Carolina district, of Pi Kappa Delta was organized nearly ten years ago with five members. Since its organization it has been one of the most active societies on the campus and membership in this club is valued.

Pi Kappa Delta is one of the three national honorary forensic fraternities in the United States. The other two are Delta Sigma Rho and Tau Kappa Alpha. Pi Kappa Delta was organized in 1913. It is now the largest of the three, having an cative chapter roll at present of 140 chapters in 34 states. One of the foundcrs, Prof. E. R. Nichols, of Redlands, California, is still a member of the national council. The headquarters is Greeley, Colorado.

The purpose of the fraternity is to promote interest in public speaking and various forms of debating. Thus the group of men who are interested in this phase of their life are banded together.

The official publication, The Forensic, is published four times a year. Each active member is entitled to the magazine. The total membership of Pi Kappa Delta, May 1, 1933, was 11,700. Nearly 8,700 of these are wearing keys.

The Blue Stocking

"ALL FOR P. C." P. C. FOR ALL"

VOLUME XV PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE, CLINTON, S. C., OCTOBER 30, 1933 NUMBER 6

PAPER REACHES AGE OF FIFTEEN

Blue Stocking Is In Fifteenth Year of Its Existence. Founded In 1919 By Class of '20. C. W. McMurray First Editor.

Now is the time to get out the wood, the tin, brass, china, mud, vegetables or whatever material is used in the celebration of a fifteenth anniversary.

The Blue Stocking this year reaches the age of fifteen. Founded in 1919, the paper has been published every year following up to the present time. The first editor, C. W. McMurray, started the publication as a bi-weekly. Three years later, under the editorship of C. J. Milling, now a psychiatrist at the State hospital in Columbia, the publication date was changed to make it a weekly and a weekly it has remained ever since.

Many stories are told concerning the problems of the early staffs, who worked in the days when sources of campus news were few and far between. One early issue came out, a sheet but slightly smaller than the one now used, with only three news stories on the front page. A three-column streamer head captioned one story and one-column heads on each of the outside columns headed the other articles. In the articles themselves, the author, when he had said all that could be said about the matter, did not stop but set about repeating the whole thing in a novel way, just in order to make sure the article filled the space.

Only two former editors, so far as can be learned here, are now engaged in newspaper work. W. J. Macfarlan, Associated Press writer at Raleigh, N. C., was the paper's head in 1925-'26; and R. S. Latimer, Jr., who edited the "Sock" in 1929, is co-editor of a weekly at Bishopville, S. C.

L. C. Jackson, editor in 1932, is director of publicity at Marion institute, Marion, Alabama.

The list of editors, with their present residences so far as can be determined, is as follows:

1920—C. W. McMurray, pastor of a

Journalism Frat Taps Three Men

Gamma Sigma, journalistic fraternity, offered bids to three new men at its regular meeting Wednesday night.

J. W. Haney, W. F. Guess and A. M. Tommins are the men who were accepted for membership. Guess is from Rock Hill. He is a junior, a member of Sigma Upsilon and The Blue Stocking staff.

Haney is a senior. He is business manager of The Blue Stocking and has been a member of the weekly staff since his freshman year.

Tommins has been a member of The Blue Stocking staff since last year, acting as organizations editor. He is a member of the glee club and of Lambda Phi Gamma, musical fraternity.

It was decided to hold future meetings once a month instead of every two weeks as was done last year. At the next meeting a short program will be given.

Math Professor Visits Alma Mater

Professor A. V. Martin left here Friday morning for Hampden Sidney college, where he attended the homecoming celebration.

Professor Martin graduated from Hampden-Sidney in the class of 1891, and the visit last week was the first home-coming day that he has been on hand for in the forty-odd years since his graduation.

An interesting program has been arranged for the celebration, including an alumni meeting, a football game between Roanoke college and Hampden-Sidney, and addresses by several members of the alumni body. The oldest living alumnus of Hampden-Sidney, now 97 years of age, will also be on the program.

While in Virginia Professor Martin visited his sister and several of his old friends.

Clemson Rats Down Sox By 6-0 Score

Berry Stars In Cadets' Defeat of Presbyterian First-Year Men In Third Contest of Season.

Finishing the game on the small end of a 6-0 score, the Presbyterian freshman eleven went down in defeat before a scrappy Clemson team Friday afternoon on Johnson Field.

The lone tally of the game came in the second quarter after Berry, Clemson quarter, had circled Presbyterian's right end for 23 yards, putting the ball in the 18 yard marker. After two tries at the line had netted two yards, Clemson completed a pass to the four yard line. Lee carried the ball over on a buck through guard. The placement kick for point was wide.

In the first quarter, Lee returned the Blue Sox kick-off to his own thirty-seven yard line and shortly after, Clemson made a first down on line plunges. The rest of the quarter the two teams seemed fairly well matched, the ball staying near the center of the field. Both teams punted frequently.

Early in the second period Gambrell blocked a Clemson kick on their 16 yard stripe, but the rats were unable to take the ball across. Then an attempted Sox pass was intercepted by Lee who raced 70 yards to P. C's 25 yard marker. After the Clemson touchdown Thompson fumbled on his own 16 yard line and Clemson recovered, but the half ended after

Dr. Davis Makes Study In Florida

Dr. J. H. Davis, head of the biology department, spent the summer in southern and central Florida, where he is making a special study of the vegetation. Dr. Davis is preparing for publication a paper on the vegetation of central and southern Florida as related to the climate.

Beside the botanical work, the Presbyterian professor collected fossils and some remains of the mammoths that roamed this continent eons ago.

Dr. Davis brought back an excellent collection of the typical plants. He also collected some of the rare tropical and endemic plants that are found in the Everglades and on the Keys.

The photographic work performed on the expedition is very interesting. The pictures show the various types of vegetation and their growing condition.

CHRISTIAN LEADERSHIP GROUP HOLDS MEETING

Delta Chi Alpha, honorary Christian leadership fraternity held its first meeting of the year last Tuesday night.

Special business matters were taken up and plans were made for carrying on the work of this organization. Last year this fraternity was very active and expects to continue so this year.

The officers are as follows: President, V. M. Arnold; vice-president, C. B. Lawter; secretary, C. F. McCutcheon; treasurer, E. M. Gregg.

Jones Speaks At 'Y' Session

Relations Between Church and State Discussed By Psychology Professor Before Students

"No church has the right to dictate how one is to vote, nor should government interfere with any man's worship," said Dr. F. D. Jones Thursday night in his "Y" talk on "Church and State."

Cliff Johnson opened the "Y" meeting and introduced the speaker. Dr. Jones, at the beginning, read eight verses of Matthew in which Jesus speaks the immortal words that show how church should be with regard to state, the "render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's."

Chuch and state are not unkin in some ways, he said, since they both depend on similar sentiments of loyalty and enthusiasm.

Good citizenship generally coincides with Christian practice, but not always. He said that many able civic leaders were not Christians, unfortunately, and that many pious persons were very poor citizens because they neglected their part in wise government.

"Familiarize yourselves with the true facts of politics," Dr. Jones advised the forty students present. "Much of the dirt-dealing is due to the failure of the average citizen to take a real part."

Religion has at times conflicted with patriotism, and may do so again. The only solution, he stated, is to insist that they be kept separate. "Even in this free America, he concluded, "legislation and public spirit have sometimes been unfair to a small religious group. We must especially guard against this."

Collegian Plans Moving Forward

A magazine of real worth will be issued the student body before the end of the first semester if present plans of The Collegian staff work out as they are expected.

The Collegian is the Presbyterian college literary magazine.

For the first time in several years the magazine will contain advertising. This move was made necessary because of the drastic reduction made in the student activity budget

According to Walker Combs, editor of the magazine, an original cover design and general make-up of the book already has been worked out, and several manuscripts have been turned in.

Any one desiring to hand in work for the publication should do so immediately as all material for the winter edition must be in by November 15. A number of men are trying out under business manager T. B McTeer for position on the business staff.

Hose-Newberry Battle Annually On Grid Since '13

One Break In Nineteen Year Record When P. C. Did Not Put Out Team In 1918.

When the elevens of Presbyterian college and Newberry clash here on Friday, November 10, alumni and fans of both institutions will see one of the most colorful games of the season. Since 1915, P. C. teams, under the able piloting of Coach Walter Johnson, have met Newberry every year but one. Out of the 17 games played, P. C. has emebged victorious in ten to Newberry's five. Two games resulted in ties. Presbyterian put out teams in 1913 and 1914, but Johnson was not then coach.

This year's battle, which is to be the major event of Presbyterian's home-coming day, will be no exception. Both teams are already looking forward to it and priming themselves for the engagement. Alumni are expected from all parts of the two Carolinas and Georgia to see the contest, which will decide whether Indian or Blue Stocking is gridiron supreme.

Many Grads Seek Degrees

Since 1928, seventy graduates of Presbyterian college have gone to other institutions in order to secure higher degrees and to take special training.

Of this number, thirty-two studied for the ministry, fourteen sought the degree of M. D., and twenty-three pursued special study in various lines.

Sixteen of the ministerial students attended Columbia seminary, ten attended Union and three went to Princeton. Erskine seminary, Louisville seminary and the Biblical seminary of New York claim one each.

Huntley Picks Glee Club Men

List of Men Winning Places Is Announced By Huntley. Group May Make Trip Soon.

Last Thursday night at the regular meeting of the Presbyterian college glee club the list of those men who had successfully made the club was read.

The list of the membership was made up by Dr. S. M. Huntley, the director, after individual try-outs and careful consideration of each voice.

The selection of the four men who will compose the quartet this year has not yet been announced. Due to the number out for the quartet this year it is highly possible that the club will have a few numbers on its program which will be rendered by a double quartet. Dr. Huntley is of the opinion that if the progress of the club continues as it has been doing, there is no doubt about the club taking a short trip before Christmas.

The list of men making the club:

First tenors: G. L. Cleckler, J. K. Collins, R. W. Forehand, C. M. Hudson, J. R. McAlpine, III, H. J. Montgomery, G. E. Plunkett.

Second tenors: George Dunlap, W. F. Guess, J. W. Haney, W. S. Horne, L. A. McCall, E. L. Nelson, H. B. Seawright, T. P. Valley, J. P. Weeks, M. E. Winn.

Baritones: J. W. Combs, Jr., B. M. Folk, R. D. Hannah, A. E. Lake, Jr., D. M. Mann, T. M. McCutchen, Jr., H. S. Odom, H. L. McLaurin.

Basses: P. A. Adams, C. W. Graham, C. R. Johnson, T. D. Talmadge, P. M. Tiller, A. M. Tommins, B. B. Underwood, T. T. Upshur, F. T. Wallace.

W. W. Tisdale is pianist.

Student Body To Hear Jones

Dr. F. D. Jones will speak at the regular meeting of Chi Beta Phi, scientific fraternity, in the science lecture room tomorrow night at 7:30.

The meeting will be open to all members of the student body who wish to attend. The speaker has not announced the subject he will use but it will be on a topic of scientific interest.

Dr. Jones, who was recently elected to honorary membership in Chi Beta Phi, is president of the South Carolina Academy of Science.

Literary Frat Adds Several New Men

At a meeting of Sigma Upsilon, literary fraternity, last week three new men were pledged.

The men offered bids were George Dunlap, W. F. Guess and W. I. Nexsen. All three men are juniors. Dunlap and Guess are from Rock Hill, and Nexsen is from Kingstree.

Guess is managing editor of The Blue Stocking and a member of The Collegian staff.

Dunlap was a member of The Blue Stocking staff last year.

Nexsen is on the staff of The Collegian and is the author of several articles that have appeared in the magazine and in The Blue Stocking.

The next meeting of Sigma Upsilon will be held Wednesday night. Hart Odom is president of this group.

HOSE DEFEAT WOFFORD, 26-6

Presbyterians Mar Methodist Home-coming With Smashing Victory Over Terriers Saturday. Yearout Shines for P. C.

Playing in spurts, the Presbyterian Blue Stockings ruined Wofford's home-coming by crushing the Terriers, 26 to 6. Although many penalities marred Presbyterian's play, they had the Methodists completely outclassed during the entire game.

Led by the versatile Wilbanks, former Thornwell player, P. C. opened up with a powerful attack and drove the Terriers back to their 46-yard line. Then Perrin flipped a 20-yard pass to Yearout, right end, who dashed 26 yards for the first score. The try for the extra point went wild.

In the second quarter, the Wofford defense stiffened and the two teams battled on even terms. Then, as the P. C. line proved to be a stone wall, Wofford took to the air. Capt. Sims intercepted a pass and ran to the 15-yard line. After two plays, Higbe, who had just gone in the game for P. C., was put off the field for attempting to kick a Wofford man and P. C. was penalized 45 yards. This penalty stopped the scornig drive.

Coming back in the second half, P. C. kicked off to Wofford, who drove the ball up to mid-field. Here they tried to pass. Perrin intercepted, with the help of some good blocking, raced down the side line for the second touchdown. Wilbanks kicked the goal. A few plays after the kickoff, the Hose got the ball on Wofford's 30-yard line. On the next play, Denny broke off the weak side of the line and outran two Wofford men to the goal line. Horn kicked the goal, giving Presbyterian a 20-0 lead.

Becoming desperate, Wofford opened up with a passing attack that brought the ball down to the P. C. five-yard line. The Blue Stockings held for two downs without giving an inch. On the next play, the forward wall broke through and threw the runner for a two-yard loss. But P. C. was off-side and was penalized two and a half yards. On the next play, Wofford went through for the counter. They missed the try for the extra point.

Wofford soon gained possession of the ball and opened up with passes again. Bouknight faded back and from the midst of several P. C. players, shot one into the flat zone to Anderson, who set out for a 45-yard jaunt. He had two men backing him up and no one in front of him but Yearout, fleet P. C. end, came from across the field to get him on the 10-yard line. A Wofford pass then went over the goal line and P. C. took possession of the ball on the 20-yard stripe. After several intercepted passes on both sides, the Blue Stockings began their only sustained drive of the afternoon and went down to Wofford's 20-yard line. Here Wilbanks heaved a 15-yard pass to Perrin who ran the remaining five yards untouched. The kick for the extra point failed.

The game was filled with penalties on both sides and [illegible] on P. C.'s side, Wilbanks made several fumbles on midfield which would have been disastrous closer to the goal. P. C.

Freshman Does Blue Stocking Art Work

The sketch appearing on the second page of this issue was made by Robert McLees, Presbyterian freshman.

McLees is a native of Clinton and is an interested student of art, has made some very good sketches, and intends to take up sketching as a life work. He has been added to The Blue Stocking staff as art editor and his work will appear in the paper from time to time.

The plate used in printing the sketch is a linoleum cut made by the artist.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1933

This week's nuisance: Professors who seemingly aren't any more interested in the subject they teach than you are.

A TIMELY SUGGESTION

We note that Wofford hears Richard Halliburton lecture this week.

Somehow we can not help but envy the opportunity, and feel as though we are letting it slip by unnoticed. Surely it would be interesting if not educational to listen to the experiences of a man who is world famous as a "globe-trotter," and has written several interesting books on his travels. Such an event could easily take the place of regular chapel, which most of us must admit does not vary a great deal from day to day. This is one of many possibilities, yet no one seems to realize the fact that we do need just this sort of thing to stimulate real interest among the students.

For the past few years our only form of educational entertainment has been occasional outside speakers for the chapel period. But most of them have been of rather local fame, and have represented the same field of activity. One or two have created interest because they happened to be excellent speakers, or orators. We have experienced but few of these, and whether we like to or not we must face the fact that a special chapel speaker has come to mean someone to whom we are compelled to listen. And why should this be? It seems clear that there has not been sufficient stimulus to bring out the interest of the students.

It is a distinct disadvantage to be situated in a town where there are very few if any events which arouse any cultural or intellectual interest. It would seem that it is the duty of the college in giving us a well-rounded education to provide a few worthwhile things that appeal to our intellects, and at the same time are entertaining.

Why could we not have a definite number of events on the college program that would come not merely at chapel periods? Most colleges in the state do follow a system of this sort, and generally succeed in making it worthwhile. There may be objections on the grounds that such a program would require money that the college does not have to expend. But that objection partly loses its force when we consider that there are famous men and women in our own state whom we feel sure would gladly accept an invitation to speak to us, and would probably consider it an honor. We are fortunate in having in South Carolina such men and women as DuBose Heyward, Julia Peterkin, William Watts Ball, and Archibald Rutledge. But has anyone ever considered the possibility of having them make appearances at the school, and that they might prove interesting?

These are merely suggestions, but we feel that they are well-grounded suggestions. —F. G.

THE PLEDGES

The Rubicon has passed over. The die is cast. Freddie Freshman has pledged a fraternity. With a sigh of genuine relief, the campus sinks back to its regular routine.

Freddie has a surprise in store. He will soon discover that the situation is not so Utopian as first glance has led him to believe. Paddles which have collected the dust of weeks will be retrieved from the closet corner. Forced smiles and that air of general geniality will, for the most part, be wrapped carefully and stored away until next year.

With the pinning on of the little button, the pledges of the class of '33 have automatically divided themselves in two groups. The first, which we shall call "the d— nice fellows," is composed of those who have shown the commendable foresight and discrimination to join the group with which we are associated. The second, which due to the merciless starkness of the written word, we can give no name, is made up of those who decided that they liked another group a little better.

Thus are campus cliques made. It is regrettable, perhaps, but it is also natural and inevitable. For it all reverts to that old psychological theory of the in-group versus the out-group.

Perhaps there is some collegiate Utopia where this is not the case. It is barely possible that somewhere there is an entire college group living in perfect harmony pervaded by a general atmosphere of "sweetness and light." We say perhaps this is true. But, if so, we feel it quite safe to say that these students are not normal human beings. They have mounted to another plane, and are now "little less than the angels." —W. N.

The sterilization laws of Germany go into effect January 1, 1934. This is one of the greatest helps ever given to human advancement. But suppose the Hitler forces decide to use this power to lessen the number of their enemies? Even a good thing can be used for an evil purpose.

A NEW WORD

President Roosevelt used it twice, and the word "chiseler" became a full-fledged addition to the heterogenous American language.

To some wary souls that may indicate that the chief executive is quite overstepping his authority, even as a dictator. But to us it merely means that the President has an influence over the lexicographers that the rest of us have not.

Since the eighteenth century the word "chiseler" has been used regularly as a synonym for "cheat," but all the world, using the word millions of times over for a century or two, could not force dictionary compilers to include it in their snooty volumes. Mr. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, using the same word twice in a single speech, persuaded the word-list manufacturers that it should be done.

That is power with a capital "P."

We notice the juniors proudly strutting their newly acquired chevrons even if some of them are a wee bit "staunchwise." Some freshmen can sew better than others.

A sure sign that the time is at hand when club panels in the year book are to be paid for: Honorary fraternities begin issuing bids.

WORLD'S STAGE

By Walker Combs, Jr.

Not nearly so much space in the newspapers today is given to France as to Germany, but in view of the fact that most of Hitler's oratory is directed against France, it seems necessary at least to deal with their part in the world crisis now threatened.

Following the Franco-Prussian war, France lived for the "Revenge." Armed to the teeth, when Germany began the march on Paris, they hurled themselves against the foe. It is true that Germany made the first move, but France, though not equally culpable, was partially responsible in view of the maze of alliances which she had built around herself. At last they had gained the opportunity of revenging themselves for the humiliating defeat of 1871. We cannot blame the French to a great extent; no nation is willing to live under the smudge of humiliating defeat.

But, with victory, France seemed to be intoxicated. Hers was the opportunity of putting an end to these petty rivalries; hers was the chance of being magnanimous, of bringing the two nations who had been at sword's points so many years together. But nothing of the sort characterized her actions. Spurred on by a populace keyed to the highest emotional pitch, blaming the Germans with all the evils of the system, her leaders demanded their pound of flesh. Nor did they stop with the pound of flesh. Besides pinning on the Germans the cost of all destruction in France, of putting all the cost of war on the defeated, she stripped the Reich of all its colonies, of some of its most valuable districts within the country, and surrounded it with newly constructed states with French affiliations. Indeed, they owed their very life to France.

Such was the first mistake. Germany, rid of her most important mining districts, of some very rich colonies, was expected to pay the heaviest indemnity ever levied against a defeated power. Her trade was restricted; she was blamed for the entire war; humiliated, beaten down, she was forced to accept all France's proposals. Nor was this all. When, a few years later, Germany defaulted a few thousands of her indemnity, after paying by far the greater part of it, France moved her armies into the territory, occupied the Ruhr, and brought on some of the most dire economic conditions ever to face the German peoples.

After that, if France had desired to take a more lenient attitude toward the defeated, she found the way hard indeed. Nothing could be done, without Germany clamoring for still greater equality. So it has been for the last half dozen years. Their initial mistake has involved them in a series of bickerings with Germany, accompanied by a growing unrest in the German Reich which has naturally frightened the French. In her desire to maintain the supremacy, she has overstepped the bounds; she has failed to realize the results in the attitude of their neighbor. To say the least, France's policy has lacked any semblance of magnanimity.

Now, though armed to the limit, she seems to have no desire for war; her policy may lead her into one. Her reaction to Germany is one of fear. France has nothing to cope with the zealous youth of "new" Germany. She sees probably more clearly now the real character of the situation, and during the last several weeks, has appeared to change her attitude.

It was surprising to note with what calmness she accepted news of Germany's withdraw from the League of Nations. Although the press, which has the habit of being more brilliant and thoughtful, has been less virulent on the question than usual, it reveals a self-control that would have been the salvation of the world in 1918.

Her position now is extremely difficult. In the past she has had great resources in dealing with matters affecting her own welfare, and to be hoped that she can show the measure of the same in dealing with the world situation. Now, the welfare of the world is her own welfare, requires great leaders, a great people. Her decisions must be most careful

CHAPTER SIX

Jump-hi had grasped the Zretilouby tree with such an iron grip that it took us the better part of an hour to loose him. I have seen fear portrayed in many different parts of the world but none could begin to compare with the fear that now possessed Jump-hi, who had proven himself time and time again to be a very brave man. Now he was trembling from head to foot and back again from foot to head, and not the gentle tremors of a fright man shook him, but he was heaving and pitching like Madame Fifi in the midst of her wildest cooch dance. Now, as I have already intimated, Jump-hi was a brave man, and to see him gripped by such an overpowernig, awe-inspiring fear gave us all something to think about. Surely his fears were not groundless.

Then Jump-hi spoke again. "If we value our lives, we must turn back."

"Turn back—never," cried old Barium. "Nothing ventured, nothing gained. Millions for defense but not one cent for tyranny." By this time he was lost in his own eloquence and was forced to stop for breath.

"Why should we turn back, Jump-hi?" asked Grothelvitch, who was by far the most collected of our grop.

"Because if we enter the valley yonder we shall be set upon by the dreadful men who walk on four feet."

"Let 'em set," snarled Grothelvitch, "they don't come too heavy for me. Why, I have been set upon by the best people on both sides of the globe and as yet no harm has come to me."

"But these men are fiends incarnate. They kill, burn at the stake, and have tortures that far exceed in cruelty the death of a thousand deaths of the old Chinese. They will outdo themselves to devise some horrible torture from which we cannot escape."

"Aw, tut-tut, who's afraid of ths big bad wolf," laughed simple little Ammonia, and she set off, skipping lightly thru the jungle, no small task; but she was a most stupendous skipper and underbrush was nothing to her. We followed as best we could and finally came up to where she had stopped.

"Well, Jump-hi, are you fer us or agin us?" asked old Barium.

Jump-hi, who did not want to play the coward for little Ammonia, spoke up in his best form, "I'm for you till the cows come winding o'er the lee and the plodman homeward plows his weary way."

"Fine! On to victory!" cried old Barium as he fell over his left foot and broke his neck (@:95::35) (meaning another character gone and the load that is lifted from the author's organ that serves him as a mind is 534,218 odd lbs).

Of course we were grief stricken over the old chap's death. (That's what you think—for now there was one less to share in the fortune) and declared a five-minute recess while we threw his body to the lions, who ate him with great relish for he was a juicy morsel.

Little Ammonia laughed when she saw the old man was dead. "He was a good enough man in his way, but he was a tightwad and had spoken of cutting my allowance, so everything has turned out for the best." When we saw the attitude she took toward his death we pressed on and that night we pitched our camp among the foothills of the Asxzertwyies and planned for the final leg of our journey.

We were all plotting together over our little table in the mess tent when one of the natives we had posted as sentinels came running into the tent—

Present Day Science

Have you ever wondered how stellar properties are found; how weights and distances of heavenly bodies so far away are measured? It appears at first to be a stupendous task and tedious work to acquire such information, because we are dealing with objects from a great distance, and calculations should necessarily be more difficult. Actually, however, it isn't as hard as it seems. The first thing to do is to photograph the star, in order that the color may be found accurately. On a photographic plate various colors show up differently. Blue, for example, appears brighter than red, even though red may be brighter. You know, of course, that as a piece of iron is heated it turns red and then white. Each color represents a definite temperature. Therefore when we have the exact color of a star, we know its temperature. Knowing that, we calculate the radiation and luminosity, or brightness.

A large number of our stars are double, or binary, and revolve around each other. Using the law of gravitation in such systems, we determine the mass, or weight, and with instruments measure the brightness. In this way, Eddington has found a definite relation between mass and luminosity which may be used for any star.

Now, when from the color of the star we have found its luminosity, we get the weight directly from Eddington's mass-luminosity law. This is very important in astronomy because it saves a tremendous amount of work that was necessary in previous methods of measurement.

Some weeks ago we saw a newspaper article which gave an account of energy being turned into matter. Since then we have seen no additional information. It is a continuous occurrence for matter to be turned into energy. This process, called the annihilation of matter, is exemplified in the light and heat we receive from the sun. But the turning of energy into matter, if proved, would revolutionize our scientific, religious, and philosophical views.

A vacuum thermocouple is an instrument for measuring amount of heat. Used with the Hooker telescope it is sensitive enough to detect the heat of a candle 120 miles away.

HOSE DEFEAT WOFFORD, 26-6

drew 115 yards in penalties and Wofford 65. P. C.'s total was greatly increased by the one penalty of 45 yards.

The play at end of Paul Yearout, fleet track man, gave the P. C. rooters much to talk about. His offensive and defensive games were jam-up. He looks to be all-state material. His running down of a Wofford man on the 10-yard line was the most spectacular play of the game.

Although the Blue Hose rolled up a big score, the team did not click the way they did against Clemson. It was only surprise plays and their alertness against passes that enabled them to score. The plays through the line didn't work at all. Only in the last period when Bolick opened up and began tearing off gains through the line, did the team look like they did in the first game of the season.

Wofford showed the effects of a hard schedule. They didn't have any pep and couldn't get the offense, which showed up against Davidson, going. This was mostly due to the alert play of the P. C. linesmen who completely swamped the Wofford running attack. For the Terriers, Bouknight and Anderson were the outstanding players.

they had taken the ball to the 12 yard line.

As the result of a bad kick, the Blue Sox took possession of the ball in the first of the third quarter on Clemson's 27 and plunged the line to the 12. Here an attempted pass was knocked down by the Clemson secondary and the ball went over.

In the fourth period the rats started a determined drive that only ended after they had made five first downs. Clemson punted and the game ended with the Blue Sox in possession of the ball on their own 25 yard line.

The entire P. C. team played good ball but lacked the co-ordination and power it exhibited in the Citadel game.

For Clemson, Lewis, at center, and Lawton and Berry backs, were outstanding.

HOMECOMING DAY HERE FRIDAY, NOV. 10

The Blue Stocking

"ALL FOR P. C." P. C. FOR ALL"

VOLUME XV PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE, CLINTON, S. C., NOVEMBER 6, 1933 NUMBER 7

ALUMNI PLAN BIG GATHERING

Former P. C. Men To Return To Meet and Enjoy Football, Race and Dance. Association Has Important Business.

This Friday, November 10, hundreds of Presbyterian college alumni from all over the South, particularly North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, will gather in Clinton for the annual home-coming celebration.

A full program is scheduled for the occasion, with the traditional football tussle between Newberry and P. C. heading the list. Beginning with luncheon in Judd dining hall for the alumni as guests of the college, and ending with the annual pledge dance at Copeland hall that night, activity enough to suit the most ambitious visitor is promised.

After luncheon, a meeting of the Alumni association is to be held in the college chapel. The meeting will conclude in time for those attending to see the P. C.-Newberry game, and the cross-country race between P. C. and Furman.

At the meeting of the Alumni association the most important business to be taken up is the election of the three alumni members of the Presbyterian college board of trustees. Also, new officers for the association are to be elected; and plans are to be discussed for a more unified functioning of the alumni body. The present officers are Rev. Eugene Wilson, president; W. L. Jones, secretary, and H. L. Eichelberger, treasurer.

A gala time is expected, with the campus being turned over to the alumni, and the town taking on a holiday spirit. With decorated stands, stirring band music and lusty cheering, a true holiday spirit is assured, in which the old grads will revel.

The real feature of the day for most of the visitors will be the football game between the Blue Stockings and the Indians. Many will see the game who will not attend the other functions of the day, and go away feeling satisfied. Newberry is an old rival of P. C. and every contest between the two is of great interest to supporters of both teams.

Last year the two teams played to a seven-all tie in Newberry, and both squads have been pointing to this battle.

It will be the first time in many years that a Presbyterian college home-coming day falls on Friday. It is believed that more people will be enabled to attend because of the fact that it comes on Friday rather than Saturday, since, for many, Saturday is a busy day. Business firms of Clinton will close down in the afternoon in order to give their employees time to see the game.

I. R. C. Men Talk World Affairs

"The Significance of Germany's Withdrawal From the League," and "America's Recognition of Soviet Russia" will be the topics of talks to be given next Wednesday night at the meeting of the International Relations club. J. Walker Combs and Venable Martin will be the speakers at the meeting.

Among other things, the club will discuss the sending of delegates to the fifth Model League of Nations assembly, to be held at Winthrop college, December 8-9. It is probable that the club here will send a delegation to the meeting this year as it did last.

In a letter to the president of the college from the secretary of the Model League, it was stated that the P. C. delegation last year at the assembly was one of the outstanding groups there. The club on the campus was also urged to send another group to the Model League this year.

The local I. R. C. meets every second and fourth Wednesday at 7 p. m. in Dr. Spencer's class room. The officers of the club are: C. N. Plowden, president; J. W. Combs, vice-president; Bob Sims, secretary.

Pledge Dance For Homecoming Day

Many Visitors Expected At Entertainment For New Pledges. Kibler Furnishes Music.

The annual pledge dance, given by the Pan-Hellenic council in honor of the new fraternity pledges, will be held on home-coming day, November 10, at Copeland hall, with Gordon ("Red") Kibler playing. This is one of the outstanding social events of Southern collegiate circles. The Pan-Hellenic dances are always attended by a large crowd and this one promises to be no exception.

Many bids have been extended and as this is the first dance to be given here this year a large number of visitors are expected. Mrs. J. H. Hunter, president of "The College Dames," is making arrangements to take care of

New Men For Weekly Staff

Three new men have been added to the staff of The Blue Stocking in the past two weeks. They are F. S. Love, J. E. Patrick and Robert McLees, all freshmen.

Love has been named freshman sports editor; Patrick, exchange editor, and McLees to the newly-created post of art editor.

These men have each completed the amount of work necessary before a man can gain a position on the staff. Other members of the Reporters' club have finished part of the work and will be added to the staff as vacancies occur after they have completed the work.

Any other student, either freshman or upper-classman, who wishes to try out for a staff position may do so by applying to the editor.

Gresham Takes Missions Place

Well-Known Graduate Leaves Pastorate In Savannah For Mission Work At Asheville.

Rev. Paul N. Gresham, who for the past five years has held the pastorate of the First Presbyterian church of Savannah, Ga., has given up his work in that city in order to take up home mission work in Asheville, N. C.

Mr. Gresham graduated from Presbyterian college in 1915. Upon graduating from Union Theological seminary, Richmond, Va., he at once started work in West Asheville, where he spent ten years in organization and building of the West Asheville church.

One of the final acts of Mr. Gresham before leaving Savannah will be the dedication of the Presbyterian mission in Avondale, which was established during his pastorate. Two and a half years ago, with the help of two ardent and church-loving workers, a Sunday school was started at Avondale. Through the never tiring efforts and generosity of friends, they now have a modern building, capable of meeting every need of the people of Avondale.

Many expressions of regret were heard in Savannah Sunday when it was definitely learned that Mr. Gresham had decided to go to Asheville. Mr. Gresham said that he did not seek the call, but that the work was a challenge which he could not resist. Five years ago he saw the opportunity but the way was not then open to begin. Today the call to take up the work in Asheville is as clear to him as the call of the Apostle Paul to go into Macedonia and he feels that he must heed, he says.

A Savannah paper expressed its appreciation of Mr. Gresham and his work in a half-column editorial on the day that the news of his departure was announced.

Indian Invasion Comes Friday

Blue Stockings Ready To Stop Powerful Newberry Eleven On Homecoming Day.

After taking the part of the visiting team in two home-coming contests, the Presbyterian college football men settle down to work here today in preparation for their third home-coming game in as many weeks. This tussle, which will be the Calvinists own home-coming, will be with Newberry college.

With victories already chalked up over two state foes, the Blue Stockings are hopeful of keeping the slate clean in Friday's game. The squad is in excellent shape except for a slight weariness resultant from the Charleston trip and some scattered bruises.

The men on the injured list before

Papooses Defend Against Frosh

With one victory and two defeats to their credit, the Presbyterian freshman team journeys to Newberry for a contest with the Papooses Thursday, one day before their big brothers do battle in Clinton, in an effort to make the count two victories and two defeats.

The Sox have undergone several stiff scrimmages with the varsity during the past week and have shown up well. With the exception of several minor injuries, the team came out of the Clemson game in fairly good condition. It is thought that Atwell, who is suffering from a leg injury, will be able to play Thursday.

Little is known here of the strength of the Newberry rat team, but from all appearances, the struggle will be a hard one.

Approaching Battle With Indians Brings To Mind Diamond Argument When Baseball Was King Sport; Dillard Starts Action In Classic By Use Of Broom

(Editor's note: In recent years, the outcroppings of fiery disputes such as the one described below have ceased. They are recalled by the participants on both sides as amusing incidents that revive pleasant memories. The spirit that caused the free-for-alls is missing from both schools today; but the spirit that makes every athletic contest between the two a clean, hard-fought battle to the finish is still in evidence).

The approaching struggle between the Blue Hose and the Indians recalls clashes in sport between the two in a less friendly spirit, a score of years ago. Although, fortunately, time has now worn the sharp edges from the rivalry, many of the older alumni remember the frequent free-for-alls and sulphureous words which in their day characterized meetings between Newberry and Presbyterian colleges.

One of the most notable of these outbreaks took place on a warm, spring day, when Newberry met P. C. with ball and bat in a cleared field where now streaches the well-kept athletic field.

The rough boards, full of splinters, truthfully called 'bleachers,' were crowded with spectators. On the opposite side of the field, the trees at the edge of the clearing were studded with Negroes and non-paying fans.

How the score stood has been forgotten, but at least it is known that the score usually was wildly unbalanced, with Newberry at the heavy end.

The coach of the Indians, Tinch Boozer, sat upon the edge of the visitors' bench. Behind him stood our well-known citizen, Larry Dillard, in whose hands was clasped the wire-bound broom with which he darted out after each player had slid in, triumphant, in a cloud of dust, to sweep off the home plate.

P. C. was at bat. Shortstop McCutchen sent the ball soaring over centerfield, and loped towards first base. There he met the cleats of First Baseman Black (perhaps intentionally on Black's part—more than likely not). Anyway, down fell McCutchen.

CADETS BOW TO HOSEMEN BY 7-6

Belated Drive In Fourth Quarter Wins Contest For Presbyterians. Higbe and Perrin Lead Offense. Reeder Shines Defensively.

The Presbyterian college football team barely managed to eke out a 7-6 victory over The Citadel on a wet field in Charleston Saturday.

Both teams scored in the final quarter. The Citadel counted from the 16-yard stripe three plays after the fourth period began. Their try for the extra point was blocked by Bob Reeder, Blue Hose center.

Shortly afterwards, the Calvinists, led by Perrin and Higbe, began a drive which carried them to the six-yard line. Then Higbe scored on a dash around right end.

The try for extra point, made by Bill Horne from placement, soared directly between the uprights to give the Blue Stockings a one-point advantage and the ball game.

The victory gives P. C. a season's record of two wins, no losses and one tie within the state.

Captain Sims was a great defensive player for the winners, as was Yearout at end. Symmes, Drafts and Quarterman were stars Citadel defenders with Ferguson the best ground-gainer.

After one scoring threat in the first half had failed, the Cadets made good on their next chance. Starting a drive late in the third quarter, they marched from P. C.'s 48 to the 16-yard mark, when the period ended. Two line plays by Ferguson gained four yards and Quarterman passed to Faulkner at the goal line for the score. The try for point was blocked by Reeder.

A few minutes later Higbe started the Blue Stocking's scoring march by a 25-yard punt return. On fourth down, Perrin, on what was to have been a pass, elected to run and raced around his left end 21 yards to place the ball on Citdael's six-yard mark. Higbe then gained the promised land with a dazzling jaunt around his right end.

The Citadel made nine first downs to four for Presbyterian.

This week's nuisance: One-track mind students whose sun rises and sets in the narrow confines of their fraternity.

A LIBERAL ARTS COLLEGE

This is a liberal arts college or, at least one is led to suspect that it is from a glance at the catalog. If this college is devoted to the liberal arts, what does the term imply? The liberal arts are the courses which were originally intended to give the student culture as well as pure knowledge. They are what are supposed to make up higher learning. Their worthwhile aim is to ground the student in well-balanced learning, and to help him to cope with the world. The essentials of the liberal arts are: the languages, the social sciences, and the pure sciences. Therefore the college, calling itself a liberal arts college, has as its ultimate aim the guidance of the student tto higher learning.

Having the aim of the liberal arts college well in mind, we take a look at its other interests. Football is an event of prime importance. Hours are devoted to practice and several thousand dollars are spent each year in behalf of this wholesome, body-building game. At other things must be laid aside for a football game. Classes must be suspended. The whole student body must turn out en masse to insure the college spirit and do a lot of yelling and "meeting." When football is on the wane on the campus you can be assured that another sport is. After the football season is over basketball, boxing, wrestling, tennis, and baseball follow in rapid succession. And people will ask, "Why, without athletics what would the college do? It would lose its reputation." And the [illegible] the Liberal Arts college [illegible] and more [illegible] and offer [illegible] places. They bring [illegible] the gate, and money [illegible] a move to [illegible].

[illegible] Football, we have the R. O. T. C. and the student [illegible] ... and to train him obedience to a country. It is as an auxiliary agency to the preparing of men for potential [illegible] in case of a war. The student of the liberal arts college must not only be athletic, but he must be military.

And so with our college a liberal arts college. But how much interest do we display, how much effort do we place on the encouragement of the liberal arts?

[illegible] the recently passed faculty ruling was evidently intended to [illegible] does, we suggest that a penalty be substituted for suspension in the punishment of first offenders.

CAMPUS ORGANIZATIONS

[illegible] which have only recently taken such an important place on the college and university campus.

Those who would banish these organizations contend that the college student should spend four years in an educational environment for the specific purpose of excelling in the prescribed work for which they merit. They disregard the campus organizations as a source of gaining more knowledge, and consider it as one of a number of attractions which divert the student from the main purpose of education.

The literary, journalistic, scientific, forensic, social, and other types of organizations hold a definite and indispensable position in the college. The student belonging to one, two, or three of these societies comes in contact with broad fields of interest which are represented in their studies and activities. Students who are successful in a special field of activity are chosen by some organization whose main purpose is to promote such interest. There is no doubt that students belonging to this same organization will find inspiration and instruction from this type of group association.

Experience in dealing with one's fellow students is the foremost need of the man who comes to college. The gaining of knowldge is secondary to the making of proper adjustments in social life. Activities requiring constant association and cooperation with others occur in all organizations. The benefit derived from a contact of this nature is too insignificant to mention, in the cases of the greatest number of students, but for a few it is social salvation.

Campus organizations are for the man who comes to college for knowledge and instruction. They are for the man who comes for the socializing effects of group educatoin. Campus organizations have been established so firmly in college life that it would be an unaccountable loss if they were removed.

We laugh at Freddie Freshman for putting in his application for the managership of the rifle team under the encouragement of several upperclassmen, until by an indirect route we hear that one of the sophomores has put in his claim, threatening freshmen that interfered.

BOOK REVIEW

By Frank Guess

"LITTLE MAN, WHAT NOW?"

Hans Fallada is a German by birth, and he has lived through the distressing times which he exemplifies so well in his novel, "Little Man, What Now?" He writes with a great deal of authority about these unemployed German people because he knows them, and he has lived close to them. In a letter to his American publishers he said that there had been enough dismal books dealing with that theme, but they irritated him, for these people had their days of joy and they did not always slink around with long, drawn faces. About the purpose of his novel he said, "In a word: I wrote 'Little Man, What Now?' in the first place because I hoped to help him by calling attention to his fate, and in the second place, because I wanted to describe his life as it really is."

"Little Man, What Now?" is a simple tale of simple folk. It tells the story of Johannes Pinneburg, a twenty-three year old small-town German bookkeeper and his wife, Bunny. Pinneburg loses his job and the two of them migrate to Berlin to live with his mother. He finds a new job, and they establish themselves in a small apartment. They are absorbed in their love for each other, and in their thoughts of the baby which is well on its way. They have their troubles, their anxieties, and their joys. Life is real to them and little things are so important. When the baby comes they find complete happiness until the job vanishes, and Pinneburg finds himself among the white-collar unemployed. New troubles beset them, but these two are courageous, and they make their way onward, always striving always hoping.

Fallada has made Pinneburg an honest, naive, timid fellow, who is very tender towards his Bunny. She is perhaps the most spirited of the two. He paints them well and he makes the reader feel a kindly interest. All of his characterizations are excellent, though he employs no involved description, and the language he uses is simple, direct and mostly conversational. He has not introduced melodrama, nor heroes, but he has weaved into his story a little of pathos, and of tragedy.

Some of the situations are particularly interesting and the author does not fail to introduce a touch of humor now and then. The frankness of characters is striking.

The book may be secured from The [illegible] Rental Library.

WORLD'S STAGE

By Walker Combs, Jr.

It appears during the last several weeks that many people have ended their tacit adherence to the President's recovery policy. From the press, from politicians, from business men, and from the people at large have come signs of dissatisfaction.

Many friends of the Administration hail this as a good sign. Some of them look forward to the meeting of Congress next January, on the ground that what the Administration needs is opposition. There is always opposition in Congress to anything, no matter how good, and under the circumstances, where there are so many weak points in the present policies, opposition will be especially strong. But, say these friends, this will have a solidifying influence, helping to rid the present laws of many of those weak points, and will tend to make the work of President Roosevelt and his associates even more strongly felt.

It seems that there has been too little opposition. In many cases, the policies which the President has followed have not been for the benefit of the majority of the populace. No one can be perfect, and the mistakes must not be held too strongly against the present regime. However, there is a great danger in the present situation, a danger which we may expect to be soon dispensed with.

This danger is inherent in any situation where one man is given dictatorial powers. And it seems strange, that the first Democratic president in twelve years should be responsible. Freedom of the individual, of private enterprise, even of opinion has been largely limited since the launching of the NRA drive. Republican leaders have felt that in fairness to the present Administration they should give as little opposition as possible. The press has not been wont to criticize, and the people in general felt it their duty to cooperate in everything "their" President suggested.

No longer is this the case. The first open opposition to the recovery drive of the President came from Henry Ford, the only leading industrialist not to conform to the manufacturers' code of his industry. Space does not admit of a discussion of whether Ford was right in his resistance of the NRA code, but in all fairness to him, it may be said that the automotive code seriously cut into his policies as a manufacturer, and since it was formulated by capitalists who have opposed him for years, it was natural that he should take such an attitude.

General Johnson has let it be known that he will brook no opposition, and consequently, Ford has been declared ineligible for government contracts, and a Lincoln, which carrier General Johnson from home to office and back, was dispensed with.

In other matters, too, General Johnson has shown himself indisposed to opposition or criticism, and his attitude has led to still more violent protests. The newspapers are much more dangerous to the NRA program than anything else, and he has attempted to silence them. The code which they signed has tended to limit their freedom in a way to which they seriously object.

These have been violent in voicing their disapproval. In a letter written recently by William Randolph Hearst he protested the threatened restriction of the press, claiming that, although the battle was won for freedom of the press some two hundred years ago, there exists a severe danger to his right in the present program.

It is the opinion of this writer that any program which cannot stand criticism is not sound. Whatever happens to the nation, the inviolable right of individual freedom must be protected, as long as this right does not interfere with the public good. We must avoid such a condition of the press as exists in Germany and Russia, in which the newspapers are merely the mouthpieces of the government in power.

We are behind President Roosevelt in his recovery program, but we wish to reserve the right to criticise all or part of it when it appears to be contrary to recovery, and especially must the press be allowed to remain free to inform the people of these United States of all the facts of the situation under consideration.

A CONTINUED STORY

CHAPTER SEVEN

Of course we were very highly excited when the sentinel came charging into the camp. And we were still more excited when he told us what he had seen. The natives to whom we had given Old Barium's body had just thrown it rudely aside. It had been found by the men who walk on four feet and they were using it in one of their tribal ceremonies. We were very anxious to see this ceremony, so we hastened to press on.

We had gone only a few hundred yards when we heard the most weird, horrible, fruesome, diabolical, ear-splitting, hair-raising screamings and howlings that ever came to the ears of mortal man. We crept closer and closer and finally came to a small clearing in the middle of the jungle. There were fires flickering in a half circle behind a large stone altar that was in the center of the clearing. The flickering light of the fire and the eerie glow of the waning moon cast a weird light over the whole scene.

On the stone altar in the center we could see the body of old Barium. Round and round him the dancing beasts were circling, all the while keeping time with a series of screams that caused our hair to stand on end. The high priest of the group was near the altar and kept circling nearer and nearer the body of our former companion. Meanwhile, the dance had reached a fever pitch, the half men, half beast-like creatures — creatures that could not be called human, were in a perfect frenzy; they were howling like souls possessed and going through the intricate steps of a ceremonial dance. Suddenly the high priest dashed up to the altar, raised his war club and struck the body of old Barium a terrible blow. This was the signal for the fun, if fun it was, to really begin. Each member of that dance of death would dash up to the altar and strike the poor broken body of our old friend.

We were all too horror-stricken to look, that is, all of us were but Little Ammonia. She seemed to enjoy this horrible spectacle, even though a Sulfide was the leading attraction. In fact, she was so excited when the dancers started cutting her father to pieces with their long spears that it was all we could do to keep her from running out to join in the fun.

"Why," she said, "are you all so downcast? I haven't had so much fun since I was down on the farm and the hogs et up Uncle Edgar. Anyhow, the old man always said that he wanted to go out in no commonplace manner and he would be very happy to know that he was the guest of honor at such a beautiful ceremony."

"Now I am tired, so let's go back to our little cabin in the pines."

"She turned and started back to camp, and her faithful slave, Jump-hi, was right on her heels, so there was nothing for us to do but follow, because without Jump-hi we would not have been able to find our way back. Clever fellows, these Chinese.

The next morning came rather early as it had been doing, no doubt, for countless centuries and we were up to greet the sun. Our own little ray of sunshine was dancing about in perfect contentment, for, as she so beautifully expressed it, "It ain't every day that your father gets et up by the wild men of the jungles."

About 6 A. M. (w. c. a. time), we moved out on the last day of our search. We passed the spot where the ceremony had taken place and it was with sad and downcast faces that we saw little bits of our former partner strewn all over the landscape. Little Ammonia picked up one of the old man's ears and tied it around her neck. "Just a little chip off the old block to remember the old man by." These beautiful words set Jump-hi to weeping and blubbering so hard that we were forced to stop for him to brush the tears from his eyes so we could go on.

We walked through the jungles for about six miles as the crow flies and about nine if the crow has to walk, until we came to a small mountain which was called the Alps, and Jump-hi told us that when we had passed beyond the Alps we would find the valley.

We sat down to have our lunch and rest for the climb and became so interested in conversation that we forgot ourselves. When we came back to look for us, we had all disappeared and no trace of us has been found to this day.

THE END.

Milder ..yes I like that word about cigarettes

"When I think of milder cigarettes nowadays, I always think of Chesterfields.

"Because Chesterfields are milder. They've got plenty of taste and aroma to them but they've got mildness too!

"I smoke Chesterfields all day long —when I'm working and when I'm not, and there's no time when a Chesterfield doesn't taste milder and better.

"I'll put in a good word any time for a cigarette like Chesterfields—they're mild and yet they Satisfy."

Sigma Upsilon Hears Pledges

At the meeting of Sigma Upsilon, literary fraternity, last Wednesday, three papers were read by pledges.

The pledges were W. F. Guess, G. W. Dunlap, and W. I. Nexsen. Plans were discussed at the meeting for programs for following meetings.

The orchestra furnishing the music comes with excellent recommendations from those places where they have been [illegible] an extensive tour of the South. Red Kibler's orchestra of the Columbia Broadcasting system played in Atlanta over WSB when several [illegible] were dedicated to Presbyterian college. Those who have [illegible] have no doubt that the [illegible] success.

INDIAN INVASION COMES FRIDAY

the Davis' camp are recovering rapidly and eagerly [illegible] ready for action in the line of the game. With Reed, [illegible] injured in the Wofford game, and Talbert's shoulder, fractured in the [illegible] game, mended, Coach Johnson will be able to throw his full strength into the game which means so much to P. C. supporters. A victory over Newberry [illegible] even though the team lost every other game on the schedule, would mean a successful season for the Blue Hose.

Little is known hereabouts of the strength of Coach Dutch MacLean's charges, but the Indians have appeared strong in their appearances so far this season and indications are that the battle will be strongly contested. A fast and heavy backfield, headed by the fleet-footed Ingram, who ran 60 yards with an intercepted pass last year to score on P. C., will feature the attack.

Approaching Battle With Indians Brings To Mind, Etc.

Gamely, he struggled to his feet and on, only to collapse at second with knee ligaments torn and wrenched. Black had words—lurid words—with the coacher at first, and Constable Tom Holland did his duty as he saw it by marching the declaimer from the field.

Coach Boozer turned a jaundiced eye upon Larry.

"A dirty deal!"

"Not so dirty as tripping a man [illegible]."

"[illegible]," said Boozer.

"[illegible]," retorted Larry.

Up sprang Boozer, raging, from the bench. The broom in Larry's hands described a semi-circle in the air, terminating with a thud upon a well-chosen spot above Boozer's ear . . and there tradition varies.

Says one source: "I saw Elwood Dillard holding Boozer down, while Larry basted him with the broom," while another claims to have intervened as a peacemaker before hostilities reached a point beyond the impact of the broom.

Both versions are unsatisfactory, although the first, from an artistic point of view, is preferable. We turn to the fountain head. Mr. Dillard himself testifies to one blow upon the person of Tinch Boozer, which stretched him upon the ground. Defending himself with a bat, he held off the enemy until the authorities intervened.

In the meantime, pandemonium has broken lose among the bleachers. Here is Professor Elliott Hall, cane upraised, bounding with scholastic dignity down the planks. There is a young lady, deserted, while her escort pants for breath behind first base, torn shirt flapping. Still another young lady, clad in a new dress of grey trimmed with red, clings to the arm of a reluctant gentleman who views the proceedings with wistful eyes. By third base, Elwood briskly beats a tattoo upon the ribs of one Brown, while Plaxico dubiously fingers the gap where once two teeth had gleamed.

Black had not waited for the fight—sagacious Black. He had hastened down the road to swing a freight train at the city limits, before the crowd bethought itself of the original cause.

With the intervention of the police department, the affair was quelled for the time. Aside from three or four fines of $10 each, a few teeth, a number of bruises, and several garments, few casualties were suffered. An epic had been added to the history of local sport.

VOLUME XV PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE, CLINTON, S. C., NOVEMBER 13, 1933 NUMBER 8

ALUMNI SELECT TWO TRUSTEES

W. P. Jacobs Is Re-elected and J. H. Thornwell Succeeds McMurray As College Directors.

J. H. Thornwell, head of the Hartsville public schools, and Wm. P. Jacobs, Clinton business man, prominent as textile executive and in other lines, were elected by the Alumni Association at its meeting here Friday, November 10, to fill two vacancies in the college board of trustees.

The new officers elected for the coming year are: S. C. Summerall, of Clinton, president; J. M. Wilson of Fayetteville, N. C., vice-president; and Rev. C. K. Douglas of Seneca, secretary-treasurer.

In selecting the men to fill two of it's three posts on the board of trustees, the alumni have picked two able members who are actively interested in Presbyterian College. Mr. Jacobs is reelected for another term of three years, and Mr. Thornwell is named to fill out the unexpired term of Rev. C. W. Murray, recently of Atlanta. Rev. M. C. Dendy of Gainesville, Ga., is the third alumni member of the board.

The retiring president, Mr. Eugene Wilson of Seneca, appointed a committee of five to make plans for a permanent organization.

The association also decided to request that the college arrange two football games for their Saturday Home-coming Day next year, a freshman game in the morning and the varsity contest in the afternoon with the annual dinner sandwiched in between.

The meeting of the alumni group here Friday indicates that the body intends to become very active. A large number attended the meeting and showed marked interest in the affairs of the association, which for some time, as an organization, has not been the aid to the college that an alumni association should be.

Included in the plans for a permanent organization is a project to form local chapters of Presbyterian College Alumni in all communities where several graduates are located.

This project has already made material progress. In carrying out the resolution of the Alumni Association made at it's 1932 meeting, the Alumni of Oconee county was organized last spring and now includes eighteen members. J. L. Nickles of Seneca, is the president of the Oconee county Association of P. C. Alumni.

Other members are: Dr. T G. Hall, J. M. Mason, Fant Thornley, D. E. C. Doyle, Clay Dendy, Jute Price, Ralph Heller, B. A. Lowry, M. P. Caskey, John Bellenger, Homer Ballenger, Rev. Eugene Wilson, S. N. Hughes, K. E. Hughes, Norton Dendy, Louis Helleman.

Many At Pledge Dance Here Friday

Many out-of-town visitors were on hand here Friday night for the pledge dance, sponsored by the Pan-Hellenic council in honor of the new pledges of the several fraternities.

Gordon (Red) Kibler and his Columbia Broadcasting orchestra furnished music for the occasion. This orchestra put on a finished performance which pleased all those who attended.

A great many former students attended the affair, which was the first Pan-Hellenic event to be given this term. A number of beautiful out-of-town girls were present.

The affair was considered a huge success by all those who attended. The next inter-fraternity event on the social calendar is the Pan-Hellenic series of dances to be held early next spring.

LITERATURE, FICTION LEAD IN CIRCULATION

Students, and faculty members using the library during the month of October borrowed 1,263 books. This was an average of slightly over 45 each day. Of the classified works going into circulation, literature led the list with 183 books, while fiction was next with 153.

Seventy new books were added to the catalogued and classified shelves during the month—books ranging all the way from light fiction to heavy tomes on the foreign relations of the United States and other countries.

Brown Addresses Y. M. C. A. Session

Says Need of the World Today Is Understanding In Talk On "World Citizenship."

"I'm going to talk about something that doesn't exist," began Dean M. W. Brown, in a talk to the "Y" Thursday night on "World Citizenship."

He soon qualified that remark, however, by saying that it simply was not as strong or clearly felt as national patriotism, and was rather hard to find definitely.

Civilization advances by progressive removal of fears, he said. Men have learned by steps how not to fear wild animals, and how to live unafraid among people about them. We have not learned, however, to be unafraid of each other as nations.

"Money and investment know no national boundaries," he said. Thanks to modern communications, trouble in Argentina makes a rise on the Chicago wheat market the next day. "All the world is linked together."

As our part in affairs, Dean Brown suggested that we need understanding, need to realize that we are "debtor to both Greeks and barbarians," and need to keep an attitude of sympathy toward our neighbors abroad.

Death Claims Prof. Frierson

The Clinton Chronicle for last week announces the death of Prof. D. M. Frierson. Prof. Frierson was orginially from Anderson county, S. C. His father was Dr. D. E. Frierson, one time pastor of the Presbyterian church in Anderson.

For the past 25 years Prof. Frierson has been professor of mathematics at Arkansas college, Batesville, Ark. Prof. Frierson was at one time professor of mathematics and chemistry at Presbyterian college.

In September, 1891, Professor Frierson and Dr. Spencer came to the P. C. campus for the first time. At that time there were only two other men on the faculty, Dr. Cleland, president, who was also doing full time teaching. The other professor was J. F. Jacobs. All four of these were very young men, their four ages not quite totaling 100 years. Dr. Spencer is now the only one of these four left.

In 1907 Professor Frierson left P. C. for the Arkansas college. At the same time Dr. Spencer had an offer of a position at this same college, but Dr. Spencer decided to remain here.

R. O. T. C. Football To Start Soon

The annual intramural football schedule sponsored by the R. O. T. C. department will be played off as soon as the varsity team finishes its season, it was announced recently by the military authorities.

The varsity season ends in two weeks with a game in Salisbury, N. C., November 25.

In the past the series of R. O. T. C. gridiron battles have excited as much interest as the most crucial game on the P. C. varsity schedule. Talented

Blake Returns From Venezuela

P. C. Alumnus One of Party To Make Expedition Into South America for "Geographic."

Emmet R. Blake, Presbyterian college graduate in the class of '28, has recently returned from a scientific expedition into the interior of South America.

Blake, along with Charles T. Agostini, accompanied Ernest G. Holt on geographic and zoologic exploration of the country adjacent to the Rio Negro between Brazil and Venezuela. The expedition was sponsored by the National Geographic society and the reports printed in the latest issue of the National Geographic Magazine.

The party entered the continent by way of the Amazon river and returned to the sea via the Orinoco, making thorough exploration on the trip of the territory lying near the boundary of Brazil and Venezuela. The plant and animal life encountered was classified and a complete report turned over to the National Geographic society.

The party encountered unique hardships in the South American wilds. The temperature was always the very hottest, with the sun shining straight down so that the men had to use umbrellas to protect the surveying instruments.

Mr. Blake has once before conducted his own expedition up the Orinoco river. For several years prior to his departure on the South American adventure, he studied ornithology at the University of Pittsburgh.

While at P. C., Blake showed his great likeness for botany and zoology, and was especially interested in the art of taxiderny. He was a member of Chi Beta Phi scientific fraternity during his undergraduate days and was also a member of the track team.

Freshmen Trounce Newberry, 19-6

Game Featured By Three Long Runs For Touchdowns, One From Kick-off By Garland.

Presbyterian's freshman team defeated the Newberry frosh 19-6 in a spectacular game played on Newberry's home field Thursday afternoon. P. C. tallied 16 first downs to Newberry's 5.

Newberry scored first when Thompson intercepted Oxley's pass and raced 85 yards for a touchdown. The try for point failed and Newberry kicked to the Sox. Garland took the kick-off and, not to be out-done, ran 80 yards through the entire Papoose team to tie the score. The try for point was not good.

In the second quarter neither team tallied but the half ended with P. C. in possession of the ball on the Newberry 4 yard stripe.

In the third period the Sox started a drive that ended in another score. Abbott and Cappelmann being the principle carriers, with Abbott taking the ball over. Thompson kicked goal to add the extra point.

Abbott dashed 70 yards in the fourth quarter around Newberry's end for the Blue Sox third touchdown. Newberry's chief scoring threats also came in the fourth as a result of several completed passes, but the line held on both occasions and the ball went over. The game ended with P. C. in possession of the ball in Newberry's territory.

The frosh next game, in which they will strive to change their record of two victories and two defats to three victories and two defats, will be with Wofford on Johnson Field.

Armistice Day Celebrated Here

Dr. F. D. Jones, of the Presbyterian college faculty, delivered the Armistice day address at exercises conducted in the college chapel Saturday morning.

In his address, Dr. Jones showed that the war was not useless, that the United States did not make a mistake when it entered the conflict and that all the results were not bad, but that there were many good results of this nation's participation in the struggle.

Robert S. Owens, local attorney, introduced the speaker.

The exercises were under the auspices of the local American Legion post. The college R. O. T. C. unit marched uptown, and halted around the monument. After the playing of "America," veterans of the World war and Spanish war formed and followed the R. O. T. C. unit to the college chapel, where Dr. Jones made his address.

INDIANS SCALP PRESBYTERIAN

Newberry Cohorts, Led By Beck, Turn Back Blue Hose, 16-7, In Home-coming Game Here Friday Before Good Crowd.

On Friday afternoon, the Newberry Indians administered the Presbyterian Blue Stockings a dose of their own medicine by breaking up home-coming day and defeated them, 16-7.

Playing before a crowd of two thousand, the Indians completely outclassed the Blue Stockings. Their two weeks' lay-off evidently put plenty of pep in them. Only in the second quarter did the Hose look anything like the team that tied Clemson. Except for that one spurt, Newberry had the situation completely in hand.

Starting off the first quarter with a bang, the Indians received a punt from P. C. and Beck immediately tore off 25 yards from punt formation. Then mixing line drives with end runs and passes, they drove 50 yards down the field and scored on a seven-yard pass from Ingram to Hewey. Lambeth kicked the ball right through the middle for the extra point.

Coming back in the second quarter, the Hose displayed their only offensive of the afternoon. Led by Perrin, brilliant junior quarter, they drove 50 yards down the field and scored on a two-yard buck by Perrin. Horne kicked the extra point. Perrin made all but 11 yards in this drive.

As the third quarter opened, P. C. looked to be back in their old form but the spasm didn't last long. After several exchanges of punts, Newberry got the ball and Beck drove through the middle of the P. C. line and scampered 28 yards to score. Lambeth again kicked the extra point. This score put the game on ice for the Indians.

The rest of the game was devoid of scoring until the last minute of the game. P. C. obtained possession of the ball nearly on her own goal line. Holliday tried to pass but the Newberry forwards charged through and batted down the ball in the end zone for a safety. P. C. kicked off from the 20-yard line and the game ended at the completion of the run-back.

Higbe, P. C.'s 145-pound halfback, was on the spot all the afternoon. Every time he got the ball the strong Newberry line seeped through and threw him either on the line of scrimmage or for a loss. His only gain of three yards was made on an off-tackle slant.

The lack of blocking was entirely too evident on the P. C. team. On end

Twelve New Men Members I. R. C.

The International Relations club met Wednesday night twelve new men.

The program consisted of papers by J. Walker Combs and Venable Martin on affairs regarding Germany and Russia, after which Dean M. W. Brown explained in a few words to the new men the facts about I. R. C.

It is unique among the fraternities or clubs on the campus, he said, in that it is the only one to receive real benefits from a national organization, for which its members pay nothing. It is one of the institutions founded by Andrew Carnegie for the promotion of peace, and suitably endowed by the steel magnate's millions. Already the club has received over sixty dollars worth of new books this year, and has turned them over to the college library for safe keeping.

Other business considered was the representation at the model League of Nations to be held at Winthrop college on December 9-10. Five men tentatively planned to go.

Among those just associated with the I. R. C. is Capt. W. L. Blanton. He is considered peculiarly well-fitted to be an advisory member because of his wide experience in America and abroad as an army officer.

The new student members, all upperclassmen according to standard practice, are: E. R. Andrews, J. P. Charles, W. F. Guess, C. H. Holman, C. M. Hudson, C. R. Johnson, A. V. Martin, Jr., H. S. Odom, R. R. Potter, J. J. Rauch, and H. M. Wilson. Several others have been issued bids and may become members by the next meeting, Nov. 22.

THE CAROLINAS WENT DRY

That was the astounding news that greeted readers of newspapers last Wednesday morning. And by no means the least cause of the unforseen arid ballot was the fervent campaigning of James A. Farley, national Democratic chairman, for the wet ticket.

Southern voters don't relish being told how to cast their ballots, not even when the postmaster general is the instructor.

GATE-CRASHING

The frequency with which the theatre uptown has been "rushed" has diminished in the past few years. Formerly every P. C. athletic victory was the signal for a gang or fifty or seventy-five, never the majority of the student body, to descend upon the local cinema and clamor before the door for admittance until the manager in order to keep the outside noise from disturbing the patrons inside, was forced to let them in. Often when the manager tried to reason with the mob he was rudely thrust aside and the crowd, as many of them as could, dashed in.

It is with pleasure that we note the decreasing frequency of these demonstrations. Most of the students here now frown upon such action and it is only the unruly minority that is responsible for them.

The recent football victory was the excuse for the latest outbreak against private property and the laws of fair play. A small portion of the student body formed and marched upon the private emporium. Somewhat more gentlemanly than their predecessors, they contented themselves with a meaningful procession more pretext of demanding free admittance. But the rowdy guard was still there, along with the mob spirit that demands everything and gives nothing.

"Gate crashing" is a new and cowardly way of celebrating a victory on the athletic field. In this pastime all the elements of sportsmanship found on the athletic field are entirely lacking. The motives of the two are diametrically opposed to each other.

It is just as logical for the winning side in a literary society debate to raid the college canteen or an uptown cafe as it is for P. C. students to "crash" the gates when the Blue Hose are victorious.

News item: In a survey at Hunter College, New York, it was found that of the 650 freshman co-eds, only one intends to marry after graduation. The others are planning to work.

Wonder what the one expects.

Somehow, we just can't help being a little thankful that we do not have to pass through the stage of childhood again. And we feel sincerely sorry for those unfortunates who have to put up with the new-fangled devices that are now used in the education of young ones.

The latest innovation for instructional torture is credited to an instructor in the teachers' college at Columbia university, who recommends that all conversation between parent and offspring be carried on in a singsong, chanting manner in order to make the child "music conscious."

That will be all right if the parents stick to the original specifications. But imagine the torment we will be obliged to bear if mothers decide to go in for grand opera. Little Willie being called in from play in a full-throated high C soprano and, to carry the project one step further, scheming husbands second-tenoring over the phone to wives, "I-I-I will-l-l-l be detained a-a-a-at the office tonight, dea-a-a-a-h," will be more than we oldfashioned folk can bear.

Football was abolished in favor of horseshoe pitching at Long Island University this year.

The back-to-the-farm movement is gaining headway.

THE SPECK WE LIVE ON

"How big the earth is!" you exclaim, as on a clear night you gaze into the heaven and see the little points of light, sparkling dots scattered fairly evenly overhead. "How small they are," you say as you watch the starry bodies twinkle in the faint moonlight. But it is not their smallness; it is their distance.

Take a practical illustration. Suppose you put a dot on a piece of paper, or a blackboard or on the wall of your room—and call it the sun. Then one inch away put another, and call this one the earth. Now in between these, at four-tenths and seven-tenths from the sun dot you have Mercury and Venus, and only six-tenths past the earth is Mars. You see, these heavenly bodies are pretty close together. We skip a larger space now and place Jupiter about five inches from the sun, and Saturn ten. These planets, you notice, are increasingly greater distances apart. Next comes Uranus at twenty inches, Neptune at thirty, and Pluto forty inches from the dot we call our sun. Comparing these, we see that Pluto, for example, is forty times as far from the sun as is the earth. It makes us feel a little lonely, doesn't it?

"But we haven't any stars on our chart," you say. All right, let's put in a few. The nearest, the very nearest star, using the scale of our chart, would be away out past the country club, over four miles away! We'd better stop our measuring here, because to put some of the distant nebulae on our chart we would have to measure around the earth forty times! How isolated is our sun's family in this universe of stars.

For a number of years some astronomers have thought that certain unaccounted-for green lines found in the spectrum of the corona were caused by a new element called "coronium." It has been discovered recently, however, by Doctor Menzel and Doctor Boyce, that these lines are due to oxygen in a peculiar state of electrical excitation.

A new planetarium was recently opened in the Benjamin Franklin Memorial and Franklin Institute at Philadelphia. It is 68 feet in diameter, and in it 500 people can see the milky way and 2700 stars blaze suddenly in the sky. Dr. James Stokely is in charge.

It has been found that down in the depths of the sea, where all is dark and no life can possibly be, there is an "invisible night," that of the ultra-violet end of the sun's spectrum. Also there is life down there, both animal and plant. The more we explore, the more we find that we did not know.

College Chatter

One of the professors of mathematics at the University of Chicago illustrates geometric theorems with football plays.

The University of California at Berkeley finished its mid-term examinations two weeks ago.

Tuxedos are worn by track officials at Alleghany college.

The Pennsylvania highway patrol recently confiscated twenty-five cars belonging to students at Lehigh university and classed them as relics unfit to operate in the streets.

The average college student carries more money in his pockets than a college professor, according to a recent survey made at the University of Washington.

WORLD'S STAGE

By Walker Combs, Jr.

Alas, Poor Yorick, he is dead.

Prohibition is a thing of the past, and the future. Two states, North and outh Carolina, refused to abandon the ship, and stayed with it. One can not say how many more will refuse to follow, now that these two have set the way. Unanimity is never a good thing; this makes one hopeful, and the situation presents the opportunity of setting forth some rather deep seated opinions. There is no need to debate the issue. There is only to wait. But:

1. Taxes will be no lower due to repeal.

2. Employment will not be greatly helped, because as the liquor business increases, the dairy and soft drink industry will decrease, as well as automobiles, theatres, and innumerable other luxuries.

3. International good will, we think, will not be brought to our shores.

4. Drinking will certainly not be on the decline.

5. Only will we be able to make asses of ourselves in a respectable way, and those who clamored for repeal say that that is a good thing. Reminds one vaguely of Anthony's speech in "Julius Caesar."

In "Side Glances" the other day, a proprietor of a speak-easy, it seems, was talking to his clerk, saying, "Well, it won't be long now before we'll be talking about the good old days before repeal."

Prohibition! We may see you back.

Russia, at the time this is written, has not yet been recognized. By the time this appears, recognition will probably be an established fact. It is one of the good things the Roosevelt administration will have accomplished.

Will Rogers, the other night, asked his radio audience if the United States would recognize Russia. He gave the answer himself.

"They would recognize the devil himself if he bought something from us."

But, of corse, it's not so bad as all that. There is nothing we can do about the present Russian government. If we would not like to have it, still it is the best thing the Russians have had; and our refusal to recognize has not made a great deal of difference to any one except the American manufacturers. "De facto" governments have been recognized in the past. This one should have seen recognition a great many years ago.

Glancing through the headlines this week, we see a number of interesting things besides all this. Ford joins the NRA and, almost immediately, he drops half the workers in one of his plants. Unavoidable, he says. He is merely fulfilling the provisions of the automobile code. And there is nothing Johnson can do about it.

Sir Philip Gibbs says that the next war, if any, will not break soon. The youth of the world, he believes, will check for several years the belligerence of the elders who "ought to be dead." Mr. Gibbs, we agree.

War debts, like prohibition, are things of the past. France makes no provision for the payment, England will probably make a token payment. Others follow the course they did last June 15, with those who paid last in doubt.

Lynchings are always present with us in the South. Recently the Southern commission on lynchings, investigating the death of four Negroes in three months near Tuscaloosa, Ala., finds that nearly all the victims were innocent. The fault, they claim, rests upon the officers who made the arrests, in not keeping close enough guard on those arrested, and not being reasonably sure of their guilt.

This is one thing of which the South should be and is ashamed. There are times when, we admit, nothing is too bad for the one lynched, but it leaves a blot on this portion of the country that we do not wish. It is the younger generation that must erase this blemish from the record of "our South."

Indians Win, 51-0, In Initial Meeting

Presbyterian college's first football game with Newberry was rather disastrous for the Blue Stockings. The crowds turned out to see a feature of the 1933 state fair saw a massacre—51 to 0.

That was not so crushing in those days of much scoring (A few weeks previous the Indians had trampled over Bailey Military academy to the tune of 159-0). But, to add insult to injury, Newberry repeated the performance the next year with an identical score.

Following is the lineup for the two teams in their first game:

Presbyterian	Newberry
Stephenson	Crotwell
Miller	Derrick
Bell	Shealy
Linton	Hipp
Thompson	Deaton
Hickler	Stoudemeyer
Rankin	S. Baker
Jacobs	MacLean (now coach)
Brown	R. Baker

OBSERVATIONS

ON THESE AND THOSE

A friend inquired if we could lend him a week-end bag this coming Saturday. We informed him that we had a very suitable one. It was "weak" at both ends.

Well, well, and isn't that just too bad!

Our freshmen don't like their new uniforms. And how do we know they don't like them? Well, it seems that they are trying to wear them out before Christmas so they won't have to wear them home for the holidays.

And speaking of these new uniforms, did you wonder why the visers are so much shorter than the old ones?

Our explanation of this is that the orders were sent off after the grades were posted, and the administration deemed it wise "to give them light."

Council has not found it necessary to give any of our fellow-students a compulsory vacation. Here's hoping that we can say this much later in the session.

It is rumored on the campus (but please don't repeat it) that Freshman Greene was seen standing before a mirror in full uniform saying to himself between broad smiles of "personal satisfaction": "Ah, Napoleon, who said you would never be a soldier?"

We thought we had heard all (and tried most) methods available to get better marks than we deserved; but some enterprising and ambitious youth sprang a new one last week—he swiped the prof's roll-book, evidently hoping that said prof would not remember the low grades. But, in this case, the Doctor was too smart—he could recall every one of them.

HONORARY FRAT FOSTERS CHRISTIAN LEADERSHIP

Delta Chi Alpha is a national honorary Christian leadership fraternity and the youngest honorary fraternity on the campus. It was organized on March 16, 1933, by a group of representatives from Carolina, Wofford and Presbyterian college. Carolina and Wofford already had organized local chapters and P. C. had planned a similar organization. At a group meeting it was decided to accept Carolina's plan and form a national organization. Furman added a chapter shortly thereafter.

Although there are only four chapters at present, it is the aim of the organization to spread throughout the United States.

The purpose of Delta Chi Alpha is two-fold. First, to promote a fraternal spirit among select groups of college students and second, to enlist other college students for definite full-time Christian service.

The local chapter was organized with nine members. Five graduated last year, but plans are being made to receive new men at an early date. No student is eligible for membership who has not completed successfully three semesters of college work and decided to enter full-time Christian service.

Van Arnold is president of the local group.

BURLEY TOBACCO
U. S. Type 31.
SOUTHERN MARYLAND TOBACCO
U. S. Type 32.

U. S. Type 11 is produced in the Piedmont Belt of Virginia and part of North Carolina.

U. S. Type 12 is produced in eastern North Carolina.

U. S. Type 13 grows in South Carolina.

U. S. Type 14 is produced mostly in southern Georgia—a few million pounds in northern Florida and Alabama.

U. S. Type 31 includes what is called White Burley tobacco. It was first produced by George Webb in 1864. It is light in color and body, and is milder than the Burley used for pipes.

U. S. Type 32, Maryland tobacco, is noted for its "burn". In this respect Maryland excels most other tobaccos.

These are the kinds of home-grown tobaccos used for making Chesterfield Cigarettes.

Then Chesterfield adds aromatic Turkish tobacco to give just the right seasoning or spice.

Chesterfield ages these tobaccos for 30 months —2½ years — to make sure that they are milder and taste better.

The passing proved to be especially destructive. The first score came directly from a pass and the second indirectly. Beck and Ingram led the attack and were assisted by Wiedman and Ayoub.

P. C.'s line, which had so far this season proved very effective, showed lack of teamwork. The tackling and charging was below the usual standard and this allowed the Indians to run over them time and again. Yearout and Reeder were best in the line. Perrin was the only man in the backfield who could gain consistently with Bolick a bulwark on defense. But for these two men, the Hose would have been helpless.

The line-ups:

Newberry (16)		P. C. (7)
LE	Lambeth	Yearout
LT	Howey	Robinson
LG	White	Correll
C	Hite	Reeder
RG	Valley	Boggs
RT	Gibbons	Sims
RE	Furen	Forehand
QB	Ingram	Perrin
LH	Beck	Higbe
RH	Clary	Bolick
FB	Wiedman	McCulloch

Officials: Referee, Foster (Hampden-Sidney); umpire, Carter (Furman); head linesman, Newman (Clemson).

performers are rare indeed; and the games put on show everything but good football. But the spirit and the will to win is still there. These, combined with no ability, make the games ludicrous affairs.

It is certain that four teams will be entered in the tournament with a possibility that the band will put a team on the field. The ones already certain are the Home Guards, "A" company, "B" company, and "C" company.

INSURING FINE TOBACCO FOR future Lucky Strikes

Not many smokers have seen a fine tobacco plant in full bloom, so we show you this picture. Only a few of these fine plants are permitted to flower and to produce seed. These carefully selected seeds reproduce the following year the "Cream of the Crop" for your Lucky Strike, for tobacco must be grown from seed each year. This careful breeding of fine tobaccos explains why Luckies maintain the same fine, uniform quality from year to year—so round and firm and fully packed—free from loose ends.

BREAKS LARGE FACTOR IN WIN FOR BLUE HOSE AT DUE WEST

Bad Pass From Center and Intercepted Erskine Pass Account For Two Scores. Waldrop Breaks Into Scoring Column With 35-yard Return After Grabbing Seceder Aerial. Bolick Plays Well.

MANN SHINES FOR FLEET

Combining heads-up football in the first half with real drive in the second, the Presbyterian Blue Hose sunk the Erskine Flying Fleet, 21-0, at Due West Friday.

Doped to lose by all Erskine men and by some sports writers who saw P. C. play Newberry last week-end, the team went on the field with rather shaky support. As the game opened, Erskine looked to blast the Hose out of their path, running up two first downs in the first few minutes of play. They were then forced to kick out, but immediately received the ball again when P. C. could not gain. The Fleet again proceeded to run up two more first downs from their 20-yard mark. They appeared to be heading for a touchdown but a fumble by Whiteside on the 48-yard line was recovered by Robinson and the drive was stopped. The Hose were not able to gain again and Quarterman punted to Whiteside on his 12-yard line. On the next play the pass from center was low and Whiteside fumbled the ball which was accidently kicked over the goal line and P. C. fell on it for the first touchdown. Everything happened so quickly that it left the spectators in a daze. Quarterman put the boot for the extra point squarely between the goal posts.

The second quarter had hardly begun when Waldrop, alert P. C. end, intercepted a pass from Whitten and raced 35 yards for a score. Quarterman again put one over the middle and made the score 14-0. The period ended with neither team doing much, but with P. C. looking better.

As the third quarter began, the Hose offense took on new fire and dash and the Blue Stockings proceeded to play real football. With most of the first team in the game, they swept toward the goal of the Flying Fleet with a relentless drive. Led by Bolick, who looked like his former self for the first time this year, the Hose plowed through the Erskine line for big gains. With the ball on the one-yard line, Bolick tucked the oval under his arm and went over the line standing up. Quarterman made it three out of three by kicking the extra point. Score: P. C. 21, Erskine 0.

Then Coach Johnson began throwing in his reserves. They kept going just as the varsity but as they neared the goal line, they lacked the final punch to put it over. The ball was in the ten-yard line several times, but the Hose couldn't shove it over.

As the end of the game drew near, Erskine resorted to a passing attack, which proved to be as ineffectual as the running attack. They could never get the ball beyond their 30-yard line. The game ended with the ball on the Fleet' 20-yard line.

In the first half the Blue Hose looked to be headed for the same kind of game that they played against Newberry. But in the second half they opened up with a terrific attack with which Erskine couldn't cope. The blocking was good and the line plays clicked. The punting was the best that P. C. has exhibited in some time, with Quarterman doing all the work. He

Collegian Out At Early Date

Material For Magazine Ready For Printers. Winter Edition To Be Distributed Dec. 4th.

The first issue of the Collegian is expected to appear in the near future. J. Walker Combs, editor-in-chief, has reported that the coming number is to be about 20 pages, including the cover, and will be smaller than last year's issue. Many contributors have submitted articles.

Among the present contributors are several poems by Frank Guess and one poem by Colin Hudson, F. S. Love, H. M. Wilson and R. C. McLees will be published. Meyer Frank has written a series of clever features. There will be a few essays and miscellaneous selections by various students. The Collegian will be atractively illustrated by R. C. McLees, whose linoleum cuts have appeared in the Blue Stocking.

Much enthusiasm has been shown among students this year in publishing a successful literary magazine. An attractive and interesting issue has been promised.

Glee Club Will Tour Three Days

Last Thursday the glee club voted unanimously to go on a three day trip in the southern part of the state before Christmas.

It was understood by the club before they voted on this trip, that they would be required to practice for a short time each night. The dates for the performances have been set for December 4, 5 and 6. Negotiations are now under way to secure three engagements in the southern part of the state. The program at the first of the year appeared to have a little more variety than that of last; but now that it has taken a more definite form, it seems that the program is to be much more varied than was at first expected.

Juniors To Issue Paper Next Week

The next issue of The Blue Stocking will be in charge of the junior class. Hart Odom is the editor. The annual superlative contest will be held this week and the results printed in the junior issue.

Odom has announced his staff as follows: L. A. McCall, Frank Guess, George Dunlap, A. W. Harrison, C. B. Lawter, Henry Dillard, and W. I. Newsom.

The issue of December 1 will be put out by the sophomore class, Colin Hudson, editor; and the issue of December 11 by the freshmen, J. E. Patrick, editor.

P. C. Has Shown Marked Growth

Dr. Spencer Has Seen Establishmen of First Bulidings. Many Changes Through the Years.

Dr. A. E. Spencer, professor of Greek and French, has been on the faculty of P. C. longer than any other member. He came to P. C. in 1891 which was 11 years after the college was founded. At the time he came there were but two buildings on the present campus, Alumni hall and a wooden dining hall that was located back of Alumni hall. All classes met in the building that now is the high school building at the orphanage. In those days P. C. maintained a two-year prep school.

There were three other professors besides Dr. Spencer that year. They were: J. I. Cleland, D. M. Frierson, and J. F. Jacobs, Sr. The next year there was added another member to that group, Dr. J. B. Townsend, of Anderson, S. C. Of these five men only two are now living, Dr. Spencer and Dr. Townsend.

In 1907 the Administration Building, Laurens hall, and Judd hall were erected. In 1913 Spencer hall was added, and in 1914 the Science hall. During this period several of the faculty homes were built. In 1923 the Gymnasium and Smyth were also built. The dining hall was enlarged in 1924.

When Dr. D. M. Douglas came in 1911, there were only 85 students, 35 girls and 50 boys. He saw the enrollment in 1926 go to 276 boys.

There was no endowment until after 1904, and by 1925 the endowment had reached $325,000.

Durant Named Alumni Officer

Rev. M. A. Durant, of Abbeville, instead of Rev. C. K. Douglas, was elected secretary-treasurer of the Presbyterian College Alumni association at College. Alumni association at Blue Stocking has been informed in a letter from Mr. Douglas. Mr. Douglas took the place of the regular secretary at the meeting of the association. It was reported in last week's issue of the paper that Mr. Douglas had been elected secretary.

Negroes Sing Old Spirituals

Large Audience At "Y" Meeting Hears Colored Choir of Men and Women Render Melodies.

Eleven colored men and women from the Friendship Methodist church choir provided the harmony of Negro spirituals to keep almost half the student body and many visitors listening at the "Y" program Thursday night.

Combinations of voices were varied time and again as they hummed and sang the old familiar songs. The male quartet with "Deacon" at tenor and "Columbo" holding down the bass found the chords for several pieces. "I Got Shoes" rang through several verses, and "Kentucky Babe" was put into music again, among their numbers.

Four women sang together at one part, and "Deacon" Gary and J. T. W. Mims gave solos. A double quartet opened the music and the whole eleven finally agreed to sing "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" in response to continued applause after the program was over.

Everyone seemed to thoroughly enjoy the music of the local Negroes, several of whom work regularly for the college. The five men were: J. T. W. Mims, Marion Taylor, Eugene ("Deacon") Gary, John Henry Wallace, and Columbus Harris. The women who sang were Julia Taylor, Minnie Lee, Amanda Gary, Ruth Alexander, Laura Bell, and Alexine Ward.

The crowd atending the meeting was the largest and most enthusiastic that has been present at a "Y" session in some time.

GAMMA SIGMA NOW IN THIRTEENTH YEAR

Gamma Sigma, honorary journalistic fraternity, is this year celebrating its thirteenth year of existence. It was founded in 1920 by L. W. Jackson, then editor of The Blue Stocking, and since that time has been rather active on the campus, recognizing journalistic ability among members of the senior and junior classes.

The general aim of the fraternity is to create a fraternal spirit among those men who are interested in journalism and to promote a greater enthusiasm for all literary activity. It honors those men who do outstanding work along journalistic lines with membership keys. The qualification for membership is a marked ability in some line of journalistic endeavor. Candidates for membership must be members of the senior or junior class, although some sophomores may be taken in near the end of the spring school term.

The club now claims eight members and pledges. They are J. W. Combs, Jr., H. S. Odom, L. A. McCall, T. L. Skinnick, T. H. Wingate, A. M. Tommang, J. W. Haney, and Frank Guess. Combs is president of the group.

The society is the oldest organization of its kind in the state. Attempts are now being made to nationalize it.

Honorary Frats Announce Meets

At a joint meeting of the presidents and secretaries of the various honorary fraternities on the campus, which was called by Dean Brown last week, the time of meeting of each honorary fraternity on the campus was decided. These dates were so arranged that no two fraternities will conflict as to their time of meeting. The schedule which was worked out will be in force during the whole year.

The schedule is as follows:

Chi Beta Phi meets on the first and third Tuesday at 7:30.

Blue Key meets on the second and fourth Tuesday at 7:00.

Gamma Sigma meets on the first Wednesday at 7:00.

Sigma Upsilon meets on the third Wednesday at 7:00.

Delta Chi Alpha meets on the first and third Thursday at 7:00.

I. R. C. meets on the second and fourth Wednesday at 7:00.

Other clubs on the campus meet as follows:

The Glee Club meets every Tuesday and Thursday night at 7:00.

The Forum meets every Friday night at 7:00.

Upham Suggests Honor For Citizen

Miami University President Proposes To Confer Honorary Title Upon Graduates.

Oxford, Ohio. —(IP)—A college degree of M. C. (Master Citizen) for young college alumni who make good in public life was suggested by President Alfred H. Upham of Miami University in his opening address to Miami students, an address in which he deplored the lack of intellectual living on the part of college graduates.

"Through all the seathing criticism directed toward higher education," Dr. Upham said, "there runs an unpleasant thought which must come to all of us. Are we sending out into life young men and women who use their brains in matters of public concern"

"To my mind the gravest reflection on our American education is the pitiably small number of our graduates who continue to read anything like an intellectual life. I am not asking for prigs nor highbrows, but merely for people who read books and enjoy them, who have opinions of their own which go deeper than newspaper headlines, who take a responsibility for the welfare of their community and state which goes further than crabbing about the baseball team and taxes."

The Miami president asserted that the curricula of American colleges needed a thorough overhauling.

Miami this year opens its 25th year as an institution of higher learning.

The Parentheses club, State Teachers college, N. J., is open only to bow-legged men.

College Prexy Outwits Thug

Milwaukee.—(IP)—Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, last week proved to the world that a college president can think just a little faster than a holdup man, clever as the underworld is given credit for being.

Dr. Frank was alone in a hotel room here when a robber forced his way in, gun pointed at the educator.

"Back up against the wall and hand me the keys to your bag," said the thug.

Dr. Frank backed up, but he backed up against the bathroom door. Suddenly he swung himself inside the bathroom, slammed the door and locked it, and ran to the window calling for help.

The robber escaped, but Dr. Frank retained the keys to his bag.

Phis Too Noisy, Hailed Into Court

Berea, Ohio. — (IP) — The courts have been called on to decide a dispute between Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Payton and the members of Phi Kappa Phi fraternity at Baldwin-Wallace college, whose fraternity house is next to the Payton residence.

The Paytons brought suit to restrain the fraternity men from using their year-and-a-half-old $30,000 fraternity house because, it was alleged, the fraternity men made too much noise and always kept the window to their shower room open.

Henry Zachman, fraternity president, admitted some noise was made, but "not anywhere near as much as the Paytons claim," and said that after the next door neighbors had complained, the shower room window had been closed and kept closed.

Schools Are Exempt From NRA–Johnson

Recovery Chief Rules That Colleges Not Includes In Regulations of Codes.

Washington. —(IP)— After a conference with a committee of educators headed by President Lloyd H. Marvin of George Washington University here, Hugh Johnson, national recovery chife, issued a ruling that schools, colleges, universities, churches, hospitals and charitable institutions were to be exempt from the provisions of the National Recovery Act.

A letter going out to educational institutions affected from Dr. Marvin's committee, says in part:

"This ruling means that non-profit-making institutions under private control have the same status as have state and municipal institutions with regard to the N. R. A. They are exempt from the provisions of codes.

"This does not mean that they should not voluntarily meet as far as possible the specifications of the President's agreement and cooperate with the President in every way to hasten national recovery."

The committee of educators was appointed by Charles R. Mann as director of the American Council of Education.

Football Hero Quits As Movie Director

Ernie Nevers, Former All-American, Refuses Job On Film. Reflects On Sport, Says.

Hollywood, Cal.—(IP)—Because he said he believed the film would reflect on the national college game, Ernie Nevers, assistant football coach at Stanford University and former all-American fullback, last week quit his job as technical director of a football movie being filmed here.

Nevers had been employed to direct a movie designed to show a college badly in need of money hiring a great football coach and a squad of stars to pull the institution out of the red.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO BREAK RECORDS IN THE AIR!

HE FLEW AROUND THE WORLD ALONE! Wiley Post climbs out of the Winnie Mae at Floyd Bennett Field as the whole world applauds his skill and marvelous physical endurance. "Smoking Camels as I have for so long," says Post, "I never worry about healthy nerves."

FLYING EIGHT DAYS AND NIGHTS without a stop, Frances Marsalis and Louise Thaden set the world's endurance flight record for women. Miss Thaden says, "For some years I've smoked Camels. They taste better." Also a Camel fan, Miss Marsalis says, "I've never changed because I can't afford to take chances with my nerves."

RACING ACROSS AMERICA in 10 hours and 5½ minutes, Col. Roscoe Turner recently added a new West-East transcontinental speed record to the East-West record he won earlier this year. "Like most pilots I smoke a lot," says Col. Turner. "I smoke Camels for the sake of healthy nerves, and I enjoy them more."

A MATCHLESS BLEND

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

Men and women who are famous for their brilliant flying agree about smoking and healthy nerves. "I never worry about healthy nerves," they say, "because I smoke Camels."

They cannot afford to make a mistake in choosing their cigarette. They have to know. And it is more fun to know, because of the greater smoking pleasure they find in Camels. Camels are milder... better in taste. They leave no "cigaretty" aftertaste.

Change to Camels... and see for yourself that they do not get on your nerves or tire your taste!

BREAKS LARGE FACTOR IN WIN FOR BLUE HOSE AT DUE WEST

Bad Pass From Center and Intercepted Erskine Pass Account For Two Scores. Waldrop Breaks Into Scoring Column With 35-yard Return After Grabbing Seceder Aerial. Bolick Plays Well.

SPORT SHOTS

The girls at Weber College have organized a football team, we hear. But even their pictpre in the paper does not convince us that they have anything to stick their necks out about. Figuratively speaking, of course.) Why, right here at Presbyterian College there is material for a co-ed team that would stack up on a par with any team of its species in the country, on paper, of course.

We have weight, plenty of reserve material, ruggedness, and all the other attributes of a good gridiron squad but let's take the matter up in detail.

In the line, where weight and speed are essential, there is a wealth of material. (We can vouch for the heftiness of the forward wall, but have not had enough close observation to determine its speed.) For the pivot position, we nominate Miss G. B. Blakely; then at the guards two small but alert players, quick on their feet and capable of running interference, A. Shealy and M. B. Workman. For the tackle posts, key positions of the defensive set-up, Highsmith and Lawson are our choices. Two tall flankwomen, entirely capable of snagging lofty passes out of the ozone and of defending their territory against wide end sweeps, will care for the end positions. They are Miss Peake and Miss Little.

So much for the line. Now for the backfield. Every member of the squad appears capable of holding down the quarterback position. But everyone can't have the job, so we'll draw straws. You win, Miss Jones. You are now the first string quarterback on the P. C. female football squad. Miss Copeland will be your understudy, and call signals for the second team.

Very tritely, the backfield will be light but fast. Cannon, Butler and Cook, three products of Thornwell Orphanage, are likely choices for the remaining positions in the strating backfield.

As for the reserves, almost two full teams, each and every one is a utility player and will substitute at any position equally well.

After a thorough survey of the prospects, we would have no fear in putting a P. C. Female Football team up against anything that the United States has to offer. All challenges will be received by this department.

"Red" Abbott fell a little short of his quota of touchdowns in the Wofford game, and consequently it will be useless for him to visit the office of the Y. M. S. & T.

You don't know what we're talking about, but "Red" does.

Frosh Tank Team Begins Practice

Several freshmen have already begun training for places on the rat swimming team. Last year the P. C. frosh team won the state meet and demonstrated that it contained some promising material. All phases of the sport will be participated in this year, diving as well as swimming. The lack of a board has hindered the men in practicing of straight and fancy dives, but particular attention is being paid to the strokes. Now that the freshman football season has come to a close, many more men will probably try for places.

At the present time, H. M. Wilson, member of last year's year's team, is in charge of the pool. No definite schedule has been arranged, but several meets will be held.

The church has a right to have the final say about education in this country because it is the mother of it. Rev. Russel S. Brown.

sees to be taking after his older brother, who plays for Citadel, and may even do better with a little more experience. This boy shows promise of being an outstanding back next year.

The Hose outcharged the Erskine line during the second half, after looking pretty bad in the first. The play of the ends was outstanding, especially on the defensive. Waldrop showed that he was playing a heads-up game by intercepting two passes, one of which he returned for a touchdown. Yearout continued his fine playing, at one time fighting off two interferers and reaching over them to throw the runner for a ten-yard loss. His play all year has been of all-state calibre.

In the backfield Bolick was outstanding. His slashing drives off tackle were things of beauty. While he was in the game, Holiday was a stalwart on the defence, smacking down the Erskine ball carriers with consistency at the line of scrimmage.

Weir, Leonard and Whiteside were the most outstanding backs for Erskine. The two ends, Mann and Bolton, played exceptional games. Mann, who got out of bed to play, was the outstanding defensive player on the field.

The line-ups:

Erskine		Presbyterian
LE	Mann	Yearout
LT	Leonard, T.	Wilson
LG	Austin	Horne
C	Patrick	Harvin
RG	Barton	Boggs
RT	Rogers	Sims
RE	Bolton	Waldrop
QB	Bussey	Wilbanks
RH	Whiteside	Perrin
LH	Leonard, R.	Quarterman
FB	Whitten	Holliday

Officials: Ison (U. N. C.) umpire; Whalen (U. N. C.) referee; Speer (Furman), headlinesman.

Court Aspirants At Early Practice

Coach Lonnie S. McMillian has already issued a call for basketball men and a large number are reporting for practice. These men, and others who will be added to the squad at the end of the football season, will make up a squad that will well represent Presbyterian college on the hardwood floor. Practices are being held in the gymnasium each Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday, from 7 until 8 p. m.

The following men from last year's squad are reporting at the regular practices: Collins, Lynn, Levi, Holcomb, Bradley, Potter, Beatty, and Adams.

Several freshmen are also working out with these men who will be candidates for the rat team.

Boxers To Start Regular Work Soon

The boxing room resounds each day with the sound of leather against leather, as prospective members of the boxing team get their preliminary training. It will be remembered that P. C.'s team last year was one of the best in the state, and carried away many honors. The men are already working hard for places and prospects are that the competition will be keen. No schedule has as yet been announced but several exhibitions will be held, both here and at other colleges.

Th whole squad has not yet begun regular practice, but several candidates have started training.

Harry Bolick, light-heavy, is captain of the leather-pushers.

Coach Lonnie McMillian, whose freshman footballers finished up a fairly successful season with an impressive win over Wofford's first-year team last week. The Blue Sox season record shows three wins and two losses. Clemson and Carolina defeated the Calvinists ,while Citadel, Wofford and Newberry lost decisions to the Hose.

Yearlings Trim Wofford Handily

Presbyterian Freshmen Win Impressively Over Wofford, 51-0. Terrier Pups Outclassed. Sox End Season Brilliantly.

A powerful Presbyterian freshman team ran roughshod over the Wofford first-year men Thursday afternoon to defeat them 51-0. Presbyterian registered 11 first downs to Wofford's five.

The first touchdown came early in the first quarter after the Sox had recovered a Wofford fumble on the Wofford 20-yard stripe. Harvin made eight yards over the left side of the line and Abbott carried the ball over. Thompson kicked goal to add the point.

In the second period Oxley intercepted a Terrier pass and raced 23 yards to within scoring distance. Harvin took the ball over and Thompson's try for goal was again good. Soon after the kick-off Abbott ticked off 19 yards around end for the third tally. The half ended with the score 20-0 in favor of the Blue Sox.

On the opening kick-off after the half-time rest preiod Abbott crossed the goal taking the ball on his own 10-yard line and sprinting 90 yards for the score. A few minutes later, P. C. recovered a Wofford fumble and soon thereafter, Garland passed to Harvin for 18 yards. Several plays later Oxley took the ball over center for the touchdown. Then Oxley scored again only a few minutes later after Garland had placed the ball on the 10-yard line. The try for point failed.

In the fourth quarter Abbott snatched a P. C. pass and took the ball to Wofford's 13. Another pass, Garland to Montgomery, was good for the touchdown. Bird blocked a Wofford punt on the Terriers' own 20-yard marker and Evans went around end for the last score. Many in the stands thought that a safety had been scored late in the final period, but the play was really a touchback and did not count in the scoring.

For Wofford, Barnwell and Ross, in the line, were outstanding. The entire Presbyterian line was a bulwark of strength, with Garland, Abbott, and Oxley doing exceptional work in the backfield.

With this game the Sox complete their schedule, having won three games and lost two. In their first game of the season they lost to Carolina frosh by one point, and later to Clemson by a single touchdown. The team is composed of some excellent men who will make strong bids for places on the varsity next year.

The starting line-up is as follows:

Physical Training Program Success

Under the direction of Coach Walter Johnson, the department of physical education at Presbyterian college has instituted an excellent program of athletic training. All students are required to participate in at least one activity three hours a week. As a result, many new men have increased five to twenty pounds in weight since entering school. This schedule of training was begun the first of the year and is now running smoothly.

The different sports open to men, other than the regular athletic teams, are: Tennis, swimming, boxing, track and basketball.

THE COLLEGIAN

Our literary magazine, which has scarcely existed for the last two or three years, is generally regarded on the campus as a thing of unimportance. The student body has shown a definite lack of interest, not only in offering material for publication, but in giving it fair support. This disinterestedness is apparently prevalent also in the administration, for regular appropriation has been stricken off the budget. Due to such circumstances the magazine has achieved no standard of real value.

This is a fact to be lamented. The few students who have given The Collegian their full support and cooperation regret the fact that it is published so rarely, and is valued so little by the college. By all rights it should be an active force, and should be given a fair-sized chance by a place in the college budget for student activities. In other colleges of the state the literary magazine is considered equally as important as the school newspaper. A majority of them have issues once a month. It must be considered, however, that as a school, we are small in comparison to those schools. But even so, we should be able to have a literary publication at least four times a year. That plan would require, of course, a fixed amount of money from the college.

Recently we have noticed more interest than has been shown before. We may possibly attribute that to the present editor, but whoever or whatever is responsible, we are delighted to see the change. We sincerely hope that The Collegian will come to be more than just a "half way" annual publication. Let's give it our whole support and make a worthwhile thing that can be regarded with something like pride.

[illegible] University must hand in their pictures with their themes so the professor will know whose work he is grading.

A SOLOIST

The visitors from the Hose-Coming was greatly impressed with the performance of the college band at the football game in the afternoon. Many compliments were heard on the playing and the formation during the half.

During the intermission the band [illegible] was formed into a "P" [illegible] Alma Mater was being played the formation was impressive.

The music organization this year is the best in many years, and much of the credit for its commendable showing is due its leader, K. E. Mills. Mills has had charge of the band for the past three years and the organization has improved steadily under his direction. The formation at the recent game was worked out by him. Although it looked simple enough, there [illegible] a great amount of work involved [illegible] a new formation a band "P" [illegible] the music itself [illegible] [illegible] was performed. Very rarely is a formation of that kind attempted by a unit so small in number and much less often is it done so effectively.

While detracting not at all from the credit due the director, it would hardly be right not to hand a bouquet to the "privates." The boy who holds a horn and gives the right toot at the proper time is responsible for the showing made by the organization as a whole, and there are many such in the band now.

Real musicians comprise the excellent musical organization of which P. C. now boasts.

ANTI-SEMITISM

The Jewish problem the world over is indeed a critical one today. It is so difficult for the other races to understand their position since this outbreak of anti-Semitism. Anti-Semitism was not so prevalent prior to Hitler's election in Germany. Since then the idea has permeated over many nations of which America is no exception. In the newspapers may be noted small articles concerning the formations of several groups in sympathy with anti-Judism.

It is hard to believe that in this country where everyone is supposedly equal and free that such organizations would be started or thought of—much less tolerated. It endangers peace and threatens that form of democracy which has long been the pride of American citizens. It should be the motive of all citizens to bring about and maintain harmony among all races in this nation—the melting pot.

(It might be of interest to note here that a Catholic priest, a rabbi, and a Presbyterian clergyman are touring the country to promote better understanding among Catholics, Jews, and Protestants. Their tour is under the auspices of the National Conference of Jews and Christians of which Newton D. Baker is chairman).

At the beginning of this movement against the Jews in Germany, the laboring class of Jews in America became indignant and wished to demonstrate against this outbreak. They found leadership and in masses displayed their sympathy with the Jews under the Nazi persecution. This continued until the leaders became too professional. The Jews are decidedly against racial professionalism; therefore they deserted.

Their fight is for social freedom. They have no homeland of their own. Palestine means very little to them for it is too Arabic. They have settled in various other lands and made homes. One has but to look around and investigate to know that some of the finest citizens are Hebrew. They love the land of their homes and make better citizens than other immigrants for they have no ties back in another land. Distinctly their purpose is not just to protect their race from the maniacal outbursts of narrow government.

The Jews are against Hitler not only because of his persecution of the Semitic race but because they are for the civil rights of democracy. They are opposed to war and all it incurs —militarism—"war hysteria" or better known as false patriotism. They are against a system where a secret police can arrest and hold a person without trial. They are for free education for that half of the German people who voted against Hitler.

Any true American citizen should appreciate what the Jews have done for this nation and extend his sympathies to them in their fight for social freedom.

WORLD'S STAGE

By Walker Combs, Jr.

Just this past week, as the Philippine legislature ended its business, it rushed through a bill at the last minute granting woman suffrage. The action met with praise from the present Governor General, Frank Murphy, a former mayor of Detroit, as an act which will do much to promote the social and cultural (as well as political) welfare of the Philippines.

That was good news. But immediately after the act became known, several women leaders began to cast their eyes upon political spoils, and it was stated that some were expected to seek public office in the next elections.

Most of us have forgotten that there was ever a war between Paraguay and Bolivia. It is still being carried on after a fashion, after over a year; but hope is still held for a peaceful settlement, so say leading Bolivians and Paraguayans.

In the meantime, cabinets rise and fall in both countries, with the one now in power in Bolivia expected to lay down its duties at any moment.

Machado, recently exiled president of Cuba, according to a report last week, is in Montreal. Although it is agreed that Cuba was much too warm for him, no one would expect him to winter in Canada. It seems the shock of change would not work well with him.

However, he seems to be in no hurry to leave. "He might be here all winter. We don't know," said his spokesman.

His permit expires Nov. 28, and as yet no extension has been granted. What he will do if it is not renewed cannot be foretold, and of course you, or anyone else, will not be interested.

From Germany comes the report that even Protestant preachers have been ousted by the Nazi. Those preachers, who have suffered under the new regulations, are those of Aryan blood, whose ancestry can be rtaced back to Jews.

No regulation has been made upon those not of Jewish blood, but who have married Jews. But it is time that the Germans stopped this foolishness, or even the most broad-minded Americans may become prejudiced against them.

But all on the World Stage is not the blare of war trumpets or the rumbling of revolution. Scientists are still pursuing their way, to prove that the world is something or other, or that man is not the great animal he thinks himself to be.

The ship which is to carry Lincoln Ellsworth, who plans a flight over the Antaretic, the one great achievement which awaits an adventurer, has arrived at Dunedin, In New Zealand. This port has seen the arrival and departure of many Antarctic expeditions, such as those headed by Amundsen, Scott, Shackleton and Wawson.

The ship will remain about a month before setting out for the South pole, during which time it will be overhauled and outfitted for the expedition.

And again, the Peking man makes his appearance. More fossils have been discovered in the cave where he was first found. Dr. Davidson Black, paleontologist, recently revealed the discovery of skeletal remains, including two nearly complete skulls of modern man and a variety of cultural evidences, consisting of flint and quartz implements.

Dr. Black said that at another point in the caves were fossils of an extinct species of baboon, whatever that proves. The theory he advanced is that the "Choukoutien fishures were successively inhabited by baboons, by Sinothrapus (Pekin Man) and by a modern type man."

But it is all pure theory, gentlemen, all pure theory.

Hearing politicians and other such propagandists, who fill the air with their clamorings, reminds one of two quotations:

"Wit talks most, when least she has to say," and "Wit is common, wisdom rare."

Think it over.

COLLEGIATE COMMENT

TOO MANY CLUBS

Some weeks ago when we praised the formation by Xavier college of an honor society recognizing outstanding students who participated in extra-curricular activities and maintained excellent scholastic averages, we were queried by a member of the faculty: "You aren't advocating the formation of another club on this campus, for goodness' sake?"

We are not.

We have been aware, for some time, of the fact that there are entirely too many clubs and societies on the campus. There seems to be a club for every student.

If conditions warranted their existence we would be the last to assail them. But conditions do not justify their operation.

We are not advocating abolition, though there are a few cases in which abolition would be heartily welcomed by this publication. Many of the clubs contain in their membership capable men who are performing a distinct service to both the University and themselves.

Nevertheless, the fact remains that there is too much duplication. There are, for instance, three service clubs on the campus attempting to do the same thing. We grant there is much that can be done by these clubs. Yet some of the three do not seem to be able to accomplish any of the needed and worthwhile work which they could accomplish.

Lacking the originality to conceive of activities which do not encroach on the work of some other organization, several clubs have been busying themselves attempting to steal the thunder of clubs which have been engaged in a particular activity for several years. We have in mind, for instance, the welcoming of visiting athletic teams. Also, one organization has proceeded to take over the duties of the cheer leaders and band—without their permission.

What should be done about it? Should clubs, duplicating the work of some other, be abolished?

We are not in favor or abolition as a solution. What we would like to see is merging of clubs duplicating the work of each other. Of course there are obstacle to this procedure. There is, for instance, the human element and the element of vanity within the human element. Members of clubs ambitious for offices would fight tooth and nail any attempt to abolish their organizations. Students also like to see a long list of activities following their names in their senior section of the Pandora.

We do not expect to see these clubs do anything of their own initiative. But if the present situation continues, we do expect to see a great many so-called "honor" and "service" organizations on this campus abolished and others merged whether the organizations like it or not. And that action is not coming from within. It is coming from without—and from up.—Red and Black (U. of Ga.)

THE COLLEGE OF THE FUTURE

"The liberal arts college is the college of the future." These words spoken by Dr. Bruce Curry at the Vesper service last Sunday strike a distinctly encouraging note in a period which is characterized by specialization in all fields. Medicine, engineering, and other professions have been divided and sub-divided until the "plain" doctor or the "plain" engineer is almost unknown. Specialization gives greater opportunities for research, undoubtedly, but its value for the average person is dubious.

That students feel that certain fields are overcrowded is shown by the distinct trend away from technical and engineering study. These courses have suffered an enrollment drop at Purdue, Cornell, and the University of Colorado. In relation to this Registrar Fred F. Aden of the last institution mentioned says, "The students seem to be seeking a more versatile course such as that in business." The past few years have been critical ones for people of college age. Many who have wanted and needed higher education have not been able to attain it and those who have entered college have come with the determination to get the most out of it that they can. The realization that college is not merely a place to train for a profession but rather a laboratory in which to learn to live as a world citizen has come into being.

With this realization has come a change in curriculum or at least a change in emphasis. While the social sciences—history, economics and sociology—cannot be called outgrowths of anything so recent as the depression, yet the increased interest and enrollment in these departments in the past few years points to the awakened spirit of American youth. History has always been considered valuable as a guide in government because it points out the errors of the past. Perhaps the only fault lies in the fact that parallel situations are not always recognized as such because of the difference in background.

In 1907, when economics and sociology were first offered at Hood as electives for seniors, 10 members of the class of 1908 took the course in economics and the sociology course was not chosen by anyone. At the present time there are 70 economics and 56 sociology students. The enrollment of the college has, of course, increased during these 26 years, but the influence of the economic and social internationalism of the twentieth century cannot fail to be observed in these figures. Many students who are not majors in the social science departments take on or more courses in the field as a background for understanding life problems. That there should be such an increase in interest in these subjects in women's colleges seems natural in view of the popular belief that women are educated that they may serve while men are trained to earn. Hence, the poverty of most women's colleges!

However, to serve is the highest ideal that anyone, especially a trained person, may have; and if, through the study of the social sciences, men and woman will be equipped to deal with situations such as we face today, the liberal arts college will have proved itself one of the most valuable elements of modern life.—The Blue and Grey (Hood College).

"WHY EGGS ARE POINTED AT ONE END"

As Told by William Throckmorton Jones, III. Bart.
TO FRANK JOHNSTON

Chapter I

One day while I was idly strolling through the hall of statuary in the great museum of ———, I chanced upon the strange character, William Throckmorton Jones, and before the years have erased from my memory the tale he told, I think it only fair that I should pass the story on to you.

As I chanced to pass near one of the obscure corners of the hall I noticed this strange man. He was a very scholarly looking chap and one had only to look at him to know that this man was no ordinary person, but one who had seen the strange places of this world. He was standing by a colossal statue of the old oracle of Delphi, with a far-away dreamy look on his face, as if he were seeing through this great and noble work a procession of the gods passing. I walked up to where he was standing.

He seemed to take no notice of me at first but suddenly he turned and said, "I see, my friend, that you also are interested in the beautiful. I often come and stand before this figure and dream and think, and wonder if she has seen the same terrible things that I have seen.

"There is no use for me to talk with men for they have never believed the tale I tell, and they laugh when I tell of the greatest experience that ever came to mortal man. I have appeared before the Royal Scientific Society with my story, of which group I was formerly a member; but when I told them, they laughed at me. Throckmorton Jones, the greatest scientist that ever lived, the man who controls the heavens, and who causes the nations of the earth to fall at his feet."

By this time, you may be sure, I was convinced that I was in the presence of a raving fool, but he would give me no opportunity to leave. He drew me over in a corner and said, "Are you by any chance interested in science, my friend? Well, if you are not, it will not be amiss to tell you my little tale."

There was nothing I could do but listen, and the tale I heard from the lips of that strange and striking figure I now pass on to you. .

Throckmorton seated himself with one hand upon a bust of the Baron Munchausen and began.

"In the spring of 898, when I was doing graduate work at the University of Munich, I was working under the guidance of Herr Reichstag. He was extremely interested in the construction of a new form of plane and was constantly at work on what he considered would revolutionize air travel, which was at that time in its earliest infancy. I was a great favorite of old Reichstag's and he used to tell me that our names would go down in history—his because of his great work, and mine because he intended to take me on the first flight.

In the spring of 900 our great labor was drawing to a close. The first tests had exceeded our wildest dreams and our first public flight was to be made the next day.

There were people crowded from miles around to see the "go-devil" as it had been dubbed by the scoffers, and we were expecting of give them a great demonstration. We mounted into the cabin of the Nasturtium (so named in honor of Lady Nasturtium Pemberton, who was the financial backer of old "Reichy"), and the professor gave the signal to cast off. We climbed steadily for about two hours; and when I looked over the side, the earth was far below.

I went up to the controls where old Reichstag was sitting and heard him murmur, "It's too late to turn back now. I shall go on to see my friend, St. John."

On hearing these words and seeing the wild look in Reichstag's eyes, I fell into a dead faint because of the great fear I felt upon the realization that I was alone in the upper reaches of the earth's atmosphere with a lunatic who contemplated a journey to a [illegible]

Present Day Science

Charles E. Carson

"Glorious celestrial display tonight." Did you see anything like that in the papers last Wednesday and Thursday? Much talk and numerous write-ups heralded the earth's annual trip through the zone of the Leonids. Astronomers expected a good meteoric shower this year, but those who watched didn't need an umbrella to keep dry. Many people were greatly disappointed by the small number they saw as compared with those they expected to see.

A certain time each year the earth crosses the orbit of a group of meteors which apparently, and only apparently, shootin all directions away from the constellation Leo. These, therefore, are called the Leonid swarm. It has been observed in the past that the number of these meteors seen was greater every 33 years than in intervening years. From past observation, then, a large group was anticipated this November, but the hoped-for event was disappointing.

What is a meteor? Has anyone ever seen one? What we see in the sky is, of course, light resulting from extreme heat produced by friction in their passage through our atmosphere. Technically, a meteor always burns up and never hits the ground, for when it does it is called a meteorite. Is a meteor then the same as the meteorite we occasionally find on the earth's surface, the difference being only one of terminology? Some scientists think so. Also there are those who believe that the meteorite is matter from beyond the solar system, while the meteor is local matter always within our own sun-family. This last is not always easy to believe. Anyway, from what we know of these heavenly bodies, we may classify them into three groups according to composition: first the iron, second the stony-iron, and third the stone. In the ordinary meteor we see, there is very little material even though there be a great flare of light. The average is a piece of matter about the size of a grain of wheat with the weight of one grain (1/30 of an ounce). However, there has been found a meteorite which weighs 36 tons, so we see that their weights vary considerably.

It has been found that all the rays of the sun will go through quartz, and that light through quartz receives a loss of only eight per cent as compared with a 35 per cent loss through optical glass. Also light will travel along, or in, a piece of curved quartz. As a result of this, Dr. Silverman, of the University of Pittsburgh, suggests that some day sunlight may be conducted through quartz from the tropics and give us warm weather even in the winter. Also he suggests that we may bring light at night from the Orient and use sunlight for night illumination.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO BE A FOOTBALL REFEREE

M. J. ("MIKE") THOMPSON, FAMOUS FOOTBALL REFEREE

IF YOU WANT TO SEE nerve strain, look at "Mike" Thompson's job—refereeing two tons of football brawn. "Mike" Thompson has been a steady smoker for years. "I'm open-minded on cigarettes," he says, "but I've got to keep my nerves in shape, so I stick to Camels."

A MATCHLESS BLEND

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW
Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

M. J. ("Mike") Thompson, football's most famous referee, has to keep his nerves healthy. He says:

"Because nothing can be allowed to interfere with healthy nerves I smoke Camels. I have tried them all—given every popular brand a chance to show what it can offer. Camels don't upset my nerves even when I smoke constantly. And the longer I smoke them, the more I come to appreciate their mildness and rich flavor."

Many smokers who have changed to Camels report that their nerves are no longer irritable..."jumpy." Switch to Camels yourself. You will find that Camels do not jangle your nerves—or tire your taste.

GREAT SEASON, BLUE HOSE!

Four P. C. Men End Football Careers Saturday

CAPT BOB SIMMS—TACKLE OR BACK—

Capt. Bob Sims, tackle for the Blue Hose for the past season, who played his last game against Catawba.

End Season With Catawba Victory

casions Tolbert knocked down passes from the hands of Catawba backs which the alert Boggs recovered. Reeder was playing at his old position of backing up the line.

The game was the last of the season for the Blue Stockings and ended the football careers of several P. C. stars. Seniors who saw their last action in this contest are: J. L. Wilson and B. A. Robinson, tackles; and B. ". Redmond, back. Bob Sims, captain, was in uniform but did not participate. He was hurt in the Erskine game last week and was kept on the bench because of injuries.

It was the only game during the season that Sims did not start. He remained quietly on the bench during the greater part of the game, but near the end when the coaches were sending in many substitutes, he got up, anxious to get in the struggle. But the coach would not run the risk of aggravating the injuries that the giant captain had already received. So the battling P. C. leader who has been the bulwark of the Blue Hose defense in every game, watched from the sidelines with tear-dimmed eyes while his teammates fought to victory.

The work in the line of "Big" Robinson was outstanding. It was Robby's final time to play in a Presbyterian uniform, and he ended his career in a blaze of tackling ferocity that made Catawba ball carriers wish they hadn't. Many followers of the team classed his work today as the best of three years varsity competition.

Annual Intramural Pigskin Fiasco Begins This Week

Home Guards Tangle With "C" Company In Opening Struggle Tomorrow. Band To Lock Horns With "A" Company Next Week. Five Teams Entered In Tournament.

The time for the annual campaign of R. O. T. C. football has rolled around and this year will find five teams on the field of battle instead of four. The band, which has been made a separate unit this year, will put out a team. They will be at slight disadvantage, because of their lack of numbers. But they will put a scrappy litle outfit on the field.

Last year's champions, "C" Company, is favored to repeat again this year. However, its chances of winning are dimmed by the loss of C. N. Plowden and Jimmie Seagle from the backfield. Plowden will be playing for "B" Company and Seagle will be on the team from "A."

"C" Company is the only one yet to give out their first string line. From nearly forty candidates, the following line-up will be presented: Ends, Jordan and Whooten; tackles, Yow and Arnold; guards, Ratchford and Rhodes; center, Langston; quarterback, Wyman; right half, Winget; left half, Walters; fullback, J. Wilson. This team is one of the heaviest yet seen in R. O. T. C. football.

There has been some talk of the Home Guards putting out a championship outfit. Nothing is known at the present time of their line-up but it will be good. They will feel the loss of Frampton who was their best backfield threat last year. As usual, the Army will be gunning for the Home Guards.

There has been some discussion about eligibility rules, but the Blue Stocking has it straight from Captain Wysor that each team will be allowed one man who made his Freshman numerals. No other man who has played football on the varsity or has made his Freshman numerals will be allowed to play.

The first game will be played on Tuesday, Nov. 28, between the Home Guards and "C" Company. This is usually one of the best games of the series and there is no need to urge the student body to come out to see it. They'll be there. The second game will be played on the Monday following Thanksgiving between "A" Company and the Band. "B" Company drew a bye and will not play until later.

For those who do not view the clashes, there will be a complete description of the games in the following issues of the Blue Stocking.

SPORT SHOTS

The game with Erskine on Friday brought relief to one of the Blue Stockings weak departments in the form of Lee Quarterman. That boy shows prospects of developing into a great kicker. Better watch him next year.

The time for All-state selections is drawing near. In picking this team, there are two Blue Stockings who should merit a place on any man's team, Reeder and Yearout. These two boys have not only played consistent ball all year but also brilliant ball. We think that they are better than anything in the state on the defense and just as good as any on the offense. Higbe is one of the best running backs in the state but he has been a marked man all season, and this makes his chances for all-state slim.

Now that this season is nearly over, in fact it will be over when the paper comes out, we can't help looking forward to next year. The season promises to be a great battle with Howard [illegible] and Wofford on the list. But we'll only have [illegible] to lose and a bunch of good [illegible]

Pi Kappa Phi Pledges Four

Pi Kappa Phi, social fraternity, announces the pledging of four men last week. This number includes T. H. Wingate, editor The Blue Stocking; Frank Guess, managing editor of The Blue Stocking; Cecil Lawter, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and Henry Dillard, a member of the business staff of the weekly paper.

All these men with the exception of Wingate, are juniors. Wingate is a member of the senior class and a recent pledge of Blue Key, national leadership fraternity.

material coming up, there is no reason why P. C. should not make an excellent showing against its opponents and perhaps come back to win the S. I. A. A. championship which hasn't been with us for quite a while.

A new backfield luminary has been discovered recently in the form of "Pudge" Plowden. All the members of the team say that he is one of the hardest men to stop they have ever seen. And with the loss of a few pounds to increase his speed, he should be a very valuable addition to the team next year. Mills and Millsap will be in there with Plowden next year, too.

It takes real school spirit to do what one man did this year. He gave up his position in the backfield and a very bright prospect for the Jacob's trophy this year to fill in a weak position in the line. All praise and respect for this man. It's that kind of stuff that puts this school where it is in athletic ranking. All for one and one for all.

Redmond, Wilson, Sims, Robinson Sing Swan Song

Three Years of Varsity Competition Brought To Close By Players In North Carolina Saturday. Absence Will Be Felt By Team Next Season.

With the playing of Catawba on Saturday, four members of the Presbyterian football squad of 1933 closed their careers. These men are Captain Sims, Redmond, Robinson and Wilson.

Sims is one of the most versatile players ever to graduate from P. C. Until this year, he played in the backfield at the fullback position. Last year, on offense, he was always a sure bet for yardage when the line had to be cracked open. He did most of the kicking and mixed in a little passing on the side. His blocking ranked among the best in the state and he was prominently mentioned last year for the Jacobs trophy. This year he was shifted to the line because of a weakness at tackle position. On defense, he came into the backfield position and backed up the line as defensive fullback.

Robinson, who has played at tackle all this year, was handicapped last season by a broken collar bone. But this year he has been in every game and his play in the line has been outstanding.

Because of his lack of weight, Redmond did not see much service until this year. In the Erskine game he was outstanding, making some of the prettiest runs of the game.

Wilson had not seen much service until this season, but he has been in there all year, smashing 'em up at the tackle position.

The absence of these men from the team next year will be felt.

YOU ARE NOW LIVING

The purpose of a college education [illegible] successful living in all its aspects. Many people have the mistaken idea that all a student learns in college comes from between book covers—unless it be bad habits.

The truth is that no normal man can learn enough from books alone to lead a life full of well rounded activity. The college student is not only preparing for life, but he is also actually living during his preparation. This is an important consideration when one plans his college career. He should consider not only the future but the present as well for the chances are that if one continues putting off things that he likes to do and which bring happiness to him, he will finally become so accustomed to procrastination that he is afraid of definite action.

With all the earnestness we can command, we exhort college students to consider the university a community in which they are citizens; that there are duties and responsibilities to be considered in college just as surely as in post-graduate life. Perhaps the campus is an artificiltly created community but nevertheless it provides the same—or perhaps even greater—opportunities for leadership and distinction as any city. If one will only notice, he can not fail to see types of college students reflected in every-day life.

In a nutshell, "What you are to be, you are now becoming." But don't forget that you are now living. — The Alabama Crimson and White.

YOUTH . . . AND WAR

To the students of Presbyterian College:

This is how other student bodies respond to the cry of "war."

What do you think about it? After, all, you know, it is upon the younger generation as to what the nation does about war in the future. Today, it is the greatest problem confronting the youth of America.

"Wellesley, Mass. A group of Wellesley college girls carried anti-war placards at the annual Armistice Day services on Wellesley Green. American Legion officials expressde indignation.

"Commander Frank o'Gilvie of the Wellesley Legion post said that students violated a town ordinance by pardaing without a permit and that he and other citizens looked with disapproval upon the appearance of the girls at the ceremony."

"Cambridge, England. Police drew their truncheons to deal with a demonstration by the students "No More War" organizations. Men and women carrying banners were pelted with eggs and tomatoes as they paraded."

Sir Philip Gibbs writing editorially for the New York Times on the present delightful prospects for another world war places great emphasis on these aroused student groups.

"These elder minds—those who are thinking in terms of pre-war mentality and believe that when they give the orders to march their people will obey. I am not so sure of that. . . . It is possible that when the commanders issue their recruiting papers there will not be the same rally of youth as in the days of August, 1914.

"Certainly in England there is a strong pacifist movement led by youth itself, and cutting across all social strata. I know some of those young men who shocked their elders — deliberately — by that vote at Oxford in which they repudiated refusal to fight for king and country.

"What they had in their minds, said my personal enemy, was a refusal to be dragooned into war by old organs such as the famous motto issued by Kitchener . . . Your King and Country Need You' when the action of old statesmen, obsessed by fears or believing war to be an admirable discipline for youth, would lead, most likely, to the utter ruin of the country and to the downfall of the king. They refuse to be bound by secret treaties . . . or to ancient pledges made by old gentlemen . . . who, in their opinion ought to be dead and buried.

". . . There is of course a lot of youthful braggadocio about these gestures of defiance. . . But what is very serious and quite important is the belief of large numbers of young men and women . . . that mechanized and chemical warfare in whatever cause is a betrayal of civilized ideals, and that the intelligence of the modern mind is capable of abandoning that way of argument if the old men will only die off before they have quite arranged the new inevitable war. . . . "

Adults who are shamefacedly and resignedly "giving themselves up" to the thought of another world war may take a bit of breath, if the student group, on which the success of any democracy helping war depends are putting their objections to the fore so dramatically.

Such movements as the White Feather movement in England and the results of the American college poll by the National Student Federation of America indicate all too clearly student sentiment on the matter, at least in two countries.

The White Feather group is composed of young men who distribute white feathers and wear them as badges of courage because they are convinced of plots afoot to jockey them by appeals to false sentiment into war against people with whom they wish to link up in a comradeship of youth determined to make a decent kind of world.

The N. S. F. A. poll showed students predominently pacifist in attitude. A ridiculously small number declared themselves in favor of fighting it out like a bunch of children on a street corner.

Whether this youth movement can gain any headway against the already organized war sentiment, German propaganda and upcropping of other history repeating incidents is of course impossible to predict.

WORLD'S STAGE

By Walker Combs, Jr.

A very interesting discovery recently was the unearthing of certain clay tablets in the vicinity of Ras Shamra, on the coast of Asia Minor. Although excavations have been going on there for the past three years, it is only recently that the cuneiform writing on these tablets have been deciphered and their meaning brought to light.

Dating from between 1400 to 1350 B. C., they were written about the time Joshua led the children of Israel into Palestine. And besides, they deal with the anceint Hebrew religion and law, shedding light upon the origin of the Pentateuch.

Sir Charles Marston, an English archaeologist, who has been studying these, which even at that early date were written in an alphabet of twenty-seven letter, finds the evidence that Moses wrote the Pentateuch almost indisputable. Plans of the tabernacle, as well as the sacrifices of the Hebrews are mentioned. In some of the tablets the Hebrews are mentioned as coming into the country, identified as Palestine, and also there is a mention of Adam, "the man from the east," just as his location is described in the second chapter of Genesis.

One of the strongest arguments against Moses' authorship of the Pentateuch was that there was no alphabetical writing in his time. These tablets, as well as some found in the region of Sinai, definitely establish that such alphabetical writing did exist; it was an adoption of the Babylonian cuneiform writnig, containing twenty-seven letters.

For ages men have directed their talents in order to disestablish the authority of the Bible, but always there are new discoveries which bear out the authenticity of the Scriptures. Not all of these tablets have been deciphered, and the meanings of others have not yet been revealed; but when they are, it is very likely that they will prove helpful in establishing and explaining certain portions of the Old Testament.

THE GREAT POWER-HOUSE

"Where does the sun get enough heat to give so much light and warmth to the earth?" Have you ever wondered? The sun gives off so much light-energy that if we could provide it with a layer of ice five hundred feet in thickness, its heat struggling to get through would melt the entire coating in about ten minutes, and within an hour convert the mass of water into steam. What an enormous amount of energy this must take!

And this is contiuous, no stopping, no letting up, just giving out energy day after day, year after year, century after century. A great power-house it must be. What is its source?

At present there are two theories regarding stellar energy. (The sun is merely an average star, so that in discussing the sun we are including all other stars as well). One of these theories, upheld by Dr. R. A. Millikan, considers the transmutation of hydrogen into more complex elements. For example, suppose four atoms of hydrogen, whose atomic weight is 1.008, were transmuted into one helium atom, with an atomic weight of 4.000 (which is possible), we find that .032 of the mass of hydrogen has completely disappeared. We account for this by saying that it has been turned into radiactive energy. In other words, we are combining four atoms of hydrogen and getting one atom of helium and having something left over. If such takes place in the sun, that "left-over" is the energy we get in light and heat.

The other theory is that advanced by Sir J. H. Jeans, in which matter is annihilated and results in radiation. Conditions are such at the interior of the sun that two atoms may ru[illegible] together with a force which will completely destroy them, and send a wave-motion through the star to the outside and continue on as radiation. If this is true, then the weight of the energy must equal the weight of the annihilated atoms, and by measuring the radiation energy we may know how much matter was destroyed. This calculation shows that the sun sends out four million tons of energy every second; that is, the sun is losing weight at the rate of four million tons per second. That means that tomorrow the sun will weigh 350,000 tons less than it does today. This seems loose of energy, to be an enormous amount of weight, but the sun is so large that it still can exist under these conditions for millions of millions of years.

The last theory, incidentally, is more widely held than the first. Either way, the sun is a great power-house of energy.

On Advertising

Advertising had its earliest recorded use in ancient civilization. Description of runaway slaves and proffered rewards for their return, written on papyri more than three thousand years ago, have been uncovered in the ruins of Thebes. The Romans made no small use of advertising. Professional men publicly offered their services on the walls of their houses. The problem of how best to sell, trade, or barter a product, has been one of great interest and importance to the human race. And hand in hand with this problem of selling we have advertising. They are in integral part of each other, and absolutely necessary. In this way, advertising has always been with us in some shape or form. Some of it has been good, some bad, and practically all of it has been efficient.

So far as advertising is relied upon for information, it may be said to be fundamental and integrating the specialized units of our productive system.

In America today we have the most efficient advertising the world has ever known. It is also the most offensive. Truly, so far as advertising goes, we have fallen upon evil days. The great Barnum has been dead many years, but his spirit still walks among us. And the trend that modern advertising has taken seems to prove conclusively that he was right. There is born one every minute and it has been proved beyond a doubt that the American public likes to be fooled. For the advertisements of today are marked by the most conspicuous forms of charlatanism. In addition they are, for the most part, offensive to good taste. A brief survey of any of the recent periodicals will prove this statement. It appears that the modern advertising man is systematically fostering fear as an inducement to buying. And the real tragedy of it all is that it sells the product. This last statement is most significant.

There is no need in pointing out that this present trend is highly regrettable. The average person of normal intellect has realized it long since. The wish of many is to do away with advertising entirely. As I have pointed out before, this is, of course, impossible. Nor is it desirable. What we need is not abolition of advertising but its rehabilitation and reformation.

Advertising in the real sense of the word is, or should be, nothing but the scattering of truth. That is its chief aim and excuse for being. Even modern advertising has its defenders. To prove that it has its drawbacks and disadvantages is nothing. There is, of course, more bunk in advertising than in law or medicine, but successful advertising needs not be dependent on this bunk.

In case of respectable advertising, the answer is yes. In fact, in the first place it is a definite spur to improvement. Not only does it supply a demand but it creates one. Many of our modern improvements can be traced back to the influence of advertising. Not only is this true, but the necessity of living up to his advertising lifts the manufacturer to new levels.

So I hold that advertising is not only absolutely necessary, but that it may be beneficial in the extreme. A decided reformation must be undergone. Stuart Chase, in his bitter attack, The Tragedy of Waste, suggests as a remedy the restriction of advertising to something like one tenth its present volume the administration of that ten per cent to be governed by an impartial scientific body. This seems a satisfactory remedy. But it also has about it a Utopian air.

H. A. Bratten, himself an ad man, has suggested a fair simpler method. He believes that the most sensible solution to the problem is an organized drive against vulgar and detrimental advertising by the intellectual masses of the United States. As long as the present methods bring results, they will remain in use. When they are no longer effective, a return to ethical advertising may be expected.

Letters to the Editor

STARCH

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

After leaving the dining hall today Friday, I had an idea that I knew exactly how a starched collar feels. I had just got up from the dinner "meal" and was feeling rather hungry. The outlay of food had consisted of rice (the old stand-by), potatoes, meat (?), biscuits, gravy, tea, water and a corn-starch dessert. In other words, starch, starch, starch, starch with a little bit of fat and protein. However, the fat and protein were quite camouflaged with starch.
